Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

C. B.—In reply to your questions about my colt, I will answer them in rotation:

My colt has been driven some, but not thoroughly broke. It was in breaking him that he strained himself.

He goes lamer down hill than up hill.

He goes very lame trotting, and you could hardly notice it walking.

He does not go any lamer, turning round.

He does not drag the leg when backing.

The farther you drive him the lamer he gets, and goes worse on hard ground than on soft.

I can't find any ringbone or any blemish on his leg, but I think his shoulder must be hurt.

He first went lame when I was trotting him fast on a down grade. He gave a kind of stumble, and then went a little lame. He walks all right, but every time I trot him, since that time, he goes very lame.

Answer—

Your colt, being but three years old, going very lame trotting, and sound when walking, etc, has every indication of splint lameness.

The lameness, very often precedes the formation of splint, so that after two or three weeks a splint may appear.

Apply cold water to the lame leg, below the knee, for as long a time as you conveniently can, each day, for some four or five days. Then apply a blister, composed of one part of Beniodide of Mercury, to eight parts of simple ointment, rubbing it well into the part, having first clipped the hair off.

A splint usually forms below the knee, on the inside of the leg, therefore that would be the place to blister.

See that the colt cannot get his mouth in contact with the blistered part, while it itches as a result of the blister.

The colt should get, at least, one months rest, either at pasture, in a corral, or in a box stall, the pasture being preferable.

Subscriber—I have a cow that has a bad cough for about three or four months She eats well, and gives a good deal of milk, but lately she breathes fast and is getting a swelling in the throat. I rubbed a liniment on the throat, but it did not do her any good. What would you advise me to do with her, and say if it is dangerous to use her milk? Answer—Your cow appears to have either tuberculosis (consumption), or actinomycosis (big-jaw). In either case, if the disease has become general, it is not safe to use the milk. Consult a veterinary surgeon. If actinomycosis be the existing disease, he may (by operation and medicine), cure her. If tuberculosis be present, she should be condemned.

H. S.—Will you kindly inform me through your valuable paper what causes a thoroughpin in a horse and what is the best remedy for it, and greatly oblige an old subscriber.

Answer.—In many cases thoroughpin comes through a hereditary predisposition, or in other words, the weakness in those parts is transmitted from the parent to the foal, and needs only a slight exciting cause to produce the disease. The usual exciting causes are: over work, and sprain of the parts, and I have known of several cases in which one severe drive was followed by distension of the bursa. The pathology of thoroughpin is similar to that of windgalls, and the treatment is also similar. Thoroughpins seldom lame a horse, and rarely do they permanently disappear with treatment, but recur as soon as the horse is put to hard work.

Treatment—If heat and inflammation be present, bathe the parts well with warm water several times a day, and apply extract of hamamelis after each fomentation. After the soreness and inflammation has disappeared, a blister and run to pasture for two or three months may reduce the thoroughpin. If you desire to keep the horse in stable after the inflammation has subsided, instead of blistering apply pressure to the parts (by means of bandages and cotton battioe) while the horse is in his stall and give regular daily exercise. Both before and after exercise, friction applied to the part is good, as well as the application of a mild stimulating lotion.

Prof. Henry advises that heifers raised for the dairy should be fed with the object of keeping them in healthy growing condition and not so as to cause them to fatten. For this purpose one-fifth corn in the ration will be sufficient, increasing the proportion of bran and oats. As to the amount of grain to feed, 1½ pounds for every 100 pounds live weight is recommended.

SALE OF ORMONDE YEARLINGS

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 21st AT 7:30 P. M.

Messrs. Killip & Co. will sell at salesyard, corner Van Ness Avenue and Market street, San Francisco, five fillies by ORMONDE, three by ST. CARLO, and one by MORELLO. The youngsters are the whole of the yearlings from W. O'B. Macdonough's Menlo Stud. They are:

A chestnut filly by imp. Ormonde, foaled 1897, from Mnta, a mare bred at Palo Alto, sired by Wildidle, out of imp. Mutiny, daughter of Adventurer, by Newminster and Mnta, by The Duke, son of Stockwell.

Bay filly by imp. Ormonde, from Geneva, by Fonso, a Kentucky Derby winner, and sire of Frank K., Monte Fonso, Rudolph and many others; second dam Weisbaden, by Baden Baden, another Kentucky Derby winner.

Chestnut filly by imp. Ormonde, from Bud, by Glenmore; second dam Blossom, by Ballinkeel, and so on to the twentieth dam—a natural Barb mare.

Bay filly by imp. Ormonde, from Santa Cruz, the dam of St. Cuthbert. Santa Cruz is by Double Cross, sire of Guido, her dam Eliza (dam of Monowai), by Norfolk; next dam Mary Wade (dam of Joe Shelby), by Woodburn; next dam Viola (dam of Ironwood), by imp. Knight of St. George, and so on, every dam to the seventh having foaled a winner.

Bay filly by imp Ormonde, from Libbertiflibbet (dam of Valenciennе), by Bullion; second dam Flibbertiflibbet, by Kingfisher; third dam imp. Filagree, by Stockwell; fourth dam Extasy, by Touchstone, fifth dam Miss Wilfred, by Lottery, etc.

The St. Carlos are three in number, a chestnut filly from Prince Idle, daughter of Prince of Norfolk and Lizzie Idle, by Wildidle; a chestnut filly from Bessie W. (dam of St. Philip), by imp. Darebin, second dam Glendora (dam of Dorian), by imp. Glenelg, and a chestnut filly by Ormonde or St. Carlo (the latter given), out of Moonlight (dam of Ajax), by Princeton; second dam Simoon, by War Dance; third dam Saratoga, by imp. Knight of St. George. These fillies by St. Carlo are all extra fine lookers.

The filly by the great Morello is from Kosciulottie, and is a strong made handsome miss.

This consignment from Mr. Macdonough's Menlo Stock Farm, contains the first of the get of Ormonde that he has put on the market

At the conclusion of the Macdonough Sale Dr. A. C. Posey's yearling colt (a full brother to Dancing Girl) by St. Carlo from Carrie M., by Hyder Ali, and P. W. Selby's yearling colt by St. Carlo from Venetia by Tyrant will be offered.

To be followed November 29th by Sale of Yearlings from Palo Alto Stock Farm and early in December Yearlings from A. B. Spreckels' Napa Stock Farm and a consignment from M. F. Tarpey's Stock Farm. . . . .

☞ Catalogues at This Office or 11 Montgomery Street or sent on application. KILLIP & Co., Live Stock Auctioneers.

YEMEN was again run up $250 above his intended price and was retained by the customary $5 advance. It is greatly to be regretted that there is no rule in existence which prevents disgruntled bettors from venting their spite upon the owners of horses which defeat those which they are injudicious enough to back. In both instances in which Yemen's owner was defrauded of his legitimately earned purse the horse was not improperly entered, the conditions of the races each stipulating that contestants were to be entered to be sold for a certain sum. Yemen on both occassions carried top weight and conceded allowances to every horse in therace. He is neither a stake horse nor fit to run in handicaps as the longer distances are not to his liking, and it seems most unfortunate that his owner is regularly mulcted because there happened to be no spinners of his class running at Emeryville. If fault there is, it is not with the owner of Yemen, but rather with those who make the conditions of the races, which have appeared so easy for him.

An agriculturist, a farmer, is not necessarily a grain grower. The field of farming, of agriculture, has many branches. Everything pertaining to plant growth, to the production of live stock, the output of the poultry yard and dairy as well as the pastoral interests of raising flocks and herds is a branch of farming. Careful husbandry has become necessary in tilling the soil, also in the management of herds and flocks, in the propagation and institution of meadows, also in orcharding and in this advanced age of husbandry the terms of agriculture and farming embrace all the pursuits that live by marketing the products of the earth.

FLEMING is a rather well bred horse when you come to look up his pedigree. He is by Hanover, out of Maria D., by Lisbon; second dam Crucifix, by Lexington; third dam Lightsome, etc. This makes him a half brother to Brodhead, the colt Barney Schreiber had out here a couple of years ago.

The creamery industry, although always very large, is really only in its infancy, and with its growth it will require a large force of really competent butter makers. They ought to be well educated men and especially thoroughly posted in all the details of dairying. Not only should butter makers attain this special education, but every man who proposes to make dairying his calling will find profit in equipping himself thoroughly for the work. Fortunately there are now in almost every State facilities for securing a dairy education that were undreamed of ten or fifteen years ago, and the young men especially, who propose to make any branch of dairying their calling, should avail themselves of these facilities.

The poultry business is not engaged in sufficiently extensive to be termed a mortgage lifter, but it will lift any family out of the mire of poverty, feed the hungry mouths and clothe the shivering forms of many helpless children. It is an industry that produces a commodity that commands the cash every single day in the year, summer and winter, cold or warm, a staple product that the world will not do without if money will not buy it.

Sportsmen and Others
IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. Men whose success in whatever they engage depends on perfect physical condition, will be interested in the claims made for The Niagara Vapor Bath Cabinet.
A hunter, John C. Bayler, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I began to feel as though my happy hunting days were over. I thought I was getting old, my joints were getting stiff, and a day's outing after game always needed another day to rest up in. Since I am using The Niagara Vapor Bath, I feel like a new man. It keeps me limbered up and in good shape for work or sport."
The Niagara Vapor Bath, if used regularly, keeps a man in the most perfect physical condition. Keeps his system active, his weight normal, his head free and clear, his muscles pliant and elastic, and not only prevents, but also cures, some of the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout and completely eradicates all the ailments arising from over-indulgence in liquor or food.
Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't get it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.
Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.
Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

THE ORMONDE FILLIES.

Something About the Breeding of the Equine Aristocrats to be Sold Next Monday.

The five photo-engravings in this issue picture the yearling fillies by the great Ormonde that are to be sold at auction by Killip & Co. in this city on Monday evening next. While looking at them and admiring their handsome proportions and slashing appearance, one can hardly believe that they are the product of a dry year in California, and the Eastern horseman will probably ask himself, "If they raise such grand-looking yearlings as these out there on the Pacific Coast during a dry year, what do the youngsters look like that have the advantage of favorable seasons and natural pasturage the year round?" The filly at the top of this page is Orthia, one of the grandest looking yearlings ever seen, and having all the characteristics of one of the royal family of racers. She is a half sister to Charlemagne, a frequent winner. Muta, her dam, won the Ladies' Stakes, Vestal Stakes, The California Derby and California Oaks. She is a full sister to Bianca, dam of The Manxman and Finesse.

ORTHIA, ch f, by imp. Ormonde—Muta, by Wildidle.

The second dam, imp. Mutiny, was also the dam of imp. Music, the dam of Princess, a filly that won five out of seven starts as a two-year-old. Muta, the third dam, only ran once and was third.

Mirella, the fourth dam, was a winner and foaled the winners, Cherry Duchess, Merry Duchess, Coinage and Cherry Ripe. Lady Roden, the fifth dam, produced the high-class horses, Liddington and Lady Coventry. Ennui, the sixth dam, produced Saunterer, Loiterer and Bravery.

This is one of the most celebrated families in England, since Rouge Rose, Ellen Horne, Paradigm, Lord Lyon, Achievement, Bend Or, Gardevisure and hosts of other good ones come from it.

The other picture on this page is of Gold Lace, a half sister to Valencienne, who is one of the speediest daughters of St. Carlo. Her dam, Libbertiflibbet, is also the dam of Gibbitiflibbet and Joy, dam of Nuncomar. The sire of Libbertiflibbet, Bullion, was the best son of War Dance, who was the best of Lexington's best producing sires, and he the best son of Boston. Bullion's dam was by Ringgold, also by Boston. Such race horses as The Bard, Tea Tray, etc., are from War Dance mares. Flibbertigibbet, the second dam, is also the dam of Celinda.

The third dam, imp Filagree, also produced Alta Vela, Finesse, Finework and Fiddlesticks.

Extasy, the next dam, a daughter of Touchstone, threw the winners Rapture, Lady Exeter and Walmer.

On page two will be found the picture of Rose of Ormonde, a half sister to Cadeau. Bud, her dam, is a full sister to Glenrose, dam of First Purchase. Blossom, the second dam, threw the winners White Wings, Hazlehatch, Juanita and Miss Lillian. Rosetta, the third dam, is the dam of Al. Reed and Verosa, Vitrola and The Ace, two years old, in 1897.

Imp. Spiletta, the next dam threw Fenian and Spirola. The pedigree then runs to the dam of Melbourne, sire of West Australian, Blink Bonny, The Slave, Canezou, Marchioness, etc.

In the centre of page two is Oremus, a half sister to the speedy St. Cuthbert. Her dam, Santa Cruz, is by XX, who has a double strain of the valuable blood of both the great sires, imp. Monarch and imp. Bonnie Scotland, whose great grandam was the renowned four-mile mare Fashion. Eliza, her second dam, the dam of Monowai, Congress and Priscilla is by the celebrated racehorse and sire Norfolk, who was never beaten during his career on the turf. The third dam, Mary Wade, is the dam of Joe Selby, Ben Butler, Nettie Hill and Phoebe Hall.

Viola, the fourth dam, foaled Ironwood. Lucy Wade, the next dam, produced Coronella, and Mary Cass; the sixth dam produced Bettie Ward.

This is a famous producing family, from which are descended Argyl, Cuba, Conquest, Jenny Lind, Pepper Wood, Josephine.

Oriva, the remaining filly, is out of the young mare Geneva, who is by Fonso, sire of Frank K., Judge Denny, Morte Fonso, Amelia Fonso, Rudolph and a host of other good ones.

The second dam, Weisbaden, was by Baden Baden, by imp. Australian, sire of Lizzie Lucas, (grandam of Morello), Maggie B. B. (dam of Iroquis), Farfaletta (sister to Joe Daniels), etc.

The third dam, Diana (dam of Ephesian and Angelica), was by imp. Glenelg (sire of Firenzi, Los Angeles, Glenmoyne, Goshen, Jamboree, St. Augustine, etc.)

Annie Bush, her fourth dam, produced Royal Charlie, Natalie, the great Bushwhacker, Virginia Bush, etc.

The fifth dam, Banner, by imp. Albion, was the dam of Ransome, Bannarette and St. James, all winners.

GOLD LACE, b f, by imp Ormonde—Libbertiflibbet, by Bullion.

It is more than likely that the sale will attract the largest crowd of prominent horse breeders and purchasers that has ever been seen in California. Besides the Ormond fillies are three grand looking fillies by St. Carlo and one by Morello, all of which will go to the higbest bidder. The sale will be held in a brilliantly lighted pavilion corner Market street and Van Ness

English and American Training.

In the training and handling of yearlings the English trainer, it may be stated, does not try his yearlings at all. In fact it is not until the fall after they are taken up and broken, which occupies at least a couple of months, that they are asked to gallop, the general custom being to lead them around with a surcingle or dumb jockey on their backs, from which side lines of rubber are attached to the checks of the bit, very loose at first, but gradually tightened as the youngsters get accustomed to restraint.

When the mouth has been made they are then put through a course of what is called "lunging," which is being made to trot and canter around a circle at the end of a long lunging rein. When all of this kindergarten part of the program has been got through with the youngster is then saddled for the first time and in due course a lad gets a leg-up and the baby racer is then ridden at a walk for several weeks, so that yearlings there are handled all of two months before they are even asked to gallop. As I stated a year ago, yearling trials are unknown in England, so that it is well on in the spring at two-year-olds before the English trainer has seen his young brigade fairly extended.

In passing I may here repeat what I wrote several years ago, that everything else being equal, the American bred two-year-old will, up until, say, the middle of June, always beat the English bred one, for the simple reason that he has had more range and liberty. Consequently, when not ruined by too severe yearling trials, American youngsters come to hand earlier and show their real form much sooner than those reared under the more or less artificial conditions prevailing in England.

In regard to getting horses ready for early spring engagements, the climate in England generally admits of horses being exercised out in the open during the winter almost every day with but few exceptions. This, of course, is of great advantage, especially with gross heavy topped horses. The English trainer usually gives his horses more slow work before really sending them along in earnest than is customary in this country, while all horses are exercised with clothing on, of some sort, and it is only when being worked out in a trial, as we term it here, that they are stripped of their clothing.

The blanket idea as an adjunct in the fitting of horses has long since been exploded in this country. Doubtless the idea was imported but experience proved that the climate conditions were so different that what might be necessary in England was injurious here. In the trying of horses the English trainer's timer is a horse and not a watch, but I think the time is not far off when the watch as an adjunct to the trial horse will become general in England, and in this they would get the most reliable of all trials, which in a country where big turf coups are fashionable is a matter of the utmost importance.

In stable management while all the surroundings and general get-up are on a much more elaborate scale in England, and with almost military discipline, when it gets down, however, to the common sense treatment of the horse, the representative American trainer, in my opinion, shows much superior judgment in various ways, one of the most important being in regard to the grooming of horses, which is done in quite a matter of fact way and with none of the pounding or fuss that is thought necessary in the grooming of a horse in England. There the higher the class of the horse the more he has to submit to a lot of humbug in this respect with the result that a large proportion of racehorses in training become fretful and irritable when being handled in the stable.

But one of the most surprising things in a nation of practical horsemen such as the Britishers are is that, unless when racing, horses are never taken out of their stalls from the time when they come in from exercise until they are taken out again next morning, and to further emphasize this I may state that half open doors, such as are on all box stalls in this country are almost unknown in an English training stable.

The English trainer feeds his horses four times a day—in the morning, then at what is called shutting up time, about 11 o'clock, and from that time until 4 in the afternoon woe betide the ignoramus who would presume to ask to see the horses In fact, owners, from the Prince of Wales down, would not dream of taking guests to the stables during these forbidden hours. At 4 o'clock the horses, after being rested, are divested of their day clothing and groomed over a bit, night clothing put on and then fed and shut up again until 7 or 7:30, when they are again fed and shut up for the night.

ROSE OF ORMONDE, ch f, by imp. Ormonde—Bud, by Glenmore.

OREMUS, b f, by imp. Ormonde—Santa Cruz, by XX.

In contrast to the English method in the latter respects, at 3:30 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon the American trainer has his horses all taken out and walked from half to an hour or more. The wisdom of this is apparent, as in addition to the stalls being thoroughly aired while the horses are out, the exercise, especially in the case of gross or groggy horses, is of great benefit; while the careful trainer is also afforded an opportunity to make many useful observations, especially in the spring of the year, when there is still lots to be learned of the many peculiarities which exist in any large string of race horses in training. This one feature of American methods ought by all means to be copied and become general in England, as there is no argument whatever as to its practical importance.—Kelston, in Morning Telegraph.

ORIVA, b f, by imp. Ormonde—Genevo, by Fonso.

THE Jennings stable about fifteen strong will open the winter campaign at the next Ingleside meeting three weeks hence. They have been resting up at the Haggin ranch near Sacramento. Among the lot is that great filly Briar Sweet, acknowledged to be the best mare of her age in America. It will be quite an addition as horses right now are rather scarce.

The Champion Yearling of 1898.

[Thoroughbred Record]

The champion yearling thus far heard from in the West this season was uncovered at the Lexington track this week. It was the brown colt, Star Bright, by imp. Aintree, out of Spaldiemore, by Strathmore, the property of Mr. J. V. Shipp, owner of Sunny Slope Stud. The colt was broken at Mr. Shipp's farm, and showed such speed that it was decided to give him a chance to compare with his contemporaries at a race track. He was brought to Lexington about two weeks ago and soon attracted attention by reeling off eighths and quarters in remarkable time. Last Thursday was, however, selected to try his courage and bottom as well as speed by a trial at the regulation distance of three-eighths, or as Kentuckians call it "from the walnut tree over the hill"—that heart-breaking hill which, it is said, was purposely embraced in the Lexington track by its founders as the final test of a race horse.

A number of turfmen and breeders were out to see the colt perform, and Albert Franklin, the trainer for the W. H. Laudeman Stable, was selected as the official timer. The colt, driven without whip or spur, was sent on his journey, accompanied by a fast two-year-old, and it was a "hoss race" from the jump, the pair racing up the hill side by side. Turning into the stretch the filly seemed to have the best of it, but the colt overhauled her in true race-horse style, beating her a length and a half, finishing easily in the remarkable time of 0:36 1-5; according to Mr. Franklin's watch, the last eighth being the fastest of the three. This is the three-eighths record for the season on the Lexington track and compares very favorably with any of previous years. The colt is certainly a speed marvel, has good size, and is also bred like a race horse. He is by imp. Aintree (son of Sefton and Electric, by Thunderbolt), and is out of Spaldiemore, by Strathmore; second dam Spadie (a winner and dam of Lizzie D, Carrie H. and Fred K.) by imp. Blue Mantle; third dam the great four-mile race mare Janet, by Lightning; fourth dam Kelpie (dam of Duke of Montrose and Miss Austin, dam of Teuton and Faraday), the sixth dam being the great Levity.

Mr. George Voorhies of California, one of the closest students of breeding in America, and well known as a writer under the non de plume of "St. George" is on a visit to Lexington and happened to be at the track when the colt was worked. He was very much impressed with the performance, and equally so with the colt's appearance and breeding. He furnishes the following interesting analysis of the colt's blood lines:

This colt belongs to the leading racing family now in England, namely the Blacklock family. Galopin, St. Simon and Donovan are now leading stallions in England. Billet belonged to the same strain. Aintree, the sire of this colt, was a remarkably strong bred horse, Sefton, Speculum, Vedette and Voltigeur, in the male line, were all great race horses. His sire on his dam's side, Thunderbolt, was the speediest son of Stockwell. Thunderbolt was out of Cordelia, by Red Deer, a son of the great Venison; a great cup horse and one of the gamest of his time. Heatherbloom, the granddam of Aintree, was by Newminster. She was out of Greta, by Voltigeur, and she out of Mountain Flower, by Ithuriel by Touchstone.

The dam of this colt is by Strathmore, a son of Waverly, a son of Australian. The second dam is by Blue Gown, a son of Beadsman, a son of Weatherbit, a son of Sheet Anchor, a son of Lottery.

Waverly was out of Westherwitch, by Weatherbit. So it will be seen that this colt has two crosses of this rare and stout blood so much prized in Australia. He has also a double cross of Voltigeur.

GLENGABER is a first-class colt and a sure enough race horse, but has been drilled to death and should have a let up. If this colt were allowed two or three months' rest on grass he would show high class in his three-year-old form.

LENNA N. (P.), 2:05 1-4

Superintendent Covey of Palo Alto Stock Farm Gives the Results of his Search for Her Pedigree.

I respectfully submit the following in connection with the breeding of the pacing mare Lenna N., 2:05¼. The Breeding Register of Palo Alto Stock Farm shows that in 1877, F. S. Malone of San Francisco bred Nettie George to General Benton 1755. In regard to a letter written by me to Mr. F. S. Malone, he writes under date of Oct. 2, 1898:

F. W. COVEY, Esq.—My Dear Young Friend: Yours of 22d at hand, in reply would state that in 1853 Buck Whitesides came from Illinois, brought a mare by Illinois Medoc. He bred her to a grey horse called Sir Bulwer, the only thoroughbred horse in the country at that time. The produce he bred to Volscian, Norfolk, etc. At Whitesides' death D. E. Calahan, of Golden Eagle fame, bought some of the stock, among them the one known as Nettie George. Mr. Calahan sold her to Westley George who sold her to me; in 1877 I bred her and her daughter by imp. Hercules to General Benton. The produce of her daughter was Arah. The produce of Nettie George, a bay filly, I sold to W. E. Dean of this city (S. F.). Mr. Dean sold the mare and her produce to Josiah White of Petaloma. At his death they were sold at auction. Sincerely your friend

F. S. MALONE.

Note by writer: The fact of the stock being sold at the White sale led many to believe that they were the property of White, which is not correct, the mare and all of her produce by Sidney were the property of Mr. Dean when sold, as the letter following will show:

In answer to yours of 28th inst. On Dec. 24, 1883, I bought from Frank S. Malone an unnamed mare by General Benton, dam Nettie George, and called her Miss Helen. In 1884 bred her to Director; 1887, bred her to Guy Wilkes; 1888, bred her to Sidney. January 13, 1889, she foaled a light bay filly with white strip in face, and three white feet. This foal was named Deens. In December 1892, Killip & Co. sold at auction Miss Helen and her get, including Deana. The purchaser of Deana being a man from Petelnma. Josiah H. White, deceased, never owned the mare or her colt. Whether Lenna N. is Deena, I will leave for you to deter mine. Yours truly,

W. E. DEAN.

Note by writer: From what I had read and heard I believed Deana was Lenna N., and I was tracing up Deena. On Nov. 2, 1898, Mr. C. M. Chase, of Killip & Co., San Francisco, writes in answer to mine of the 1st, as follows:

Yours of yesterday to hand. We have not a catalogue of the White sale, which contains Deana's pedigree, on hand. Our bound book gives it as follows: No. 23—Deene, bay filly, foaled January 2, 1889 Bred by J. H. White, Lakeville, Cal. Sired by Sidney 4770, 2:19¾. First dam Miss Helen, by General Benton 1755; second dam Nettie George, by Norfolk; third dam by Ashland; fourth dem by Volscian; fifth dem by Bulwer; sixth dam by Illinois Medoc. Deane was sold to Wilfred Page, who can, no doubt, give further information. Nos. 24, 25, 26, two years, yearling, and suckling fillies were also sold. The old mare Miss Helen with the suckling filly No. 26 were sold to Henry Pierce. The bound volumne, sales of 1892, is at your service.

C. M. CHASE.

Note by writer: I still thought Deane was Lenna N., but the following letter from Mr. W. E. Dean, upset my opinion. Letter from W. E. Deen dated Nov. 3, 1898:

Since writing you I have learned that the mare Lenna N. is but five years old, have also found record of three foals of Miss Helen by Sidney since Deana, one June 3, 1890, one July 23, 1892, the last a suckling at her side when sold Dec. 1892. Whether the mare was stinted to Sidney in 1892, I now find no record. W. W. Mendenhall, in charge of Valensin's Stock Farm in 1892, could probably inform you. When in town drop in at my office and I will show you my data. Yours truly, W. E. DEAN.

Note by writer: The above letter caused some doubt in my mind as I had not taken into consideration the age of Lenna N., thinking all the time Deane was Lenna N. As there was no record of Miss Helen having been stinted to Sidney in 1892, according to his date, I came to the conclusion that to find the individual that was Lenna N., was to learn who purchased Nos. 24 and 25, at the sale of White and find what disposition they had made of them. I knew 23 and 26 had been placed. On Nov. 4th I wrote C. M. Chase, of Killip & Co., San Francisco, asking who purchased Nos. 24 and 25, his reply of Nov. 5, 1898 is as follows:

Yours to hand. The foals were both fillies. No. 24 was sold to Wilfred Page. No. 25 to J. A. McDonald.

C. M. Chase.

Nov. 4, 1898, I wrote W. W. Mendenhall for information as suggested by Mr. W. E. Deen. His reply on Nov. 7th is as follows:

Yours of the 4th inst. received. While my information in regard to Lenna N. (p), 2:05¼, will be all from memory. I am fearful that it will not be satisfactory. Yet I might be able to put you on the right track so that you can get positive information. I can not say positively that Miss Helen was stinted in 1892, but Judge W. E. Greene, of Oakland, has or should have the stud book, and that will tell. Again, Miss Helen was owned by a gentleman named Dean living in Petalume, and I think he might give you positive information on this point. I do know that all of Miss Helen's foals were fillies, that is the four that were by Sidney and at the Valensin Farm. It is just possible and very probable that Lenna N. is six years old. All of her (Miss H.) foals looked very much alike. Miss Helen was a typical Benton in every particular—in conformation, size, and even to the white spots that is a characteristic of the Gen. Benton family. I know of nothing more that will enlighten you. There is no question in my mind but that Lenna N. is by Sidney, 2:19¾ (p). First dam Miss Helen, by Gen. Benton; second dam Nettie George s. t. h. by Norfolk. And I think on close investigation you will find that she is the foal that Miss Helen had by her side when she left the Valensin Farm. I do not know who bought her at the White sale. Yet after all it might be possible that Miss Helen was stinted to Sidney in 1892 and dropped another foal in 1893 Yours truly,

W. W. MENDENHALL.

On Nov. 4th I wrote Mr. Harry E. Wise, of San Francisco. His reply of Nov. 7th as follows:

I am in receipt of your esteemed favor of the 4th inst. Contents duly noted. In reply beg to state that Lenna N. is at present the property of my wife. I bought her in the late fall of 1896 from Mr. Chas. Northrup, of Petalume. Ha when he bought her named the mare after his daughter Lenna Northrup. She is a beautiful bay, shoot 16 hands high, seven years old, certainly not over eight, and has no other marking except two white hind feet. After I purchased her I clearly established the fact that she was by Sidney out of a mara called Helen Benton, by Gen. Benton, and if my memory serves me right she was purchased by Wilfred Page at a sale held by Mr. White, of Petelume. I have ordered her listed for sale in New York City this current month. I thank you very much for the interest you have taken in this matter, and hope in good time you will clearly establish her pedigree. Anything you do in the matter will be appreciated by Yours very truly,

HARRY E. WISE.

On Nov. 8, 1898, I wrote Mr. C. F. Northrup, Petaluma, Cal., former owner of Lenna N. His reply of Nov 10th, as follows:

Deer Sir and Old School Mate, which you have probably forgotten: think it was at Lincoln. Yours in regard to Lenna N. received, and in reply will say she is by Sidney, dam Helen or Helen Benton, by Gen. Benton. Sold at sale in San Francisco of the late J. H. White, but was the property of W. E. Dean. I purchased her of Will Page, of Page Bros., San Francisco, that own the Coteti Ranch here, the home of Electic, brother to Arion. By going to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office I think you will find old catelogue of sale. I bought her unbroken, broke her myself, and after five weeks' work on track drove her a half in 1:07. Entered her at Sacramento and gave her a record of 2:13 in first heat in 2:27 class, and won race in straight heats. Sold her then to Mr. Henry Wise, of San Francisco. I am almost certain that Lenna N. is now eight years old, but could not say for sure. Any other information that I can give you will do it willingly. Yours respectfully, C. F. NORTHRUP.

Note by writer: As Mr. Wilfred Page had purchased at the White sale in 1892, two fillies by Sidney out of Miss Helen, on his reply to my letters of Nov. 3d and 8th depended the identification of Lenna N. His reply of Nov. 10th as follows:

Your favors of the 3d and 8th inst. arrived during my absence. Deana and Lenna N., 2:05¼, are full sisters by Sidney, dam Miss Helen by Gen. Benton, g d. Nettie George by Norfolk, etc. They are the two fillies sold by Mr. J. H. White at his sale in 1892 (I do not remember their numbers in the catelogue). They were bred by Walter E. Dean Esq. Lenna N. was sold by my brother to C. T. Northrup, and by the latter to Harry Wise. Deenna I sold to a chap whose name at this writing I do not recall. Yours resp.,

WILFRED PAGE.

It appears to me from the above evidence that Lenna N. (p), 2:05¼, is by Sidney 4770, dam Miss Helen, by General Benton 1755, grandam Nettie George. In regard to the breeding of Nettie George, will say that there is no doubt in my mind but that Mr. F. S. Malone has given the breeding of the mare just as it was furnished him when he purchased her, and will further say that from personal knowledge Mr. F. S. Malone is one of the best-posted students on the breeding of California horses that I have ever met, notwithstanding the reversal of his claim by the Register Association that Arah was not by General Benton out of Lady Hercules, daughter of Nettie George. I do not, however, claim that I know anything positive about the breeding of Nettie George, nor will I, except by the rules of Registration, attempt to establish her breeding, whatever it may be. From what little study I have given the matter I have come to the conclusion that the breeding of Nettie George will be hard to prove. Many of the early thoroughbreds brought to California were not registered, and were simply known as The Boston mare, The Medoc mare, etc. Mr. Buck Whitesides, who it is said brought a mare by Medoc to California is dead. This mare is said to be the fifth dam of Nettie George. That dams by Bulwer, Volscien and Ashland could be all right if it could be proven. An Ashland mare could have been bred to Norfolk, and it is possible that I may be able to prove this by the Stud Books of Mr. Theo. Winters, who is still in the running horse business and owned Norfolk. This, however, will be a matter of further research to which I intend to devote some time to ascertain the facts

FRANK W. COVEY.

[After the above showing made by Mr. Covey, we do not think there will be any doubt in the minds of Californians that Lenna N., 2:05¼, is by Sidney, out of Miss Helen by Gen. Benton, second dam Nettie George. Now for Nettie George's pedigree: Last week we addressed a letter to Theodora Winters, who purchased Norfolk, brought him to California, and owned him until the day the old champion died. In that letter we asked Mr. Winters if he knew whether Nettie George was by his horse. The answer was received this week and is as follows:

Washoe, Nev., Nov, 14, 1898.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 12th inst. to hand and will say I remember the mare Nettie George and know that she was by Norfolk, but further than this I am unable to furnish you with information. Very truly, THEO J. WINTERS.

To any man who knows Theo. Winters his statement that he knows Nettie George was by Norfolk is as good as a certificate of registration. He does not know the breeding of her dam, however, and as Mr. Whiteside is died it may never be traced. There is one chance, however. She is given as by Ashland. The late Hon. Nathen Coombs owned Ashland, and if the stallion's hooks are still in existence they may give some clue to the mare's breeding. Enough has been shown, however, to prove beyond a doubt to the mind of any reasonable person that the pedigree of Lenna N., 2:05¼, was not manufactored. She is by Sidney, dam Miss Helen, by Gen. Benton; second dam Nettie George, by Norfolk; third dam said to be by Ashland.—ED. BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Monroe Salisbury Wanted Directum.

Two of the most prominent end best known horsemen in America, Monroe Salisbury and Samuel Gamble were sitting in the lounging rooms of the Palace Hotel last Monday talking of the outlook for harness horses The sale of Directum was mentioned. Mr. Salisbury's eyes twinkled and he showed in a minute that something more than the ordinary emotions were moving him. "There," said he, "is the greatest trotter that ever wore a harness. He was the two-minute trotter, sure. I once owned Alix, 2:03¾, but she wasn't in the same class with Directum when he was right. In his four-year-old form he was not just right for a full week at any time during the year, but see what he did. I knew before I went to the Klondika last year that he could be purchased, and thought I could slip up there, make some money, and come back here and buy him. I knew that the interest in trotters would return and good ones would be worth money, I could not make others believe so, however, and went to the Yukon country for the purpose of digging out enough to get into the ranks again. I will return there in the spring and with ordinary luck will come down with enough to equip a string of good ones (some of which I have already staked out), and you can tell the boys over East, Sam, that I will be with them in 1900."

A trace of tears was in the veteran campaigner's eye as he again referred to Directum. "I would have owned him sure, Sam, had I had the money to buy him, and mated right he will produce the coming champions of America. I place him at the head of all sires of race horses, with little Direct next. Why, the last year I had him he could have beaten all the pacers out that year, and there were some pretty fast ones on the circuit. He is and was the greatest trotter on earth, and I am sorry I do not own him." And the former owner of champions turned away with a look of regret on his face, but a spark of the fire of determination in his eye that meant much. Here's hoping he will uncover a million in the Klondike next summer. If he lives he will show the world that the ice and snows of the Chilcoot are not severe enough to chill his love for the trotting horse.

Mr. Malone Replies to Mr. Wallace.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Dear Sir:—In the Trotter and Pacer of October 19th, Mr. Wallace brings in my name and opens up the question of the breeding of Arah again. That is the last thing he ought to do, as the action of the Board of Censors—Norris, Miller, Doolittle and Dickerman—is open to severe criticism, including the honest men Wallace. The decision in that matter was a ster chamber one. I have now and always had evidence to prove forgery and fraud in that case. I went to ask Mr. Wallace why Mr. Fry, the owner of Arab, never swore that Lady Hamilton was the dam of Arah? As to Lady Hamilton she was for three years prior to my delivering my stock to Fry on the Corhitt's ranch and to no other horse; yet when they wanted to manufacture a pedigree for Arah, whose ownership was in doubt, Fry entered and trotted him as an Electioneer through the California circuit. Now Corhitt never said a word until I "kicked" and proclaimed it a lie. Then it was that Corhitt, hungry for horse fame, et Fry's request came forward and became active, and backed up by the balance of the crowd of conspirators succeeded in getting a decision in their favor from the Board of Censors and Mr. Wallace:

Now, as to the breeding of Lenna N., her pedigree will be proven and without the aid of "Col. Mazuma."

Prince Warwick.

The get of Prince Warwick won over $30,000 last year in Europe. Prince Warwick is a very handsome bay horse, bred by A. C. Goodrich of Jorden Valley, Oregon, and was sired by Alcone, son of Almont 33 and Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief. His dam was Warwick Maid, by Almont Mambrino, second dam Lady Warwick, by Delmonico, third dam by Cassius M. Clay 22. Prince Warwick was a very fast horse and was trained by Orrin A. Hickok, who negotiated his sale to the Austrian Government after showing a mile with him in 2:15. The price was $20.000. Since he was taken to Europe he has been bred to a large number of high-class mares, and his produce have made a splendid showing on the European trotting turf. Alcona, sire of Prince Warwick was short bred on his dam's side, his third dam being a mare of unknown breeding. He was a magnificent looking horse, however, and although competing for prizes in many show rings, was never beaten. He is the sire of several with records below 2:30, but none of them were among the big money winners.

Trainer Leigh's Plans.

Eugene Leigh's management of the string of two-year-olds placed in his charge by Mrs. E. O. Pepper last spring was a really remarkable feature of the racing season of 1898, and can long be to him justly a source of pride. He arrived in Cincinnati last Thursday, and of his career this year and his plans of 1899, the Enquirer says:

"Mr. Leigh's time and attention the past year were almost entirely devoted to training and racing a string of two-year-olds for Mrs. E. O. Pepper. As a result of his skilful and intelligent work Mrs. Pepper has the distinction of being the only American woman that has campaigned a stable of horses and made a success of it her first season.

"Mr. Leigh started out at Newport in the spring with thirteen two year-olds, the property of the mistress of Meadowthorpe, all of which had been bred at the Pepper establishment, near Lexington. When the stable went to Washington Park all but five of the horses had been sold, and five that still continued to carry the Pepper colors at the big Chicago meeting, and subsequently in the East being Kentucky Colonel, Black Venus, King Barleycorn, Ned Wickes and Satin Slippers. These, the pick of the lot that had left Lexington in the spring, after a successful season on the Eastern tracks, were sold to good advantage recently at public sale. From the time they began racing at Newport until the stable was finally 'wound up' recently, the horses that composed it won in purses and stakes $35,000. The horses that had been sold realized all told $30,000, leaving a net profit for Mrs. Pepper of $50,000 for the season.

"It is not to be inferred from the fact that all the horses which raced in her name the past season were sold that Mrs. Pepper will not be represented on the turf again next season. She will start out again next year with nearly or quite as big a string as she had at the outset of the present season. She has at Meadowthorpe sixteen promising yearlings, a dozen by the promising sire Kantaka, three by Perblaise and one by Kingston. From these a stable will be established for next season, and as this year Mr. Leigh will do the training, an arrangement to that effect having been entered into by Mrs. Pepper and himself.

"He will have quite a string of youngsters on the turf, as in addition to the Pepper lot he will have a bunch of his own. He has thirty yearlings at Lexington, and from these he will secure his own individual stable. It is his present intention to pick from the two lots about twenty of the best, figuring from looks and breeding, and these will be sent to the Brooklyn track this winter and he got ready for the Eastern campaign. With the best of the others Mr. Leigh will begin this season's racing at Newport. He has headed the list of winning owners at every meeting at the Campbell County track, and he hopes to duplicate his previous successes next spring. Newport will be the only track in the West at which he will race. He has not made a single entry in Western stakes, and he says that he does not intend to do so. He will have only two-year-olds in his stable next season. He does not want any old horses, as he wants to educate his horses himself. He is an acknowledged successful two-year-old trainer, and he says he would rather train ten two-year-olds than one old horse.

"Mr. Leigh has taken up his residence in the East, and the purpose of his present visit is to have a look at his own and the Pepper yearlings, and also to attend the coming thoroughbred sales at Lexington, to be held by Easton and by Messrs. Woodard & Shanklin, beginning on the 21st inst." —Daily Racing Form.

What Quinn Saw in England.

Charlie Quinn, who was one of the party that accompanied Tod Sloan on his trip to England, returned a few days ago and talked to a Telegraph reporter at the Hoffman House of his experiences on the English turf.

Quinn has been a follower of the turf for several years, and has been in the main successful on a rather extensive scale, his betting operations running into the thousands daily while on the big tracks the past sommer.

"I enjoyed my trip abroad," said Mr. Quinn, "and was interested in English racing, although I must say that I was greatly disappointed in some respects. There is little pleasure in racing there from the spectator's point of view. The courses are wonderful things indeed, to an American racing man.

"Just take a look at that," and he showed the reporter a map of one of the principal tracks. "Now, if that looks anything like a race track then I'll give up."

The reporter also gave it up. There were half-circles, lines crossing and recrossing each other in endless confusion and geometrical figures of all descriptions; but very little sign of a race course.

"Now, you see," said Mr. Quinn, "there is absolutely no pleasure in watching a race on a thing like that, for the simple reason that you can't watch it. True, the horses do finish sometimes in front of the grand stand and you get a glimpse of the final struggle, but when they finish a half mile away cross country you have to guess at things.

"The English horses? Well, I did not see enough of them to be able to judge, but it seems to me merely their ability to negotiate those up and down hill, difficult courses that makes them best there. The American horses, except the Lorillard-Beresford Stable's, have done nothing. I saw Voter and he appeared to be entirely out of his element over there.

"Sloan made a great hit, as you already know, and he is well liked by everyone. There was no such excitement over any other jockey's winning, and he had the English racing public with him to a man. I saw no jockeys adopting his style, and I don't believe they can. The English jockeys, to my mind, are the clumsiest riders I ever saw. Then, the majority of them are big men, and they will have little chance to copy Sloan's manner of riding.

"Sloan's 'kick' against the judge's decision which caused so much talk was a popular one, as many who were at the stand thought he had won. After they had finished, while riding back to the post, Madden cried out in surprise to Tod, 'Why, they have given it to me!' I heard that there was a substitute judge in the stand that day, the regular judge being absent. But the whole affair was exaggerated. There is very little question over decisions there, and Tod was riding again in a day or so.

"I suppose you put some of the English bookmakers out of business?" queried the reporter.

"No, hardly that," said Mr. Quinn. "They have a lot left yet, and the prices they laid about Tod's mounts were very short. You had to take 2 and 3 to 1 about legitimate 10 to 1 shots often. They would not lay a big price against anything he rode, though of course he was never barred in the betting, as was reported."

Mr. Quinn modestly admitted that he had won a little money while in England. As he dearly loves a long shot, it is probable that the price kept him off of Sloan's mount in many cases.

"Charlie Dwyer is a good winner," said Mr. Quinn, "and so is Arthur Lewis, who went over with us. Lewis will remain in England this winter, I believe, while Dwyer and Sloan will return to this country. Sloan will do some shooting in California and will doubtless ride at the winter meeting on the coast"—N. Y. Telegraph.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 28, 1898.

Mr. W. F. Young—Dear Sir:—Please find enclosed $1.00 for a bottle of Absorbine, Jr. I have tried a semple bottle and I must say it beats anything I have ever seen. It is a wonder. I had a bunch on the ball of my foot in the center and you would think it was the end of a hone. I showed it to a doctor and he said he would cut it out for $10.00. I showed it to another and he said: "If you cut that out you will never walk with that foot again." I happaned to run across your advertisement and I wrote to you to send me a sample bottle and I followed the directions and the hunch is gone and I did not know when it went. Let me take my shoes off and I would have to walk on my heels, the ball of my foot would be so sore. I would fall down if I stepped on it at all. I am really proud of you to think that you have such a valuable remedy. I will try and get people to try it, but they are so suspicious you can't tell them anything.

I am a Connecticut man. I lived at Hartford a good many years and I think I used your Taroleum at W. P. Wolley's Stable in Hartford, four years ago. I will now close as this is all I can say. The Absorbine, Jr. is the grandest, surest remedy I have ever used. No need of Corn Doctors when you use Absorbine, Jr. and may God bless you for a hundred years to come. This is my sincere wish. You will hear from me quite often.

Send me a good bottle a strong as you think for I have great faith. I thought I would never get anything to help me, but I did, thanks to you. I remain,

Yours respectfully, MIKE BALLOU,
331 Dexter St., Providence, R. I.

JOHN GIVENS (Kentucky John) is now handling Cardwell Jerilderio and Don Gara.

ED PURSER is on the way to San Francisco. He has been on the New York tracks.

LITTLE REIFF'S ride on Whitcomb was the best exhibition of jockeyship shown by him since he has been riding in these parts.

CHAS. KERR'S yearlings from his Antrim Stock Farm will be sold by auction at the Occidental Horse Exchange next Wednesday evening, November 23rd.

THE Boots stable has forty-three horses in training at the San Jose race track; out of the large lot they surely should be able to send some winners to the post this winter.

SKEETS MARTIN, resplendent in a gorgeous red waistcoat, was an interested spectator at the track Wednesday. He will probably be seen in the saddle this afternoon.

FRED CORWIN won handsomely in the New York election, while Bob Rose was a heavy loser. Joe Ullman, Eckert and O'Neil also lost a bunch of money on Van Wyck.

THE Pacific Coast Jockey Club should restore the old numbered saddle cloths on the horse when warming up; the numbers at present in use on the arms of the boys being very indistinct.

KITTLEMAN BROTHERS have arrived with two horses, including Vioris, the fast two-year-old they purchased from Griffin. In the same car came a horse belonging to Eddie Jones' father.

Now that the Latonia meeting has come to an unexpected close it is possible that a few of the stables will wend their way westward, where the climatic conditions allow us to race all winter.

LESTER REIFF made his first appearance at the present meeting Wednesday, riding Judge Woodford in the first race. His ride was not of the gilt edge order nor were any traces of the English roll visible.

THE meeting at Latonia came to a sudden end yesterday as, owing to the weather, the poor condition of the track and the light attendance, the management decided to declare off the program for the balance of the week.

ED GARTLAND II, was never known to do anything that was expected of him. When unbacked by his stable he has won good races on different occasions. But when the owner's money is on he performs most disappointingly.

THE Santa Anita yearlings to be sold to-night are the finest lot of youngsters ever raised on that celebrated stock farm. The sale will begin at the Occidental Horse Exchange, 721 Howard street, at 7:30 this evening.

A RACE for amateur riders has been arranged for next Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, at Ingleside. The lowest weight is to be 150 pounds. A large field is assured, as this race will count in the series for the big cup.

JAMES R. KEENE'S good four year-old colt St. Cloud, by Candlemas—Bell, of Maywood, who is now in England, is reported as having burst a blood vessel, and this will prevent him from racing for the remainder of the year.

BURNE & WATERHOUSE won the first race of the meeting with First Tenor. They were very fortunate in securing the services of Joe Piggott, as it was only through his superior horsemanship that the verdict went to their stable representative.

HANDICAPPER BROOKE of the California Jockey Club received a telegram from Mike Daly stating that nine horses, the property of Gideon & Daly, had left New York for Oakland, and on Monday evening Jockey Maher will accompany the outfit.

THE list of nominations to the Kentucky Derby to be run at the Spring meeting of the Louisville Jockey Club in 1900 has been announced. Among the entries (141 in number) does not appear the name of any foals from California; nor is a California sire represented.

IT is quite an improvement having the saddle cloths with the numbers on as the numbers on the boys arms can hardly be distinguished. Now if the Association will only get them on when the horses are warming up, the public will be under still further obligations to it.

GEO. HETZEL, for a long time associated with Joe Rose and Thos. Hurlick, and who was well known as a professional musician, died suddenly Tuesday of heart disease. Mr. Hetzel was very popular and had a host of friends who will sincerly regret his death.

SOME trainers would be a great deal better off if they would give those two little riders, Devin and Hoock the leg up instead of Norton, Kellas and that class of riders. Both are good getting away from the post, are good, strong finishers, and ars not afraid of taking a chance.

THE Melbourne Cup, a handicap, at two miles, one of the chief events on the racing calendar in Australia, was run Tuesday, November 1, at the Spring meeting of the Victoria Racing Club, and was won by Grafter, by Gozo—Industry. Wai-a-bit, by Malua—Lucisn, was second and Cocos third.

THERE is no truth in the report that Hamburg will be raced. Ten mares, all in foal to English stallions, have been shipped to Mr. Daly's ranch. Among the lot was the chestnut mare Winged Foot, by Buchanan—Longshore, the property of Mr. Wm. Lakeland. This mare will also be bred to Hamburg.

THOSE patrons of the races who journeyed to Ingleside on the trains from Third and Townsend streets met with a disagreeable surprise in the shape of a demand for railroad fare. Last season a ticket of admission to the races included transportation both ways on the steam cars, but now it will be twenty-five cents extra.

AB STEMLER has Scarborough and Harry Thoburn in his stable. It will be recalled that the Sheriff of Sacramento took them away from Atkin & Lottridge recently. It appears that there are two claims against them, one of which is held by John Mackay. The big breeder may lose his, because there is a first mortgage in ahead of him.

IT seems it would be a good idea to give that new starting gate they tried on the last race Thursday a further trial, as there would be less chance of bad actors going through it. The present gate, when horses break through it, gets tangled up in the horses legs, besides taking quite a little time in repairing. Give the other style of gate a trial by all means.

THE cigar and Eddie Jones, mostly cigar, has arrived from the East and was seen at the track greeting his many friends. Eddie is getting a little heavy and can hardly do less than one hundred and three pounds. He will be a welcome addition to our pigskin talent, of which we are wofully short. He has accepted some mounts and will be seen in the saddle this afternoon.

JOCKEY THORPE spoils many starts by his refusal to accept an even break with the other boys. This endeavor to obtain the best of it in the second race caused him to ruin the chances of Midlove, the odds on favorite. A little wholesome discipline, say in the way of thirty days on the ground, might teach him that there are others beside him who have some rights on the Emeryville track.

TOM RYAN is on his way to California with his stable Among the lot are the home bred colts Count of Flanders and The Roman. The Count was supposed to have broken down for good and all, but from the latest accounts it seems he will be able to stand up under training. The Roman Mr. Ryan bought from Mr. Boots back East and raced him around Chicago, but did not do much as the horse trained off.

ANY one who can furnish information as to Jockey Mead, who rode at San Francisco., Cal., during the early part of the season for D. Denison would confer a favor by sending such information to this office. We would like to know his first name, what part of the country he came from and his whereabouts at present. It may be the means of putting a bereaved mother on the track of her son, who left home about five years ago, and who has not been heard from since.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 11.—Boney Boy ran his fifty-second race to-day. Blitzen, his sire, was known as the "Iron Horse," as is well remembered. The youngster is certainly a chip of the old block. He has won three races, has been second once and unplaced once within the last week. He is entered in a race at one mile to-morrow, and unless "Virginia" Bradley changes his mind, which is not likely, Boney Boy will have made his fifty-third start this season by to-morrow night.—Inter-Ocean.

ON looking over a table of the winning owners and horses on the New York tracks this summer it will be seen that Jean Beraud was the biggest individual winner of the season, his victories in both ownerships footing up a total of more than $63,000, which shows that a really first-class race horse is a profitable investment. A big list of stables won amounts ranging from $15,000 down. W. B. Jennings is well up in the list with $40,000, of which $9,500 is to credited to Briar Sweet and $3,000 to Bendoran.

ALTAMAX is being given work and will be seen at the post presently. He was bred to several mares last season and will be used more extensively next. Sweet Faverdale is in foal to him. Colonel Burns has a warm spot in his heart for the great horse. When Altamax was a two-year-old he showed the best time of any colt the firm ever owned. He was kept a maiden to get the allowances in the big Eastern stakes, but unfortunately was taken sick when he arrived in New York, and it took a long time to get him back on his feet.

IN speaking of the engagement of Starter Cassidy to officiate at Bennings, President Howland said: "In going to the outlaw ranks for a starter it was not our intention to reflect on the ability of gentlemen recognized as Jockey Club officials. We were anxious to engage Mr. Fitzgerald, but his contract with the New Orleans folks made it impossible for him to accept our offer. Mr. Cassidy is well liked here in Washington, and we have been told that he is a capable man with the flag. It may be that our experiment will result in the development of what the racing world certainly lacks to a certain extent—a capable starter.

STARTER CALDWELL'S work so far at the present meeting calls for the highest commendation. He is getting back to his old form, when he was known from end to end of the continent as the Prince of starters. The boys mind him and there is no unnecessary delays at the post so the public gets home at a seasonable hour. His system of starting seems a decided improvement over the recall flag.

AT a meeting of the Metropolitan Turf Association in New York Monday night the following Governing Committee was elected for the ensuing year: E. N. Marks, George A. Wheelock, Edward Baxter, Edward M. Gaines and Robert L. Rose. E. N. Marks was elected Treasurer and T. G. Sullivan Secretary. It was voted to give $1,000 a day toward the support of the Washington meeting, in order to encourage racing at the capital. The betting rules were discussed and the matter was referred to the Government Committee, with instruction to formulate new rules.

THE following ruls was promulgated by the Board of Stewards of the New York Jockey Club: "The stewards of the Jockey Club desire to advise the various associations racing under their rules that the entries of horses by married women shall not be received so long as their husbands remain in the forfeit list." This is iminently proper and should be universally adopted on all tracks. The practice of men transacting racing or any other kind of business under the names of their wives savors of dishonesty to a certain extent or at least a disposition to shirk their own responsihilities.

IT appears now as if we should not have the pleasure of seeing Jockey Clawson in the saddle this winter; this is to be regretted as the Eastern papers speak very highly of his work. The Commercial Advertiser has the following to say of the last day of the Acqueduct Meeting: "Clawson carried off the riding honors of the day, and in fact, of the meeting, for day after day he has been the one jockey who has received especial commendation for his good work. He is a good judge of pace, quick in getting away from the post, and whether on favorite or outsider, the public knows full justice will be done his mount."

WORD has reached here that Phil Gilman, a celebrated trainer, died at his home at Topeka, Kan., a few days ago. When he left California last spring he was a very sick man, and his departure then was believed to be near at hand. In the course of his life Gilman trained for many of the biggest owners. For years he was with Ed Corrigan, and handled some of his best horses. Before he was with Mr. Corrigan he trained for Dan Honig when he had his big stable which swept everything before it. Mr. Gilman came to California last winter to improve his health. His friends advised him to visit some of the famous mineral springs, but he did not. Some relatives of the deceased resids in California.

MR. and MRS. J. B. HAGOIN arrived in Kentucky last week, and are visiting Mrs. Haggin's relatives in Woodford county. John Mackey, Superintendent of Mr. Haggin's big California stud, met Mr. Haggin in Lexington and the two have made frequent visits to Mr. Haggin's Elmendorf stud. Mr. Mackey confirmed the news of Mr. Haggin's purchase of St. Gatien and stated that the horse was expected to disembark in New York Saturday. Mr. Mackey stated that he did not know whether St. Gatien would be sent to California or Kentucky, but from other sources it is learned that the horse will be sent to Elmendorf as soon as he recovers from the fatigue of his ocean voyage. Mr. Haggin will remain in Kentucky till the fall sales, and Mr. Mackey after a visit to New York will probably rejoin him.

A CINCINNATI paper says: J. S., or as he is best known on the turf, "Johnny" Campbell returned yesterday from Chicago, whither he had been called by sickness in his family. Mr. Campbell stated last evening that at the close of the Latonia meeting he will take Senator Bland and the others of the string which he has at the over-the-river track to Louisville to winter at Churchill Downs. It is his present intention to open a public training stable next year on the percentage plan. He will take good horses that have been tried, and train and handle them for a percentage of what they may win. It is reasonably certain that he will have no trouble in getting horses on such terms. He is one of the most widely known trainers in America, and his ability is attested by the fact that he has in his career won every big turf event in the East and out this way, with two exceptions, including the Brooklyn Handicap and the great Futurity in the East and the West's most classic fixture, the Kentucky Derby. The two big events which have not been won by horses in his charge are the Suburban Handicap and the Realization, and the former he lost twice by a head. It is not at all likely that he will want for horses to train, under the circumstances.

THE well-known English turf writer who signs himself "Jim the Penman" says: The announcement made several weeks since to the effect that Sloan would take up residence in this country, and ride first for Lord William Beresford, is likely to be confirmed in fact, and equally it may be taken for granted that Huggins has been persuaded to take up fresh quarters at Heath House as private trainer. The riding of the American jockey is still the all-absorbing subject of discussion in the racing world, and there can be no question that the desire to see him at work has had a great deal to do with the increase in the financial returns of several recent meetings as compared with the corresponding fixtures of last year, and with none probably more than Newmarket Second October. Up to the present the habitual supporters have had all the best of the settling, and as regards the few friends who crossed the Atlantic with him, their winnings up to the present must represent a very large sum of money Should the tide of fortune continue at the flood, the matter will assume a more or less serious aspect, for the simple reason that the money won will probably be taken over to America, never to return, and the loss will be felt much more than if it remained in circulation, much in the same way as obtains when one of our great races falls to the share of a foreigner and the money goes from our side to that of our friends on the other side of the Channel, as happened after such coups as were effected by Adonis, Montargis, Peut, Etre, Jongleur, Plaisanterie, Alicante, Tenebreuse and others.

NEW YORK TRACK.

A Princely Home for the Trotters to Be Built and Completed in the Latest Modern Style.

[N. Y. Spirit of the Times]

Ever since the Driving Club abandoned Fleetwood there have been rumors of all sorts relative to the construction of a track for horses in this vicinity. The trotting world has been kept posted as to the various schemes and sites proposed. All plans proposed failed and it has remained for Mr. W. H. Clark to solve the problem. Believing as he does that the times are ripe for the revival of the trotting interests of the greatest horse city in the world, he has proposed to give us one of the finest equipped establishments in this country. In order to do this he has purchased one hundred acres of fine land just out of the city limits and yet near enough to be accessible to road drivers as well as those who love to see racing, yet depend upon either the steem railroads or surface cars for accommodation.

The new track—for it is now an assured fact that it is to be built—will face Jerome avenue—now named Central Park avenue—about a mile outside the city line, with Mount Vernon to the east a half mile distant and Yonkers on the north and west one and a half miles from the center of the city.

The land is on high ground, and it is proposed to construct a regulation mile track. The survey has been made and borings have shown that there are no obstructions in the way of ledges to overcome in levelling the ground. The greatest excavation will be fifteen feet and the greatest fill twenty feet. The ground selected for the grand stand is on a rising ground and will be situated so as to fully protect the spectators from the rays of the sun. Mr. Clerk will investigate all the best stands in the country before deciding just the kind to construct, but he has decided to erect one of steel, and as it will have two decks it is intended to accommodate fully 10,000 people. It will be fitted with full accommodations. Just where the stables will be constructed is yet unsettled, but there will be no long rows, but will rather be in small groups, in order that there shall be less danger in case of fire.

In speaking of the project, Mr. Clark said: My idea is that New Yorkers are natural horsemen and for years everybody attended trotting meetings; but for several years there has been no place suitable for road driving, and the natural consequence has been that most of the old drivers dropped out of the sport. With the new speedway there will be strong revival of the trotting interests The natural result was that horsemen took to attending the running meetings, but the time is ripe, I believe, for successful trotting meetings."

The contract for building the track will be let about the middle of November and pushed to an early completion.

In speaking of meetings, Mr. Clark said it was his intention to give meetings for the trotters and pacers, and in the event of Morris Park being cut up into building lots then his track might be used for running meetings, too.

It is not unlikely that in the near future a new trotting association may be formed to assist in the good work of making these meetings a success.

Wants to Beat the Six-in-hand Record.

Lawson N. Fuller, the veteran driver of fast horses, though 75 years old, believes that he can break the six-in-hand team record of 2:56½, which he himself established in 1896, and he is eager to make the attempt, says a writer to the Inter Ocean of recent date. Mr. Fuller said the other day:

"I believe that six horses can be made to trot a mile in 2:45 or better, and that I own the six horses that can do it. But since it is rather costly, both in time and money, to train six horses to do their best, I should not be willing to make the attempt entirely without inducement. Five thousand dollars should be hung up, and if that is done, I will put my horses into training at once, the entire purse to go to me if I lower the record to 2:50. If not I am to receive nothing. Or I will trot my six horses against any other three-pair team for $5,000 a side, winner to take all.

"It would take me about a month to get ready. I would be willing to trot on any first-class track—Hartford, Poughkeepsie, Chicago, Cleveland or any of those further south. Of course it is too late to bring about the event this fall, but my announcement is out in plenty of time to make it easy to arrange for the test early in the season of 1899. Judging from the crowd that witnessed my record-breaking performance of 1896 at old Fleetwood park, the men who put up would run the slightest risk of loss, for they could fully recoup themselves from the gate money. I should prefer to trot my horses against some other six-in-hand, because I would be surer of winning such a match than a trot against time, but I am quite ready for the latter, and on the shortest notice feasible.

"The team would be the same as the record-breaking one of 1896 with one exception Dexter, the nigh leader of that team, is dead. I was about ready to propose an attempt to make a 2:45 record when he died, and have been waiting then to find a horse to take his place. I have now found the horse, and my team will be made up in this way: Snip and Wilkes, leaders; Finn and a mare I call Josephine, in the middle, and Fleetwood and Fleetwing at the heels. I haven't the lightest doubt that this team will be able to better the old record."

Stamboul, 2:07 1-2.

Mr Samuel Gamble, when superintendent of the San Mateo Stock Farm, California, and in charge of the great stallion Stamboul, 2:07¼, said: "After trying Quinn's Ointment on some bunches, it gave such good satisfaction that I had Mr. O'Kane order one-half dozen bottles. I would not be without it, and cheerfully recommend it to my many friends."

Blue Grass Cuttings.

[American Stock Farm.]

"Old Buster," a sorrel pony owned by Edward Cooper, of Stanford, Ky., died last week at the age of thirty-six years. He had been in the family for thirty-two years and had been a useful and faithful servant.

It is said that Ben Kenney, the well known Lexington trainer, who has been in charge of the racing department of Bitter Root Farm, Hamilton, Montana, for a number of years, will locate in Boston next season and open a public stable there.

On his recent trip to the Blue Grass, Dr. J. C. McCoy bought about thirty yearlings and two-year-olds for his farm at Kirkwood, Delaware, and will have out a good racing stable next season in charge of John Hussey.

One of the most successful horsemen on the running turf this season is Mr. Thomas C. McDowell, son of Major H. C. McDowall, of Ashland Farm. His stable has won more races than that of any other Kentuckian.

Those who have nominations in the Stock Farm's Expectation Purse for foals of 1898 must not overlook the fact that a second payment on each nomination will be due on Wednesday, November 30, when $10 must be paid and name, color and sex must be given. There will be nothing more to pay in the three-year-old division until June 30, 1901.

Ex-Secretary W. C. Whitney will purchase a farm in Kentucky and establish a stud for the breeding of thoroughbreds, if he can find one to suit him. It is said that his agent here, Mr. S. T. Harbison, has an option on several blue grass farms, among them Highland Farm, the former home of Red Wilkes, now owned by Mr. H. L. Asher. The other farms are now used for the breading of thoroughbreds.

Ex-Secretary Ed A. Tipton, who is spending the winter in Lexington, thinks the betting system in vogue at the Montana tracks, of which he is manager, is the best in the world. During the meeting here Mr. Tipton said: "The mutual system is the best in the world for betting purposes, but it will never be a success save by associations which can afford to stand up and pocket a loss until the public become convinced of its merits. Then its success is assured. The public out my way will bet all kinds of money in the mutuals."

A summary of Scott Hudson's races and winnings during the season just closed shows that he has had a most successful year. During the season he has started in sixty-two races, winning fifteen, second nineteen times, third eight times, fourth five times, and divided second and third money twice, being behind the money but twelve times in the sixty-two starts. His winnings foot up $19,925, of which amount Eagle Flanagan and Anne Lee won about $6,000 each. He gave new records to Eagle Flanagan, 2:07½; Anne Lee, 2:07¾; Louise Mack, 2:10½; Seraphina (3), 2:16¼, and McMillan, 2:17¼.

Mrs. Ida Stoner, widow of the late Col. R. G. Stoner, has sold to Warran Stonar (the Colonal's only son) her half interest in the fast stallion Oakland Baron, 2:09¼, by Baron Wilkes—Lady Mackay, by Silverthreads. Mr. Stonar now owns three-fourths interest in the stallion, the other fourth belonging to his sistar, Mrs. Sidney Cley. It is reported that Mrs. Stoner received $5,000 for her interest in the horse. Mr. Stoner will put Oakland Baron at the head of a stud which he will establish. Oakland Baron is now six years old, and has won upwards of $30,000 in stakes and purses.

Humboldt Maid's Speed.

Among the writers on harness horse topics in America there are none to whom the California breeders and owners owe more of a debt of gratitude than to "Yarrum," the correspondent of the Chicago Horse Review, who hardly ever lets a week pass without giving some of our California horses a notice. Here is what he said about Humboldt Maid, the daughter of Waldstein, last week: "The little California mare, Humboldt Maid, 2:13½, that made a short campaign on this side of the mountains this year, will in all probability make Chicago her home. Mr. Hogeboom, her owner and driver, has been keeping her out at the Chicago yards since the close of the season with the object of selling her, and he expects to dispose of her before the end of the week. Humboldt Maid showed that she could trot in 2:10 in her first race, at Joliet, but she was not lucky enough to reduce the record of 2:13½ that she came over here with. It was common talk around the track at Joliet, where she was worked, that she could outbrush any pacer on the track except Joe Patchen. Mr. Hogaboom says he has not had her alongside of a trotter this year that she could not outbrush, and she must have met some pretty good ones when she started in the 2:08 class at Lexington. She is a sort of a "cat-gaited" trottar and can handle her feet as she pleases—step over a brick without losing her stride, or break and catch on a 25-foot piece. If she stays in Chicago she ought to beat any trotter in the city down the side drive."

A Weak Feature of Harness Racing.

Like all other lines of business, there are weak spots in harness racing, for the simple reason that the men who are interested are not progressive. The same rules and methods that were in use thirty years ago are in use to-day. The race tracks devoted to harness racing that are making money can be counted on the fingers of one hand—which is conclusive proof that there is something wrong with the system. Now that the season is past it is in order to agitate and advocate a few of the many needed reforms. To make racing popular with the public everything must be fair; and the main cause for the light attendance at the trotting tracks is the slipshod methods employed by the men who act as so-called judges. Under the present system the judges' stands are manned by incompetent and inexperienced men who render decisions that are unfair, and the public become disgusted. Some years ago anybody could start the horses. Now a professional starter is employed on all the tracks. But anybody is good enough to act as a judge; at least the average track manager thinks so, judging from the work that has come under the writer's observation the past season. The prominent citizan and good fellow judge has done more to injure the harness racing interest than any one thing that can be named. And now is the time to make a change. The professional judge is a necessity, and the quicker he is put to the front the quicker will the industry flourish. The three-judge system is all wrong. There should be but one judge, and he should be paid for his services and go right through a circuit. He should be under the supervision of the parent association. He should be a man that is thoroughly familiar with every angle of the game. He should be a man who could render fair and impartial decisions, have no friends and no axes to grind. He should be able to distinguish between a driver that is trying to win and one that is not. When he detects a man that is willfully violating the rules he should punish him, and punish him severely, and nobody should have the power to remove the penalties imposed for violation of the rules. If the judge does wrong he should be "set down." Men who have the most at stake should get together this winter and try to secure professionals in the judges' stand. There are a number of men who are seeking the position of paid judge on their cheek, that are not at all qualified to fill the position. That class of men are the kind that have injured the business. Every man that drives a horse is supposed to be a gentleman and should be treated as such until he proves himself otherwise. Any judge that will take advantage of his position to insult, bulldoze and browbeat a driver should be expelled. The writer has seen numerous cases where a driver would come into a stand in a gentlemanly way and ask for information and the judges would order him out in the most brutal way.

The public wants fair and honest racing, and expert judges will help to give the public what is wanted. Let us have professionals and have them ready for the season of 1899.—The Horse Review.

How Much Can a Horse Pull?

In England much of the switching of cars and making up of trains is done by horse power in the railway yards, and discussions as to the amount that a horse can start on a dead lift are quite frequent. The horses used in the English yards are the biggest of Shires and the weights they start and haul on the streets are unlimited to all appearances. It is doubtful, though, if the equine capacity has been enlarged in the last three quarters of a century, as the following from an English exchange shows: "An extraordinary—if not unparalleled—instance of weight-shifting by a draught horse is recorded in a book of 'Sporting Anecdotes,' by Pierce Egan published in 1825. A Mr. Banks made a bet that a common horse could draw 30 tons for six miles along metals (the Surrey railway), and that he should draw the weight from a dead pull and round the windings of the track. A number of gentlemen assembled near Merstham to witness this extraordinary triumph of art. Twelve wagons loaded with stones, each weighing above three tons, were chained together, and a horse, taken promiscuously from the timber cart of Mr. Harwood, yoked in front. He started from near the Fox public house and drew the immense chain of wagons with apparent ease to near the turnpike at Croydon, a distance of six miles, in one hour and forty-one minutes, which is nearly at the rate of four miles an hour. In the course of this time he stopped four times, to show that it was not by the impetus of the descent that the power was acquired, and after each stoppage he started the chain of wagons from a dead rest. Having gained his wager, Mr. Banks directed four more wagons to be added to the cavalcade, with which the horse set off with undiminished power. And still further to show the effect of the railway in facilitating motion, he directed the attending workmen—about fifty—to mount the wagons, and the horse again proceeded without the least distress; in truth, there seemed to be scarcely any limitation to the power of his draught." After the trial the wagons were weighed, the 12 weighing 38 tons, four cwt., two qrs., the four added afterwards 13 tons, two cwt., and the supposed weight of the fifty men was four tons; total, 55 tons, six cwt., two qrs.

QUINN'S OINTMENT

stands at the head of all veterinary remedies. Such troubles as Spavins, Curbs, Windpuffs, Splints, Bunches have no terrors for a horse if the master keeps and applies Quinn's Ointment. All well-known horsemen speak of it in the highest terms:

Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bell Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fulfills all claimed for it. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches, it has no equal.

Price $1.50. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail.

ARRANGEMENTS are now being perfected to giva a big race meeting in Spokane next spring, prior to tha opening of the Montana circuit.

ACCORDING to John Minchin, V. S, Dan Msce was the original inventor of toe weights, having first mada use of them at Mineola, L. I, over forty years ago.

A GREEN four-year old mare, by Esster Wilkes, was driven a half in 1:08, on the Alameda track one day this week by H. D. Brown, her trainer. She is peaches and cream.

A GENTLEMAN at Lockport, N. Y., is negotiating for tha once noted Western pacer Frea Coinage, 2:11¾. Frea Coinaga is by Steinway, dam by Elmo, and took his record as a three-yaar-old.

SEARCHLIGHT, Anaconda, Dione, and the other fast ones in Keating's string, are enjoying a well earned rest at Pleasanton. They are turned out to rnn in paddock every day, and kept up at night.

THE California bred stallion Daghestan, 2:23½, by Stamboul, out of Alta Belle, by Electioneer, second dam the great Beautiful Balls, is making a fall season in Ohio and has many wall hred mares booked to him.

THE filly hy McKinney, out of ona of his own daughters, owned by C. A. Durfae, is ona of tha handsomast weanlings in California, and there is not a defect about her. Sha will he a study for tha advocates of inhreding.

A MATCH race for $500 a corner may be made between Lenna N., 2:05¼, by Sidney; Princa Alert, 2:07½, by Crown Prince, and Democracy, 2:10½, by Happy Partner. Point Breeza track Philadelphia will probably ba selected for the race.

P. J. WILLIAMS, owner of Monterey, 2:09½, has applications from residents of Los Angeles county to book about thirty mares to his stallion, Ha may decide, however, to bring tha horse back to Alameda and maka tha season thera with him.

QUE ALLEN has now won all three great heat races dnring tha past season in Austria. Tha first ha won was the Vienna Souvenir Prize, $1,200, in which he won the first haat in 2:10¾, and the second in 2:10 1-5, creating a new European mark.

LAST year good mules suitabla for tha Hawaiian trada wara sold at $70 per head in California. During tha past few weeks a buyar from the Islands has been through Yolo and Solano counties, paying $100 per head for good young mnles.

WHY not have a few big stakes for trotters and pacers in California naxt year? One of $2,000 for trotters of the 2:15 class, entries to close March 1st, and horaes to ba named June 1st, ought to bring a good field togethar and prove a big drawing card.

ANDY MCDOWELL has ahipped bis stable to the Penn Vallay Farm, Morristown, Pa., whera ha will winter. Andy will train for William Runyon, a wealthy resident of Philadalphia, who recently purchased this farm from its former owner, H. S. Henry.

THE pacing filly, Miss Margaret, 3, 2:11½, by Direct, ona of tha atars of tha Griffith-Salisbury atabla in 1897, is now owned by P. A. Statlar, Wheeling, W. Va., who drove har in 2:11¼ over the half-mila track at that placa on Saturday, Octobar 29, timed by numerous watches.

H. D. BROWN, of Oakland, is training a coming two-year old by Diablo, 2:09¼, out of a mara by the old pacer, Washington, 2:20, that is ona of tha fastest trotters being worked on tha Alameda track. Tbis youngster should be haard from next year in tba stakes in which ha is entered.

T. D. CONDON, propriator of tha Marchants Hotal, Portland, Or., has bought tha speedy pacing mara Annie J., 2:21½, by Conifer; first dam by Dashwood, second dam by A. W. Richmond. Mr. Condon will driva har on tbe road this winter and placa her in training in the spring.

ALTHOUGH the season's trotting record for mares stands at 2:09¼, by Mattie Patterson and Dione, threa different ones wera timed in 2:08 in races, Dione in the first heat of the Tranaylvania at Lexington, and Mattia Patterson and Caracalla in tha last heat of the Douglas at Louisvilla.

IF you have any promising trotters or pacers rnoning out, better make arrangements to get them up by tha first of the year so that tbay may be ready for the circoit of 1899. Thare will ha at least fifteen good meetings in California next summer, and tha purses will ranga from $500 to $1,000.

SILVER RING, 2:14½, will he shipped to the Fasig sale, which is to be held in New York next week. Wa venture the prediction that Cohwebs or no other horse can outbrush her on tha speedway. She is by Silver Bow, 2:16, and ona of tha best roadsters in California, as well as a good raca mare.

Two hundred additional box stalls wera built doring tha summer at Selma, Ala., to accommodata tha trainers who intend wintering thera. The first prominent lot of horses to reach Selma is tha stabla of Roy Miller, which includas Grattan Boy, 2:08; Timorah, 2:12½; the pacer Quadrige, 2:07½, etc. Several other stables ara axpected shortly.

WHEN that good filly Gracie Onward won tbe Stock Farm Purse for foals of 1896 at tha lata Lexington meeting she trotted barefooted. Her shoes had been removed with tha intention of turniog her out for the winter, and whan her ownar reconsiderad this decision and concluded to raca her it was too late to hava her shod, and as the going was soft she was racad without shoes.

THE next regular meeting of tha Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Association will ha held at tha Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, Tuesday, December 6, 1898, at 10 A. M., for the transaction of such business as may properly ba presented to tha Boärd for its consideration. All naw applications and written evidenca must be received at this office not later than November 20, 1898.

ARRANGEMENTS have been finished for giving a three-day meeting at Selma, Ala, beginning on December 6th. As several trainars will wintar thair horses at that point it is though the meeting will he characterized by soma high class performances. An effort is also being mada to arranga a winter circuit, beginning at Selma on the data mentioned and including tha cities of Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham.

THE California BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, an apparent authority, states that tha price paid for Directum, 2:05½, by Mr. Spiers, was $30,000. Mr. Spiers himself states, howaver, that it waa $20,000, and deprecates axsggarating tha price.—Turf, Field and Farm. [This paper stated tha price at $30,000 on tha authority of tbe Messrs Green themselves, who cama to tha BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office on the day tbe eala was negotiated and gava us tha information in regard to it.—ED.]

IT is said that Lady Flansgan, dsm of Esgla Flanagan, 2:07½, who was long driven on the road in Brooklyn, N. Y., by John R. Flansgan, once trotted a mila in 2:22½. She was not bred until well along in yaars, but has already threa trotters to her credit—Eagle Flanagan, 2:07½, by Eagle Bird; Marshall, 2:20, by Egbert, and Fly, 2:24¾, by The King. She is called "untraced" by the Register, but was always represented as a daughter of Wood's Hambletonian, tha roan son of Alexander's Abdallah.

SETH GRIFFIN has just completed a first-class half-mila track at Clear Point Farm, owned by Mr. T. A. Wilson, at Reading, Pa. Mr. Wilson, who is just beginning to establish a breeding farm, has placed in the stud, witb a small band of well-selected mares, tha good young stallion, Director Moora, by Director, out of Nancy Lee (dam of Naocy Hanks, 2:04), by Dictator. George Foster, formerly head trainer at A. H. Moore's famous Cloverdell Farm, will have charga of tha training department.

SAM GAMBLE went out to the speed track ona day this week and got up behind Mr. Bradbury's Nutwood Wilkes filly for tha purpose of driving her a trial qnartar or two, just to sea bow good she was. Sam says ha had ridden bahind two trotters before in his lifa tbat had pull him a quarter better than 31 eeconds—Stamboul and H. R. Covey—but that Mr. Bradbury's littla mara took him a quartar faster than ha aver rode before. She is one of the coming great ones in tha hands of a first-class trainer.

ONE of tha really promising young trotters in California is tha colt Vendoma, by Iran Alto, 2:18¾, son of tha dead champion, Palo Alto, 2:03¾. Vendoma is but eigbteen months old and is not on howing acqnaintance witb any gait hnt the trot. His dam, Linda Oaks, is by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, and tha next dam by Nutwood. Mr. Rea, his owner, has given him the nama of his atock farm, tha Vandoma, and beliaves he will add fame to his birthplace whenevar ha starts in tha races. Vendoma has baen entered in all the prominent colt stakes in this Stata for two and three year-olds.

MR. MCEACHRAN, who for yaara lived in Montana and shod all the fast horses that trottad and paced over that circuit, haa removed to San Francisco with his family and establisbed himself at 104 Golden Gata avanua. Mr. McEachran is an up-to-data horse-sboer and has tha very highest recommendations from tbe leading trainers for whom ha haa dona work. Ha has ahod sucb horses as Saarchlight, Anaconda, Lenna N., Stam B, Klamath, and all the cracks that hava appeared on tha Montana circuit. Give him a trial and ha will damonstrata to your eatisfaction that he knows how to shoe a horse.

HERE is an opportunity. The thoroughbred stallion Lodowic, by Longfellow, is for sale, together with eight large mares selected and hred to him last spring with the idea of producing carriage horses. They are all with foal. Horses can remain on the place, and ten tons of alfalfa hay and the use of ten acres of alfalfa pasture will be given until next October. The usa of a good dwelliog of three rooms, together with use of barns will be included. The owner is going East to liva and will sell at a price that will astonish anyone. Full particulars at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, 22½ Geary street.

IT is to ba hoped that tha Eastern papers will correct tha report of Orrin Hickok's illness that bas been going tba rounds. Mr. Hickok has not suffered a stroka of paralysis. He has rheumatism in ona arm that was rather severe when he first cama back from tha East, but the California climata is curiog that. Could tha newspaper writers have seen tha veteran reinsman nearly every evening last week coming out of the big ferry depot at the foot of Market street and making for a cabla car in a jog, they would know that there is life in the old man yet. He attends tha races hera nearly every day.

THERE ara just four stallions tbat have sired thrae trotters each with records better than 2:10—Electioneer, Young Jim, Alcyone and Chimes. To tha credit of Electioneer are Arion, 2:07¾; Sunol, 2:08¼, and Palo Alto, 2:08¾. Young Jim has Trevillian, 2:08¼; David B, 2:09¼, and Dandy Jim, 2:09¾. Alycone sired Martha Wilkes, 2:08; Bosh, 2:09½, and Harrietta, 2:09¾. To Chimes is credited Fantasy, 2:06; The Abbott, 2:08, and The Monk, 2:08¼. Chimes' three hava the fastest averaga—2:07 5-12. Electioneer averages 2:08 3-12. Alcyone's averages 2:09 1-12. Young Jim averages 2:09½. The average time of the twelve horses representing tha four great sires is 2:08 11-12.

THE National Horse Show Association has received four antries in the special class for pacers having records of 2:06 or better, and the horse will ba shown for tha $300 prize, notwithstanding the absence of Star Pointer. Besides John R. Gentry, 2:00½, and Klatawah, 2.05½, tha pair entered a week ago Robert J., 2.01½, and Direct 2:05½, wera named at the last moment by their owners, Lewis G. Tewkesbury and James Butler. Three of the four competitors have held the world's record at their way of going, and the remaining horse Klatawah, is now tha champion three-year-old pacer. The parade for tha ribbons will take place at noon on Novamber 19th, the closing day of tha show.

GEO. BERRY, the general superintendent of Mr. A. B. Spreckels' private stables on Fell street in this city, has a couple of four-year-old mares under his charga that he thinks will he worth taking to the races next summer. Ona by Cupid has been named Psyche, and sha is a natural born trotter. Sha could hardly he otherwise as sha is out of Gracia S., 2:22, tha dam of Dione, 2:09¼. Psyche looks very much lika Diona in conformation, except she is larger and more rogged looking. Another daoghter of Copid out of Emma S. is showing lots of speed. These two will be campaigned through California next year if the district fairs are held. There is also nnder Mr. Berry's charge a gelding by Dexter Prince out of Lady Herculee that will be a whirlwind when ever ha gets steady at either gait. He can trot a two minuta clip nearly, hut will break from it into a pace and then back to a trot again, a half dozen times within a half mile.

THE great old pacer Johnson, 2:06½, is dead at tha aga of twenty-two years. Ha was the property of Charles F. Dunhar, of Buffalo, who had him destroyed on account of his old aga. In many respects Johnson was the most remarkable horse that tha harness racing world has ever known. His first public appearance was in 1881. Three years later ha placed tbe world's record at 2:06½, driven by John Splan. It is still the best record to tha high wheel sulky. During bis career Johnson paced 137 miles below 2:30, after which ha become tha property of Mr. Dunbar, who drove Johnson in many of his races. Among tha records which Mr. Dunbar made was tha mark of 2:10 over a half mila track, taken in 1893. Johnston at that time was sixteen years old. Sinca Mr. Dunbar ratired tha vetarao, he has lived a lifa of ease and comfort, with a big pasture all to himself in tha summer and a fine paddock in tha winter. Tha old horsa retsined his form until last summer, when he began to fail rapidly.

WHEN Dr. George H. Bailey, tbe well known horseman and veterinary surgeon of Portland, Me., mada the prediction that tha 2:00 trotter was a long way off, so distant, in fact, that it was doubtful if any of tba older generation of horsemen would liva to sea it, ha stirred any amount of criticism all aloog tha lina. That was just after Alix had mada her record of 2:03¾, and then too the record had been atesdily dropping sinca the advent of tha "bike" sulky and it was easy to show that as a matter of aritbmetical progression tba two minnta mark would ba reached in a faw years, but although four years hava passed since tha daughter of Patronaga mada tha record, it can not ba said that her world's record has never been in danger. It is trua that both trotting and pacing races all over tha big circuits and at tha small country fairs ara in faster time and thara are more really good horses out than formerly, but is this not due as much to tha improvement of tracks, the bika sulky and to better methods of training, as to any improvement in the speed of our horses? A few years ago such four-year-olds as Nico 2:08¼, John Nolan 2:08, atc, wera onheard of; and nearly all tha big stakes bava been won in faster tima than evar belore, but when it comes to the supreme test, the ability to trot a mila in 2:03¾, tbera has not been a horsa out this season that had tha slightest show to accomplish tba task. Of all tbe horses which performad tha past season, probably the larger number of horsemen would pick Nico as tha ona most likely to train on to the record. That if nothing happens to him he will take a much faster record than 2:08¼ is certain, but 2:03¾ is a hard mark to shoot at and tben just think of thosa three and threa quarters seconds, wbich divida tha preseot record from tha two minuta mark, and tha feat seems beyond the powers of any horsa. Doubtless the speed and stamina of tha trotter will conti ue to ha improved by careful selection and judicioos matiog of individuals, but barring some innovation like tha bika sulky, the two minuta trottar certainly looks to ba a long way off.—Boston Globe.

San Francisco, Saturday, November 19, 1898.

INGLESIDE RACE TRACK never looked prettier than it did last Monday, the opening day of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club's winter meeting. There was the usual opening day crowd, betting ring and grand stand being well filled. The casual observer noticed that there was a wider expanse of lawn than last year, more flowers and shrubs, the trees were larger and the foliage on them had improved during the summer. The buildings were all burnished with new paint, and there was an air of neatness about the place that Easterners said was a little ahead of anything seen on the tracks over on the other side of the big mountains. In the Judges' stand Edwin F. Smith, the well-known Secretary of the State Agricultural Society, had been installed as presiding judge. He is assisted by Henry Kuhl, while Norman Brough acts as handicapper and third judge. These gentlemen have performed their duties well, and the racing has not only been satisfactory, but really good. The weather has not been as pleasant as racegoers would like to see, several days being rather damp and foggy, but it has not been uncomfortably cold at any time, and there has been sunshine most of the time. Burns & Waterhouse enjoyed the distinction of winning the opening race. The University Stakes, run on the opening day, distance one mile, for three-year-olds, was won by Mr. Matt Storn's Morello colt, Morellito. There was nothing remarkable about the race. Morellito was the best of four that went to the post, and though he had to be shaken up to win, did the trick easily enough, beating Cyril a length, who was twice that distance in front of Rosormonde, and she three lengths ahead of Hohenlohe. Piggott rode four of the five winners during the day, and there are those who say that this boy, with a little coaching, will rank among the leading jockeys of America if he does not take on weight too rapidly. There is a dearth of high-class horses at Ingleside as well as at Oakland, but the class will improve as the season advances. It is a general remark among all patrons of the track, however, that the racing is cleaner this season than ever. The officers of the two clubs are entitled to much praise for their efforts to put the sport on a high plane in this State and keep it there.

BOARDS OF DIRECTORS of all the District Fair Associations in California should hold meetings immediately and make the preliminary arrangements for the fairs to be held next year. In many of the district boards are vacancies that need filling, and the organizations that were compelled to do nothing by reason of no appropriations to work with, should now show signs of life and activity. It has been suggested that the President of every agricultural district in the State call his Board of Directors together as soon as possible and provide for the filling of vacancies. The most energetic and competent citizens should be selected as Directors, and there should be a competent Secretary elected. It should be the aim of every agricultural district in the State to hold as good a fair this year as possible, and the principal thing will be to announce that fact right away. Let it be known that there will be generous premiums offered for all sorts of agricultural products and live stock. Make the pavilion exhibit a feature also—in short arrange for one of the old time district fairs to be conducted in a modern, up-to-date manner. Provide for speed contests of course, and make the purses as large as can be given, but do not neglect the agricultural, horticultural and other display for the racing. It will be provided for and will pay its own way if the fair is given. The coming legislature will surely restore the appropriations and the new Governor will not veto the bill. There is nothing to prevent the district fairs being held next year on a grander scale than ever except lethargy on the part of the Directors. If they will get together and show that they are in earnest in their desire to hold good exhibitions, success will reward their efforts. They should act immediately.

TO-NIGHT, at the Occidental Horse Exchange, 721 Howard street, 28 yearlings from E. J. Baldwin's celebrated Santa Anita Farm, will be sold to the highest bidder. This is undoubtedly the finest looking lot of youngsters that ever came from Santa Anita to an auction sale. The success that has attended the youngsters sold from this farm last year is a guarantee that this lot comprises a great many that will be among the winners when raced. Emperor of Norfolk is a sire whose merit has been proven, Gano's progeny have won over $100,000, Amigo is proving a phenomenal stallion, as has imp. Duncombe; the performances of Rio Chico, Los Medanos, Lord Chesterfield and others will cause the Chesterfields to be in great demand, while the younger sires, Cerito II. and Honduras, are from such wonderful racing and producing families and are such grand individuals that their sons and daughters can scarcely fail to be speedy and sturdy.

On Wednesday night of next week, at the same place, the yearlings from Chas. Kerr's Antrim Farm are to be sold. Twenty-two of the twenty-four yearlings in this consignment were bred at Antrim Farm, the remaining two by that successful breeder, Marcus Daly, of Montana. Wonderfully well have the horses bred at Antrim turned out, for from its paddocks have come the grand race mare, Olive, winner of twenty-nine races and over $10,000; Mobalaska, also a winner of about $9,000; J. O. C., the best young jumper that ever appeared in California, with over $6,000 to his credit; Crawford, winner of over $6,000; Lena, winner of seven races this season, four in succession; Aprona, Octuruck, Rio Frio, Viking, Antrim, San Emegdio, Semele, Jennie K., Lena, Lorena II. (winner of several stakes), Castake, Uncle Tom, Coupon, William O'B. and many other excellent performers. The owner of Antrim Farm believes in the old Yorkshire saying, "Half a horse goes down its throat," and, in consequence, no breeder brings a better looking or larger lot of yearlings to the mart every year than he. It is really a pleasure to attend sales at the Occidental Horse Exchange. Mr. Layng has made every arrangement for the accommodation of his patrons and as the building is brilliantly lighted and the chairs most comfortable, the attendance is always large.

TEN BIG STAKES, including the Burns' Handicap for $10,000, to be run at the winter meeting of the California Jockey Club at Oakland, close next Monday. The stakes with the amounts and conditions will be found in our advertising columns. Don't let the date go by without making your entries. These are the richest stakes given on this side of the continent.

THE SALE of yearlings from Pale Alto Stock Farm will be held Tuesday evening, November 29th. It will be conducted by Killip & Co. A full list of the yearlings to be sold will appear in our next issue.

Pleasanton Items.

[From the Times.]

J. M. Alviso is the proud possessor of a yearling pacer by Diablo and out of Rosita A. which is claimed to be a wonder and is considered the star of all pacers of its age. Al claims that the animal has gone better than seventeen, hitched to a cart and can beat any other pacer in the county.

Mr. Sutherland has in training eight fine Direct colts. In conversation with him Sunday morning he said: "It is surprising how fast those youngsters can get over the ground. I have one, the fastest I am training, that can go a half in fifteen, almost as easy as if going along the county road. The oldest of the eight is a four-year-old and out of the whole I never saw a finer lot of colts for age and speed in my life." The colts are all Direct colts and from appearances, as Mr. Sutherland remarks, the ranch appears to be a "Direct farm."

C. L. Crellin and T. E. Keating paid the Sutherland Stock Farm a visit last week and were greatly surprised at the manner in which the Direct colts were showing speed. It is stated that negotiations for one of the colts are being considered.

Safety and Humanity.

A fence that will effectually keep live stock in or out without the objectionable feature of great cost and the danger attendant on the use of the cruel barbed wire is one that every stock raiser needs. Just such a fence as this is to be had in the "American" all steel woven wire Field Fence, in addition to the condition of its durability, cheapness and easy facility of construction it has the additional advantage of being an ornamental structure, in fact, it is in every way the stock raisers best friend. See advertisement in this week's issue.

J. B. Chase's Yearlings Sell Well.

At the Occidental Horse Exchange Tuesday night, the yearlings from the Sonoma farm of Mr. J. B. Chase were sold. Mr. Ed. Lowry made his first appearance as an auctioneer in California and created a very favorable impression. There was a very fair attendance, and although the bidding was not particularly animated and no very large prices obtained, the average was very good. There were also sold two three-year-olds and the aged stallions Del Norte and Dare. The following is a summary of the sale:

THE London Sporting Times of October 29th, in commenting upon Sloan's riding, says: "A 'donbting Thomas' of a stable lad seeing Sloan go out the Birdcage on Sea Fog on Thursday was heard to remark to another stable lad, 'He's no bloomin' wonder; bnt he will be if he gets home on that.' We have always looked upon Sea Fog as one of the worst horses in training, and yet here Sloan got away first on him, and beat a field of seventeen, one of which was Hermiston, who was considered the good thing of the week, and was backed like it. The bookmakers now cheer any jockey that beats Sloan, and of the English lot T. Loates, who does it most, is the idol of the hour. After Sloan had gained his second victory on the Cambridgeshire day a bookmaker in the silver ring was observed to fall back in a limp manner on the rails, and in a feable voice, say, 'Evens Nunsuch, 33 to 1 bar one.' At the risk of it being said that there is 'too much Sloan,' and also granting that if any English lightweight had a backing mob around him, the authorities would soon have something to say, we are distinctly of the opinion that the visit of Sloan to this country has been of advantage to the English turf. We have over and over again in these columns dwelt on the miserable manner in which many of the English jockeys rode, crawling along in a way that no one could call racing, and making a bit of a spurt at the finish. Well might a prominent trainer say, 'It is no use my having a horse that can stay and is thoroughly fit if his stamina and fitness are not to be brought out.' Against this school of jockeys Morny Cannon scored right and left and beat them at their own game. Sloan now seems to have frightened them all out of their wits, and three times this week M. Cannon was observed to ride as though the devil was after him, and he won each time. He would have been beaten to a certainty if he had adopted his old tactics on Frontier in the Dewhurst Plate, as Caiman was catching him at every stride. This time Sloan adopted more of a waiting policy, which probably was right, looking at the extra weight the horse was carrying, adding to which, if he were not misinformed, Camian has been slightly 'off' since he won the Middle Park Plate."

A letter recently received in New York by William Easton from William Allison, of the London Sportsman, strongly advises against the indiscriminate shipping of thoroughbred stock for sale in England. Mr. Allison intimates that the recent successful sale of Mr. Haggins yearling fillies could not be accepted as any criterion as to what English buyers would do with regard to any future big consignments. As illustrative of the point, Mr. Easton stated that a few years ago he himself bought about forty head of high class yearlings on speculation for shipment to England. He sent a few of them over as a sort of feelar, and these were sold by Tattersalls at profitable prices. Emboldened by this success he then consigned the balance of them to the Messrs. Tattersalls, but when they were offered for sale buyers stood around with hands in pockets and refused to bid. Evidently they did not like the idea of an American invasion of home markets on a wholesale scale. Moreover, they doubted the catalogued pedigrees of the youngsters, and altogether the sale proved to be far from as profitable as had been expected. The point about the matter seems to be that the English buyer in the thoroughbred market is exceedingly conservative, and, while he is willing to pay his price under satisfactory conditions, he is not inclined to view with complacency any serious inroads of foreign competition with his home products. American breeders would therefore do well to think twice before sending yearlings to England. In fact, unless done in the right way and with the proper facilities for placing the merits of the stock before English buyers, it might be injudicious to make the attempt at all. This is not saying that choice American yearlings cannot be sold to advantage in England. Merely that Mr. Haggin, personally and through his agents, is known on the other side as one of the largest of American breeders, and it is reasonable to suppose that this fact had great weight in enabling him to realize handsome prices for fillies, many of which were representatives of imported Australian blood desired by English breeders.

Fish Law Violators.

A number of Signor Pelidini's (le pescador grende) maccaroni setellites have been stirred up with the long pola that is often nsed by public officials, endowed with a cartein emount of police authority, on culprits of various degrees of turpitude jost previous to a threatened session of the Legisleture.

Deputy Fish Commissioners Davis, Lowe end Vogelseng heve been making things interesting for the fishmongers of this city during the past few deys. Under the State law of 1879 it is unlawful to cetch striped bass under three pounds in weight. This wes for the pnrpose of protecting the fish that had bean brought from the East for the weters of the West. The little fellows have thrived until now there are thousends in the rivers end bay. If given a chance they will grow es heevy as fifty pounds and they ere as gamy a fish as ewims. During tha last week tha bay hes been full of these fish and the fishermen have been taking them in their nets, big, little and all. The only wey of reaching the offenders is to punish the men who sell the fish and thereby encourage the fishermen to violate the law.

Within the pest two days the officials mentioned have been meking an inspaction of tha several fish markets and arresting ell of the dealers who hed undersized bass—under threa pounds—in thair possession. The offenders were Arnold R. Seyden, Chinook market; Benanico, Spreckels market; Ah Lum, Chinatown; G. Barsolini, 303 Hayes street; A. Frediano & Co., Hayes end Octavia streets; D. Bellimoni, 301 Hayes street, and R. Maye, Montgomery merket. The latter was convicted and yesterday paid a fine of $20. In all of these places many bess weighing less then a pound were found.

In the fall of 1895 the California Fish Commissioners brought from the East 1,000 big mouth hleck bess fry, which were pleced at the hetchery at Sissons to attain sufficient growth to hettle for themselves in the streams of Californie. The first distribution of these fish in the public weters is now teking place.

A few days ago 100 two-yeer-old fish were put into the Russian river, near Duncans Mills. One hundred more ware placed in the San Joaquin river near Tracey and 250 in the same stream in Fresno county. Lest week Lake Merced received 100 fish, and 50 were put into the Tule river in Tulere county. This week 400 fish was shipped to the San Joaquin river to be placed in the water neer the mouths of the Stanislans and Mokelumne rivers.

The big mouth black hass ere especially edapted to werm waters and they grow to be much larger than the small mouth veriety now common in many of the streams of the State. The Commissioners believe they will flourish in the weters of the San Joaquin river and its many tributaries end sloughs thet branch far out from it into all of the surrounding country. There is no douht that in a few years these streems will he filled with fine food and game fish. The Commissioners make the urgent request that anglers in eny of the streams mentioned, and especially in ths Russian river, will refrain from taking any hig mouth black bass for a few vears until the fish have a chence to increase. Every fish returned to the water will mean plenty of sport in the future. The big mouth black hass is eesy to distinguish from eny other of the finny tribe.

■ It is larger than the small mouth variety and the size of the mouth is a most distinguishing feature. It is also of a much brighter silvery color.

A conger eel 5 feet 4 inches long and weighing 26½ pounds was recently ceptnred with rod and line fishing from a boat in the waters off Deal, Englend. The engler hooked this monster eel with whiting teckle; en exciting struggle ensued lesting twenty minutes, before the fish could be geffed, it kept up the fight in the boet, lashing ahout and meking desperate efforts to escepe.

If the Boerd of Supervisors of Sonoma county will embody in their contemplated new protective fish and game ordinence, meesures to rid Russian river of the netting gang they will do a great deal towards making thet streem one of the best fishing resorts in Californie. This meesure will bring meny dollars to business men end othere in thet district.

A ten mile section of the Truckea near Reno has recently been drained by the irrigation ditches, leaving thonsands of trout of ell sizes to die end rot in the almost stagnant pools of the river bed. This is most unfortunate, but the fermers are having a hard time up there this year end the water was needed for crops.

Changes in the striped hess law will be edvoceted at Secramento. Interested parties desire that fish waighing two pounds cen be teken legally. This proposition should he fought vigorously by all sportsmen.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all tha Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no hanges hava been made this year, but tha ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the Stata law. Tha following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter tha open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:

Alpine—Deer, Sept. 2 to Oct. 15.
Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15.
Colusa—Deer, Ang. 15 to Oct. 15.
Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Contra Costa—Deer, Jnly 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited).
El Dorado—Doves, Jnly 20 to Feb. 1.
Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game ont of the county prohibited
Humboldt—Grouse and Wilson snipe, Sept. 1 to Fab. 15. Killing of waterfowl prohibited between one-half hour after sunset and one-half hour before sunrise.
Kern—Shipping game ont of the county prohibited.
Lake—Deer, Ang. 1 to Oct. 1.
Los Angeles—Shipping game to markets outside of the county prohibited.
Marin—Deer, Jnly 15 to Sept. 15.
Madera—Market hunting prohibited.
Monterey—Deer, July 15th to Sept. 1st. (Use of dogs prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5.
Orange—Doves, Ang. 1 to Feb. 1. Deer, Ang. 15 to Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5. Ducks, Nov. 1 to March 1. Ducks and quail, shipment from the county restricted as follows: No person shall ship ducks or quail out of the county in quantities to exceed two dozen birds a week.
Riverside—Shipping gama out of tha county prohibited.
San Benito—Deer, Ang. 1 to Sept. 15. (Market hunting prohibited).
Santa Barbara—Deer, Ang. 1 to Ang. 22. Use of hounds prohibited. Quail, one day, Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).
San Diego—Shipping quail out of the county prohibited.
San Luis Obispo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. Doves, July 15 to Dec. 1. (Use of hounds prohibited. Hunting for markets situated outside of the county prohibited).
San Mateo—Deer, Jnly 15 to Ang. 26. (Use of dogs not prohibited. Market hunting prohibited). Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. (Shooting from boat at high tide prohibited).
Shasta—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1.
Sierra—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Sutter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan. 1.
Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game ont of tha county prohibited.
Ventura—Quail, any variety, Oct. 1, to Nov. 1.

Hunting and Fishing in the South

Is the title of an apparently interesting pamphlet puhlished by the Southern Railway Compeny end copyrighted by W. A. Turk, General Passenger Agent of seid company. This roed claims to reech all points in the South where the hest hunting end fishing cen he secnred.

We were uneware that this corporation contemplates parrelleling the Southern Pacific routes in this State and particulerly the roadway taking sportsmen nearest to a point on Grizzly Island, Solano county, Californie, known to duck hunters as Grizzly bey, this hody of water heing one of the arms of Suisun hay. The idea is suggested by a half-tone angraving, copied from a photograph, and published on Page 32 of the pamphlet aforementioned. The picture is entitled "A day's hunt near Brunswick" and is one of the illustrations embellishing a very nicely written article on hunting and fishing in Georgia.

The title is evidently a printer's mistake—the originel picture was taken by Mr. James Maynard, a well-known San Francisco sportsman, on January 24, 1898, the negative is now in his possession and so is a heautifnl large oil painting of the seme subject. The hunter sitting aft on top of the cahin is C. J. Legros, one of the best as wall as widely known merket hunters in California, his companion sitting forward next the mast of the scow is John Sandal, the cook of the outfit, while Joe Costa of Martinez is eeated on deck near the stern. Mr. Meynard was in the vicinity hut he is not seen in the picture, es he wes teking snep shots with his camera, his presence at this duck hunt is made apparent by the string of 236 ducks (California ducks, not Georgiane) meny of which fall to his gun, his reputation as a crack wing shot heing a deserved one.

Further comment is unnecessary, except that we feel very much flattered that Eastern corporations like to use California hunting scenes to embellish their publicetions and at the seme time we must deprecate the carelessness in proof reeding of the individual who allows erroneons titles to creep in. Some of the general public might be inclined to look upon the whole fabric es e feiry story.

Petaluma Notes.

Mondey evening last the Sportsmen's Club met in session at Staiger's gun store, and made final errengements for the grend free-for-all hunt to he held under the euspices of the Club. A full membership was present and great interest was menifested.

This will be the most extensive hunt ever held neer this city, and a regular war will he waged against the bluejays and hawks, says the Petaluma Argus. For some time to come the chicken men in this vicinity will live in safety from the depredations of these birds on their flocks. Every one who owns a gun will ba ont to gain the money prizes oflered. Following are the correct rules regulating the hunt, es determined upon by the Club:

1. Hunt to take place on Friday, Saturday end Sunday, November 18, 19 and 20, 1898.

2. Game to ha killed: Bluejays and hawks; bluejeys to count one point each and hawks ten points each.

3. Game to be at the store of P. J. Steiger, Petelume, not latar than 7:30, P. M., Sunday, Novamher 20, 1898.

4. Petaluma Sportsmen's Club will give the following cesh prizes to individuals outside of cluh mambers scoring the highest number of pointe, first prize, $10; second prize, $8; third, $5; fourth, $4; fifth, $3, and a speciel prizs of $5 to club membar meking highest score. Petelume Sportsmen's Club members are barred from competing for prizes given to outsiders.

6. Hunt open to eny and all persons.

7. Committee to count game and award prizes: P. J. Steiger, S. J. Hopkins and Art S. Newhurgh.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

The shoot at the Empire Club grounds on Sunday geve a dozen sportsmen a feir number of ducks each.

Sonoma county sportsmen will soon induce the county officials to pass en ordinance protecting geme and ehortening the open season.

Los Banos district mekes tha hanner bid for hunters of goose-shooting proclivities; the white goose is present in thet locelity in countless thousends just now.

Jim Maynard, C. A. Height end Dr. E. N. Ayers visited the "mysterious island" on Sonday last. The bag counted up nearly four dozen ducks end three dozen English snipe.

W. Martin, R. Martin, C. J. Noyes and C. Taggart sho forty-two ducks in two deys' shooting on the lagoon neer Castroville. Mellerds, cens end other varieties were in the bag.

In e recent article on the stings of insects, the London Lencet recommends the old remedy of applying the juice of e rew onion in the casa of wasps end hses. For mosquito bites ipececuenhe wine or a paste of the powder should be epplied to relieve the irritation.

The region neer Albany, Oregon, has tbe reputetion among sportsmen of offering excellent pheasant shooting. Frank Maskey and Homer Davenport pecked their grips and left for that point last Sunday evening. Thay will be gone for two weeks. Lady Rods Chefl will nudonhtedly show to good edventage on the Mongolien pheasant.

The League of American Sportsmen wes incorporated in New York on November 5, 1898. The principal business is loceted in New York city The objects of the organization ere for the protection of fish and game and to aid in the enforcement of fish, game end ,forestry laws. The directors are: G. O. Shields, E. S. Thompson, A. A. Anderson and W. T. Hornaday of New York city; F. S. Hyett, of Clinton Benk; Dr. C. Hert Merriam, of Weshington, D. C., and W. A. Richardson, of Cheyenne, Wyo.

The Black Jack trio, "Sherman" Bill Nye and Fred Johnson, who were at Sherman island last Sundey, found ducks galore and also a few geese to fill in with. The combined hag counted ninety-five ducks, principally widgeon and sprig, with a few mallerd and a solitary grey duck, eight grey geese rounded out the count to 103 birds. President Lemmer met the boys at the ferry with an express wagon. On the train coming to the city the shooters were the envy of quite a number of hunters who were returning home more or less empty-handed. Bill Nye's felicitation over their first good shoot wes contagious and, we are sorry to say, drove a number of people on tha train, and elsewhere, to drink. Stump Weyman was so chagrined et being ebsent thet he smashed his favorite camera. Secretary Markland who was to heve gone on the trip, was accused of being very indifferent at shooting on the wing, he seys that he "can shoot ducks on the wing all right, but not when the birds are flying."

The present state of activity at the laading Eastern gun and rifle factories of the country is greater than the seme factories have known for several yeers past. Shotguns end rifles—except for military purposes—are essentially luxuries, and in times of business or industriel depression the manufacturer of and dealer in luxuries is the first to suffer end the last to feel the effects of revived trade condition Until quite recently, sioce 1892, the firearms industry hes experienced a most discouraging period. Not a few of them, perticularly those making a specialty of high-priced sportsmen's gons, having been compelled to largely reduce their force of workmen and operate only part of the time. The climex was reached during the past spring and summer, when the troubles that culminated in the late war affected to a greeter or less extent ell classes of industriel enterprises—the gun trede more adversely than all. September, however, showed a surprising increase in the demand for sportsmen's supplies, and October ushered in a condition of things which has put all gun factories at their wits' end to fill their orders. Now gun factories are working overtime and with full forces; in some instances orders are being unhesitetingly refused, and it is difficult to obtain a definite promise anywhere es to delivery, even on single guns.

"We are busier then we heve been for years," seid the menegar of a prominent factory, in answer to the writer's inquiry. "The improvement began some weeks ago, end has continued steadily. There ssems to he no indicetion of a let-up."

"The change is as gratifying es it was unexpected," seid Treasurer Hunter of the Hunter Arms Company. "We heve steedily increased our force end fecilities, until todey we ere turning out three times the number of finished guns daily than we hed ever done in past years, and are working overtime, at that. The most encouragfng feeture of the improvement in trada is that a hig percentege of our orders are for high-grade end high-priced L. C. Smith guns, ranging in price from $100 to $250. Yes, there seems to he every indication that the improvement is a permanent one.

"Our outpnt is practicslly sold to July 1, 1899," said the treesurer of enother arms compeny. "We have been under the painful necessity of repeatedly turning down orders during the past thirty days."

At the factory of a well known New York gun company fires have not been banked in the furnace any night for six weeks past before 10:30 o'clock at night, from fourteen to fifteen hours heing crowded into a day's work.

Othar manufactnrers are equally busy, and reports from the various gun-building centers in New England show thet the factories there ere enjoying their full shere of the new order of things.

Wall-posted makers scarcely considar the fall shooting seeson in their theories es to the ceuses for this improvement. It is due, in their opions, to the unquestioned beginning of a revival of trede ectivity—end business confidence all along the line—e revival that they predict will be more pronounced after the election and the conclusion of the present negotiations with the Spanish government.

Local dealers raport a good, full business. Clebrough, Golcher & Co., besides supplying the demend for various leading mekes, heve found e ready sala for the Clebroogh gun. The E. T. Allan Co. also report a large demand for shot-guns made by the prominent eastern menufacturers end elso other guns which they cerry in stock.

A Knickerbocker Deer Battue.

An eccount of the results of the hunt on the first dey of the open seeson for deer on Long Island appears in a recent issue of the Commercial Advertiser. That a stetute is extant in the Empire State, which will allow of occurrences of this character is surely an oversight, to drew it mildly, on the pert of an otherwise intelligent and sports-loving com-

nity. This account leads one to think that it was the winter outing of the "Timidy D's" or the Harlem Huskies. The game hog and ground sluicer, we are sorry to say, is more in evidence on the coast than we care to see, but with all our faults in that direction we venture the assertion that the occurrences below given would never have a notice in the chronicles of sport on the Pacific Coast.

"November 2, the first Wednesday in November, was a great day for deer hunters in the center of Long Island. From and after midnight on the night of the 1st until well on to midday on November 2d, the hounds in full chase were heard all through the deer section of the island, of which the city of refuge, so far as deer are concerned, seems to be the grounds of the South Side Club at Oakdale. To these grounds deer, with hounds after them, flee, as if certain of protection. Once inside the club's fence they appear to know that they will be safe. As a result, therefore, the track of the Long Island Railroad where it touches the property of the club is a favorite runway. The slaughter of deer this year was greater than ever before, and several fine bucks were among the slain, although neither does nor yearlings were spared by the hunters, who may really be said to have been out for meat and not for sport. Altogether, although no accurate estimate can be made, it is probable that not far short of 100 deer were killed on November 2d on the comparatively small tract of land inhabited by deer on Long Island.

It is the custom of Long Island deer hunters to go out in large parties, as much for protection from the assaults of other hunters as to save the carcasses of deer they may have killed from being taken from them by force. One party consisted of twenty-seven men, some of them from New York, the balance being made up of local citizens who were acquainted with the lay of the land and who had hounds of their own. This party was responsible for the death of seven deer, one of them a buck of great size—about the largest deer ever killed on Long Island. Other parties came to the railroad station with four and five deer, while in Bayshore one meat market displayed three deer—a buck, a doe and a yearling—by courtesy. A red fox also hung conspicuously alongside of the big game. There are four more Wednesdays in this month, and that means four more open days on deer on Long Island. Consequently many more deer will be killed before December arrives, but the kill of the opening day is not likely to be equaled by the combined kills of all the four remaining shooting days.

The open season for rabbits and quail commenced on Long Island on the same date, November 1st. The result is that quail hunters don't get much of a show after the birds, as the whole island is overrun for several days after the season opens by bands of men, armed with all sorts of guns and accompanied by all kinds of dogs, who harry the woods and fields so thoroughly that the quail are driven a mile back into the oak scrub, from which they seldom or never emerge for the rest of the season. This state of affairs leads to much lawbreaking by men who would perhaps otherwise scorn to break a law. These men locate the bevies of quail on their property, and generally get to work on them a few days before the season opens, while the woods are yet undisturbed by the noisy rabbit hunters. If the quail season opened on November 1st and the rabbit season on November 10th it would be far better for the quail hunters, and would not work any serious injury to the lovers of hound music and stewed rabbit.

Opinions of a Gunmaker.

The question of make, style, fit and weight of the gun is one that is given a deal of serious attention by the novice as well as the occasional shooter. The veteran sportsman is generally an encyclopedia of information on the subject and always interested in the views of other authorities on the matter. An article by Leland Clarke in the American Field offers a fund of valuable information and suggestion which we quote in full:

"One authority writes: 'A well-balanced gun is in use like a being possessed of life,' and to me the truth of this quotation is plain as the sun at noontime. It is the common experience of almost every gun club that somebody's shooting is improved when using somebody else's gun, and under these circumstances we have heard the remarks 'the gun fits him,' and 'it comes up right.' The gun may fit him and it may come up right, but it comes up right oftener than it fits him, for the good reason that the majority of guns are well balanced and are bound to come up right whether they fit or not. When a gun comes up right I have seen some very creditable shooting, and heard in explanation the remark, 'the gun fits him,' when a careful glance at the shoulder showed the gun did not fit at all, but rested upon his arm, and that his head was dreadfully awry when he shot. Providence, to fulfill a wise and just purpose, has endowed us with powers of accommodation and frames that adopt a great variety of positions when necessary. We become used to one position horseback riding; we walk in a rather odd manner with snowshoes. It is the same with any shooter who may adopt a perverted position and shoot well with an evenly balanced gun. It will not overtax his muscles or his equilibrium so he can shoot well with it; but take the same gun with a two pound weight attached at the muzzle! The result would be remarkably different, unless the gun happily chances to fit him, when the balance will be less important. Guns are of such a variety of shapes and sizes that the fit is not often perfect, and then the balance plays an important part In the field a well-balanced gun is always an advantage.

Several errors make a poorly balanced one. The barrels may be too long, or too much metal, or the metal may be improperly distributed. A new stock to replace a broken one may destroy the balance, or a few inches removed from the barrels may cause the same result. Unless such alterations are intelligently made sportsmen are apt to suddenly become unaccountably dissatisfied with their own favorite guns. When the balance is destroyed, a difference is noticeable, unless the gun fits well. It will require increased exertion in handling and fails to respond to the usual muscular effort. Ultimately it will tire one out during a walk where a well-balanced gun three pounds heavier would be less burdensome. Some truly fine guns of this order have changed hands with great frequency, a day's hunting being enough to leave them undesirable.

Two tests can be made of the ordinary double-barreled breech-loader. First, to test the general balance, a string is placed under the breech, about where the middle of a shell in situ is located, and the gun is lifted on the string. If the balance is obtained with the string anywhere within four inches of the extreme end of the breech the balance is usually correct; that much variation be allowed to neutralize the different effects of long or short barrels and of variously bent stocks. When an equilibrium is found in advance of four inches from the breech the balance is incorrect, and the further removed from the breech the poorer the balance. The general test over, a separate test of the barrels and the stock may be made by balancing the parts on a string, exactly as the whole gun was balanced. The forearm is included with the barrels. Now the nearer to the breech the barrels balance the easier the gun can be handled when put together. The same test can be made with the stock, where I prefer most of the weight to be in the front. In a word, the most weight should be at the breech so each hand will undergo the same exertion and lift identically the same weight in bringing the gun to the shoulder, thus assuring a smooth, even play of the muscles of both arms and shoulders, which means increased accuracy of motion. Happily, the gun with most weight at the breech is the strongest and will stand the most rough treatment. So we can have the best balanced and the strongest gun combined. With long barrels of course the equilibrium will not be found so near the breech as in shorter ones."

To satisfy the demand for lightweight guns, some makers have committed the error of uniting an extremely lightweight stock with a pair of long barrels (which, owing to their length, must be heavy), preventing the balance by several pounds, thus destroying the efficiency of their productions. A gun with the longest, heaviest barrels should have the heaviest stock, even if it weighs fifteen pounds. It will handle better than if three pounds' weight were taken from the stock, and the desired balance destroyed."

Pacific Coast Trials.

During the week Messrs. Kilgarif and DeRuyter had the pleasure of selecting and ordering the cups for the Champion and Members' Stakes. The trophies are of chaste and elegant design and will shortly be on exhibition in the windows of a prominent Market street jewelry house.

It is very likely that the grounds selected for the coming field trials will be the tract near Bakersfield known as the Stockdale ranch. These grounds are owned by W. R. Tevis, Esq., who has kindly offered the club the use of what are really his own private grounds. This section is probably the best available place for the trials, the conditions being favorable and the location within three and a half miles from Bakersfield, all of which will be most acceptable news to the field trial men. The fact that a long drive of twelve or more miles driving is saved is a matter for pleasant contemplation—last year the weather happened to be excessively cold both morning and evening, making the drive very disagreeable.

Second forfeits have been paid on twenty Derby entries. John Schumacher of Los Angeles reports the loss, through distemper, of a Rowena—Valiente puppy of promise. J. A. Graves, also of Los Angeles, was equally unfortunate in losing a Derby entry, the setter dog Don Elipha, by Valiente—Betsy Mark.

Sacramento Bench Show.

Secretary Matt Coffey of the California State Poultry and Kennel Club states that, in order to avoid conflict with the date of the Oakland show, the Sacramento exhibition has been postponed from December 5th to January 4th. It will be held in Armory Hall, and continue for four days. The entries close on Thursday, December 22, 1898. The premium list will be issued on December 1st. The announcement of the show appears in the advertising columns of this issue.

Collie Club Notes.

Mr. Norman J. Stewart of Aromas, Monterey, the Secretary of the coming specialty bench show in Oakland informs us that Judge S. Tyler, of Pasadena, will judge the Collie Club Show at Oakland. Percy Ward will act as Superintendent. The premium list will be out by the 18th. Many valuable specials have been received and everything points to a record entry of collies and cockers. Dogs of other breeds will be received for exhibition or for sale. They will be benched and fed at cost. The regular prizes will be a silver medal for first, a bronze medal for second and a diploma for third. Collies will be judged by score card. This is the first time that the score card has been used to judge dogs in America.

Coursing Notes.

Touts are strongly in evidence at the coursing games every meeting day. Another class of gentry who frequent the parks are a number of sure thing workers who lay for verdant pikers; when the latter endeavor to get their money into the greedy maw of the pool-box, these tin-horn gams offer to cover the proffered bet, suggesting the saving of the five per cent commission as an inducement to the sucker to deposit his cash in irresponsible hands. If by any accident the outsider wins, his temporary book-maker frequently squares accounts by welching.

There is no doubt but what a number of gentlemen who own and enter dogs do so actuated by a love of fine sport, but they are frequently handicapped in their desire and efforts for square sport by dishonest and untrustworthy trainere. A great deal also has been said about doping dogs to run fast or slow, while this can easily be done—appropos of this, a certain well known young druggist has been strongly suspected of frequently using his skill with the syringe, etc., by request (?) of and for the benefit of less intelligent but equally unscrupulous doctors of coursing chances—there are other ways and means besides doping that have been material in deciding courses and stakes.

Connecticut Field Trials.

The inaugural All-Age Stake of the Association was run at East Hampton, Conn., November 3 and 4, 1898. No entries were received for the Derby and the stake was declared off. The following is a summary of the trials:

Woodcock, lemon and white setter bitch, owner Dr. Jas. E. Hair——with——Pearl D, orange and white setter bitch, owner F. D. Goodridge.

Albert's Daisy Queen, black, white and tan setter bitch, owner Dr. Jas. E. Hair——with——Bob M, black and white setter dog, owner T. H. Mosley.

Count Navarre, black, white and tan setter dog, owner E. S. Gordon——with——Tilda, blue helton setter bitch, owner F. G. Goodridge.

Joe, orange and white setter dog, owner Mr H W. Stocher ——with——Pet, black and white setter bitch, owner J. B. Robertson.

Conqueror, black, white and tan setter dog, owner Mr. Hiram Daweon——with——Rowdy Roy, black, white and tan setter dog, owner Mr. J. H. Bassett.

Pauline Rainford, red Irish setter bitch, owner Mr. F. G. Goodridge, a bye.

II.

Rowdy Row with Count Navarre.	Pet with Albert's Daisy Queen.
Joe with Tilda.

III.

Rowdy Row with Pet	Joe with Count Navarre.

FINALS.

First, Pet; second, Rowdy Row; third, Joe.

Do Dogs Possess Souls?

With regard to the immortality of dogs or other animals, many opinions might be cited in the affirmative. As Lamartine says:

> No! God will never quench his spark divine,
> Whether within some glorious orb it shine,
> Or lighten up the spaniel's tender gaze
> Who leads his poor blind master through the maze
> Of this dark world.—(Translation.)

"I hae never been able to persuade my heart and my understanding that dowgs hae na immortal sowls," pants the Shepherd in "Noctes Ambrosianae," when Mr. North's "great Newfunlan' " swims out to the assistance of himself and his companion, Mr. Tickler, in a rough sea off Portobello; "his soul maun be immortal!"

Later on this noble animal was cruelly poisoned, and Christopher North (Professor Wilson) and his friends lament his many virtues.

"Often do I wonder," says the Shepherd again, "whether or no birds and beasts and insects have immortal sowls!" To which the English Opium-Eater, who happens to be present, replies: "What God makes, why should he annihilate?" "True, true, Mr. de Quincey," gladly agrees Hogg.

Some of our readers may remember Luther's words to his dog, "Never mind, little Hans, thou too shalt have a golden tail some day;" or, according to a better translation, "Thou, too, in the resurrection, shalt have a little golden tail."

Swinburne, in his sonnet to Dr. John Brown, speaks of

> The night of death's sweet sleep, wherein may be
> A star to show your spirit in present sight,
> Some happier island in the Elysian sea,
> Where Rab may lick the hand of Marjorie.

"My dear Lord, there is a spirit dwelling in good beasts, though dreamy and unconscious," says the chaplain in Fonque's weird romance of "Sintram and His Companions."

Coleridge, writing long before Darwin, seems inclined to conjecture the beast to be an "unripe or degenerated humanity."—Westminster Review.

The dogs themselves are all right and honest and generally understand their business; it "maun be they hae" a soul and yet, 'tis sad to say, but true, that many a dog has had a sole-full feeling—but some of the gentry who run the dogs—Good Lawd!

United Statee Field Trials Derby Entries.

Twenty-six English setters and twenty pointers comprise the entries for the United States Field Trial Club's Derby to he run at West Point, Miss., on Jannarv 16, 1898. Eleven of the progeny of Ch. Gladstone IV., are in the setter class. The entries are as follows:

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The average age for dogs is about fourteen years.

The noted Eastern Smooth coat Lady Fenmore has been bred to Sir Redmund at Baltimore.

Cyclers in Germany and Belgium frequently use their dogs to aid in drawing their wheels up a hill.

A bench show to he held at Tacoma, Wash., will probahly he held in the near future. A. K. C. rules will prevail.

The recent English man-hunting bloodhound trials were the first ever arraigned in the "tight little isle." They were successful.

The only snre preventative for a hitch who eats her puppies is to muzzle her and have a foster mother in readiness to put her puppies to.

Cockers seem to he a coming fancy—the coming entries for the coming Oakland specialty show are far in advance of the collie candidates.

The record bench show was recently held at Crystal Palace, London, by the London Kennet Clnh. 2,500 entries and 1,480 dogs are the figures.

Beagle trials are becoming more popular each year in the East. The recent meet of the New Eogland Beagle Club at Oxford, Mass., was well attended and brought out a successful exhibition of high class dogs.

The well known fox terrier hitch Snowflake (Warren Safeguard—Blemton Spinaway) owned by W. H. Murphy, of Los Angeles, died recently. She won a first and special at Santa Barhara also first in puppies and second in open class at San Francisco, 1898.

The Eberhart Kennels of Camp Dennison, O., has lately effected a sale of Great Danes that runs well up into money. Earls Brutus (Earl of Wurtemburg—Desdemona) and Portia (Ch. Major McKinley—Daisy) were sold to Mr. G. F. Sauter of Houston, Tex.

The personnel of the committee recently appointed by the A. K. C. is favorably commented upon by Eastern kennel journals. The American Stock-keeper says: This is a good move; and places the interests which stand for good government, in the hands of men who command respect.

Mr. T. J. Sheuhrooks of Baltimore, a noted Eastern breeder of smooth and rough coated St. Bernards reports the whelping hy Lady Redmnnd of a fine litter of eight dog and four hitch puppies. They all look alike, are very large and rich in color. The litter is hy Sir Waldorf, who is looked upon as a coming sire.

Mr. Greenehaum, of the London, Paris and American Bank, recently purchased two smooth coat St. Bernard puppies that are as clever looking and promising youngsters as a lover of the breed could desire. Mr. Salazar is to he congratulated on the successful breeding of Alta Millo to Bianca II., who, it is reported, is now looking finer than ever.

Mr. J. L. Arden is surely in unfortunate straits with his hull terriers. Following Tommy Tickler inside of two months, old Champion Dusty Diamond argued with Sweet Dnchess in such a manner that he died through the injuries received from the hitch, who was younger and heavier than he—the promising youngster Wood Royal recently joined D. D. on the road to the canine Valhalla.

A meeting of the special committee, who are at present engaged in looking after the Coast affairs of the American Kennel Club, was held on Thursday evening last. What particular husiness was transacted aside from permanent organization has not heen made public—it is rumored, however, that the circles of dogdom will not lack for a plethora of interesting topics for discussion within a comparatively short period.

Mr. J. A. Bonscaren, a prominent fancier of Louisville, Ky., was in this city recently. While here he visited the principal fox terrier kennels. In Los Angeles he purchased from W. H. McFee the fox terriers, Vanguard (Warren Safeguard—Blemton Spinaway) and Della Fox (Warren Sage—Blemton Spinaway), which he took East with him to his own kennels. California dogs are being appreciated hy Eastern owners it seems; this is not the only instance recently of good Coast dogs finding purchasers east of the Rockies.

Phil Wand, a well known sportsman of this city, recently sent East his English setter, Flora W. (Luke—Belle), to he hred to the noted hench and field trial winner, Cincinnatus Pride (Ch. Cincinnatus—Ch. Albert's Nellie). The result of this hreeding shonld he a "nick" that will show some wonderfnl performers in the setter class on the Coast. Both these dogs are representatives of the champions of the East and West; Flora heing considered one of the hest hitches here and Pride is looked upon as the hest dog in the East.

The meeting of the Ingleside Coursing Club took place on the plains near Merced on Tuesday and Wednesday last. The coursing from a sportsman's point of view was conceded to he a grand success. The winner Rosier (Johnnie Rex—Annie Laurie) is owned, it is claimed, hy Father McNamara of San Francisco, though the nomination was made hy T. J. McInerny. Russell and Wilson's Victor Queen (Jim o' the Hill—Miss Nancy) was the runner up, Lowe and Thompson's Patria (Lord Neversettle—Patrara) was third and C. W. Merry's Orpheum Lass (Jack Dempsey—Wee Lassie) ended fourth.

Mr. George H. Gooderham, of Toronto, Ont., at the unanimous request of the executive committee, continues to officiate as President of the Canadian Fox Terrier Club.

THE FARM.

The Future for Wheat.

There is a great deal of encouragement for the farmers of California in the statement made by Sir William Crookes, President of the British Association, in a recent address that the world's demand for wheat is rapidly outstripping the supply. The individual consumption of wheat, he says, is almost universally increasing. In Scandinavia it has risen 100 per cent. in twenty-five years, in Austro-Hungary 80 per cent., in France 20 per cent. In 1871 the bread eaters of the world numbered 371,000,000, in 1881 416,000,000, in 1891 472 600,000, and at the present time the number is 516,500,000. The requirements of the bread eaters for food and seed are now 2,324,000,000 bushels, while the total supplies from the 1897-98 harvest are only 1,921,000,000 bushels. This deficiency has not been greatly apparent because of a surplus of 300,000,000 bushels carried over from the preceding harvest. For the coming harvest, then, we start with a deficit of 103,000,000 bushels, and at the same time there are in the wheat-consuming countries 6,500,000 more months to feed than there were last year.

That scarcity and high prices have not prevailed in recent years Professor Crookes attributes to the fact that since 1889 we have had seven world crops of wheat and six of rye abundantly in excess of the average. These generous crops increased accumulations to such an extentas to obscure the fact that the harvests of 1895 and 1896 were much below current requirements. Practically speaking, reserves are now exhausted, and bread eaters must be fed from current harvests, accumulations under present conditions being almost impossible. A crop equal to that of 1894, which was the greatest on record, would yield less than current needs. Professor Crookes declares that should all the wheat-growing countries add to their area their utmost capacity, on the most careful calculation the yield would give only an addition of some 100,000,000 acres, supplying, at the average world yield of 12.7 bushels to the acre, 1,270,000,000 bushels, just enough to supply the increase of population among bread eaters until the year 1931. When, he asks, provisions shall have been made, if possible, to feed 230,000,000 to be added to the bread-eating population of 1891, by the complete occupancy of the arable areas of the temperate zone now partially occupied, where can he grown the additional 330,000,000 bushels of wheat required ten years later by a hungry world?

It is not pleasant to contemplate the fact that within less than forty years the world is going hungry for bread. But Professor Crookes' carefully prepared figures will afford comfort at least to the California wheat farmers of to-day. If he is correct, wheat has seen its last year of depressed prices. The tendency must be upward. With a world's demand that is continuously gaining on the supply, which already is practically inadequate, prices must steadily rise, and in that fact lies prosperity for the farmers of California, the cultivation of large areas that are now lying idle, and the development and progress that everywhere accompany the profitable tilling of the soil.

In Colorado sheep-feeding alfalfa hay has a great place. It is so largely nitrogenous and so palatable that a part of the growth and fattening comes from the hay. In feeding lambs they are usually put on alfalfa alone from one to three weeks and then grain feeding begins. In the feeding of sheep on a large scale, the grain is fed in a separate corral. The sheep are kept in bunches of about four hundred, the grain is put in feed troughs, the gates are opened, and the lambs are allowed about ten minutes to eat their grain, when they are driven back and the next bunch brought in. By this method all the sheep have a chance to get some grain, and even the greediest can not get very much. The first grain fed is merely a sprinkling in the trough to get the sheep used to it. The principal skill in feeding lambs is in increasing the grain so gradually that they eat it greedily at all times. Most feeders use pails and reckon feed by the number of bucketfuls fed each day. A bucketful of twenty pounds to four hundred lambs twice a day is one half a pound a day and this is as much of grain as is considered safe to make at one time.

The Beef Cattle Interest.

The most important point to be considered in improving our beef cattle is the selection of sires and this is doubly important since our foundation stock will consist nearly entirely of grade or native cows, containing few characteristics of the true beef type. I sometimes think that the proper selection of sire is of more importance than is good feeding itself, because it is impossible to feed an animal successfully or profitably if sired by a scrub. Do not use a grade sire no matter how good an individual he may be. The scrub in him is almost sure to show itself in some of his offspring. It is an established fact that all domesticated animals, the longer you can get them bred in a line tracing directly through animals that have been of more than average merit as producers of the special product for which they have been bred, the more pronounced they will be in producing offspring having their good qualities.

Select pure bred sires of known lineage, known to have come from good families that were great beef producers. Do not select an animal with a very thin hide, as they are apt to be tender and greatly annoyed by flies and other insects during our long hot summers; but do not get one with a very thick hide, for as a rule, they prove to be very poor feeders. Get a medium one with a good coat of thick, soft hair. He should have a good, strong head on him, and he will be sure to prove an impressive breeder.

He should have a good, broad back, full over the croup and loins, as that is where the more valuable and high priced cuts are found. He should be thick through the heart, wide between the forelegs and standing square on them, showing plenty of constitution; short on his legs as you have never seen a long-legged animal of any breed that was a good feeder; well let down in his flanks, and with fairly straight hind legs, so that if fed to a great weight he will not give down in his legs. In purchasing do not buy some overfed show animal that has been stuffed all his life and perhaps had little exercise; but above everything else, do not buy some half-starved animal because you think he is selling cheap. This kind of an animal is dear at any price.

After you have selected an animal that suits, treat him well. Give him plenty of wholesome food and pure water and proper exercise, and you will not be disappointed in the results you get from his use in your herd. Our farmers are beginning to realize the benefits of breeding and feeding good beef cattle of the improved breeds of the best beef type, and of the early maturity characteristics, with the largest proportion of high-priced meat and the smallest proportion of cheap cuts and offal; cattle that command the highest price per pound because of their superior quality. We may buy up native and scrub cattle that may give some gain in the feed lot, but when sold bring only the medium price for lack of quality, while the high grades command the best market price, because they possess the superior qualities that are well developed in the choicest cuts of high-priced meat when fat and sold on the market. With this experience and the demands of our great city markets, and the enormous export trade, there is a general demand to grade up the herd with pure bred sires and improve the quality fast as possible. The Western farmers are taking the lead in this vigorous improvement, and now the farmers in the other States should follow.—Epitomist.

Some of the preparations used for the purpose of keeping milk from souring are unhealthy, especially for children, and if the milk is properly handled there will be but little need of them. Proper handling means that the milk should be aerated as soon as it is drawn. If there is not an aerator provided for this the aeration can be effected by pouring the milk from one vessel to another until all has been exposed to the air. It means, also, that the milk vessels should be absolutely clean. And more than that, it means that the milk should be cooled, by setting the vessel in a shallow stream of water, if this can be done or in a cool place. While cooling the milk the vessel should be loosely covered so that the animal odor may escape. If all these things are attended to the milk will keep long enough, provided due cleanliness has been observed in the milking.

Cattle in Porto Rico.

In a recent issue of the National Provisioner there was a sketch of the cattle industry in Porto Rico given by a gentleman who has been engaged in cattle raising on that island. The Journal gives some of the substance of his report that may interest stockmen of this country. The cattle of Porto Rico are merketable when two and three years old, at the former age weighing about 800 pounds, and about 1,000 to 1,100 pounds as threes. There is always a surplus, the annual reports averaging 8,000 to 11,000 head. The shipments are to other islands of the West Indies, a few going to Cuban ports, nearly all the Cuban shipments going to Santiago, though a small portion sometimes reaches Havana. Other shipments go to British, Dutch and French possessions on the main coast of Africe.

The cattle are grown on the creeping Gama grass which grows on the sides of the mountain and is rich in bone-making material. About three acres is generally enough to keep one animal in good growing condition. When old enough, or large enough in frame to be fattened for market, they are taken from the mountain and upland ranges and put on the valley pasturage, which consists of the tall, rich, sweet Para grass, rising higher than the backs of the cattle. On this they fatten rapidly, thin cattle being made very fat in four to six months. Their average weight when put on the Para grass is about 600 pounds and after eighteen to twenty-six weeks of this sweet and rich pastnrage they reach a weight of 1,000 to 1,200 pounds. The Para grass will sustain, on an average, one animal to the acre, the range carrying four times as many cattle per acre as the ranges of South America.

It does not seem that there has been much, if any, intelligent breeding in Porto Rico, for the improvement of the native stock, and the island, under control of the United States, may at some time afford a market for quite a number of registered animals of the beef breeds. The limited area, however, will prevent the cattle production of Porto Rico from having a perceptible influence on the market.

Having selected the female from common stock, and having secured a good pure bred male from some favorite breed, do not go to another breed for a second male, but keep right on choosing males from the same breed. The men who selects males first from one breed and then from another, is like the man in the boat with but one oar. He cannot make any substantial progress.

So far as the needs of the average farmer are concerned, the question is very simple. In choosing female it is usually of little consequence what the breeding is, providing the form is right. Though a female may possess mixed breeding, that ought not to form any objection to choosing her for the herd or flock. But it is entirely different with the male. He should not only be right as to form, but possess pure blood. Without purity of blood in the male there is no certainty of transmission. The offspring of a pure male and a female of mixed breeding will closely resemble the male, and for the reason that he has been purely bred.

With the improved methods of breeding and feeding live stock of all the classes raised for their meat are being prepared for market at an earlier age than formerly. The improved mutton breeds of sheep are early maturers, and it is probable that the men who will make the most money out of them will be those who have the lambs come in February and have them ready for market without carrying them through the winter. The ewes must be liberally fed in order to make them give a good supply of milk to the lambs, but the latter should be brought to eat as soon as it can be done with safety. Experience has shown that high grade lambs of some of the mutton breeds can be brought to weigh 80 to 100 pounds at eight to ten months of age. It does not pay to keep them after they get in salable condition, and they will bring a better price at the age named than they would later.

A show of car lots of range cattle will be among the features of the annual meeting of the National Live Stock Association at Denver during the last week of January. The chief condition is that the cattle must be bred and born on the range and must not have tasted corn or any other grain. Twelve classes are provided, arranged according to age and sections from which the cattle come. Such an exhibit will be an eye-opener to those who are unacquainted with the remarkable improvement in the character of range stocks wrought the past decade by the introduction of the blood of the beef breeds. It is a capital idea to bring out a show that will be so instructive to breeders and feeders alike.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

Subscriber—I have a horse that is "sweenied" in the shoulder. Please tell me what is "sweeney" and what to do for it. Answer—"Sweeney" is a vulgar name used instead of atrophy, which means wasting. Atrophy of the muscles of the shoulder is usually caused by a sprain or some other injury connected with the afflicted limb. The injury need not necessarily be to the shoulder. In fact, atrophy of the muscles of the shoulder often follows injury to the foot or leg, such as from picking up a nail, barbed wire cuts, kicks, etc. The muscles waste, as a result of resting that limb.

Treatment—First find out the cause of the atrophy, and treat the cause (such as nail prick, kick, sprain, etc.). Next apply a blister to the wasted muscles, or the part may be seatoned. Friction (by hand rubbing), and applying a stimulating liniment, may be all that is necessary in mild cases. A run to pasture, or light exercise daily, will assist the development of the muscles.

C. A.—I have a horse that has corns and I was told that tips are good for them. Please say which are the best, bar-shoes or tips. Answer—In a flat-footed horse, bar shoes are the best. In narrow, contracted feet, tips are good.

H. A. B.—I had a horse die of lockjaw last week. It was caused by a nail. When the horse picked up the nail, I put coal oil into the hole and set fire to it, as a neighbor of mine told me that that was the best thing to do. He went very lame and I took him to the blacksmith about three days after that. The blacksmith said that the burning was bad. Please tell me what I ought to have done. Answer—Lockjaw or tetanus is caused by the entrance of a microbe, the bacillus tetanus, into the wound. A disinfectant applied to the part kills those microbes that may be present, and an antiseptic dressing kept on the sore prevents the entrance of others. Cerbolic acid is one of the best ordinary antiseptics. A teaspoonful of the acid to a pint of water applied thoroughly to the sore, and a dressing of the same twice a day would have prevented tetanus. In order to allow the antiseptic to enter, and the pus to escape, the hole should be paired out as soon as possible. Tar is also an antiseptic, and makes a good after dressing for wounds of the feet. It is usually applied (after the wound has stopped discharging), and kept in position by means of oakum, and a leather sole, or oakum kept in place by a piece of hoopiron placed across the sole of the foot, with the ends between shoe and foot.

A correspondent in the Breeders' Gazette, who has had several years' experience with Galloways, gives this as his judgment: "The Galloways are rustlers. They will take care of themselves and do fairly well where other cattle would starve to death. The long hair of the Galloway is another great thing in its favor. It sheds the snow, sleet and rain like a shingled roof, while the under coat of fur keeps them warm and comfortable. We breeders of Galloways need no sheds. These points prove the hardiness of the cattle.

There is no doubt as to the preference which sheep show in the choice of fodders. Alfalfa hay seems to be the fodder they relish most, then clover, pea straw, corn fodder and timothy hay. The condition of the fodder will materially influence the gain for if it is musty, burned or dusty or has been allowed to grow too coarse, they will neglect it. Two or three pounds of any of the fodders mentioned will be about the quantity that wether lambs nine or ten months old will eat daily through the fattening period.

Do not let the milk stand in an open vessel in the barn after you are through milking. The better way is to keep the cans on the outside, and as soon as you have finished milking a cow empty the contents of your pail into the can, and cover the can at once, and keep it covered until you are ready to move it entirely away from the barn.

A ranga man who runs sbaep says that a species of diseasa among sheep which is generally characterized as loco is a mineral poison. Tha disease has tha sama effect upon a sheep that calomel has on a person. Tha under jaw seems to suppurate, tha gums recede and the teeth become loose so that they might ba pulled out with the fingers. The grszing of sheep in the fall of the year upon alkali marshes and around alkali springs invariably produces this effect and the diseasa is thought to ba caused by tha alkali and not the vegetation.

At tha Kansas Experiment station a test was mada of the comparativa valua of soaked and dry corn. Fiva steers wera fed corn soaked until it began to softan and five were fed dry corn. The faeding was from Nov. 7th to April 6th In that tima tha lot fed soaked corn ata 282 bushels and gained 1,632 pounds, whila tha lot that was fed dry corn ate 290 husbels, making a gain of only 1,468 ponnds. Tha steers that were fed soaked corn ware so much hatter fitted for tha market that tha fiva haad brought $25.50 mora than the others.

One of the most things about good farming that most of us have to learn, is to avoid wasta. We pay taxes on land that we do not farm; wa only balf cultivate our fields and so waste both land and labor; we leava a large percentsge of the crop in the field; wa wasta tima and cattla in raising inferior animals; wa waste energy in trying to do more than one man can do right; wa wasta money in buying what wa should raisa oursalves; wa waste opportunities to improve our condition by ataying away from institutes and fairs and by neglecting to read papers; we waste—in a thonsand ways, and then we ara ready to say that "farming don't pay." And it is no wonder.—Montana Frnit Grower.

ST. GATIEN, winnar of the Derby in England (at least a dead-heatar with Harvester) arrived at Rancho del Paso, his new homa, last night, eafe and sonnd. He is tha sire of the unheaten Meddler and many others. As wa already have Oromonde, Californians can boast of having two winners of the Derby within tha confines of the Golden Stata. The brother to Ormonde, Ormelio, and Conroy, also by Bend Or, which John Mackay recently purchased for J. B. Haggin in England, will arrive shortly. On tha sama special Rancho del Paso horse car that St. Galien cama in arrived Bellicoso and St. Calatine, consigned to Frank M. Taylor; Myth and Midlight, the property of tha Kittlaman Bros., and six horses belonging to Mika Daly, Frohman heing in tba bunch. The Taylor and Daly horses are at tha Oakland track.

McGRANE is due here today with a good string including What-er-Lou, Master Buck and Montgomery. It was reported that McGrana was going to St. Lonis this wintar, but ha thinks too much of San Francisco.

GEO. WHEELOCK, tha wall-known book-makar, backed Roosavalt to baat Van Wyck for about $40,000 to win tha Naw York alection; he got the majority of this monay on an aven monay and a littla hettar and was enthusiastic over the Republican candidata's chances. But at tha last minuta Mr. Wheelock got nervous and hedged; on alection night before anything was definitely known and when Van Wyck still looked to have an even chance Wheelock sent men out to all tha hotels and laid of all tha monay ha could at evens. Thare were plenty of Roosevelt admirers aronnd, and he was able to gat off about $25,000. Had ha stuck to tha finish ha would have been the higgest winner in Naw York. To thosa who ara acqnainted with Mr. Wheelock and have noticed tha coursa usually pursued by him in tha batting ring the praceding will causa no snrprisa. The same mathods which ha adopted in hedging his election bets were tha causa of his failura to make money in tha betting ring during his two winters in California.

MIKE DALY got in yesterday with seven horses, among them Frohman, a very handy parformer in New York, and ona of the best early two-year-olds of last yerr. Mr. Daly brought along Ballicoso and St. Calatine, which Sam Hildrath campaigned with snch succses in the East. Ha also brought St. Gatien, the old sire that Mr. Haggin recently imported from England.

IT is reportad hera that Edward Ryan, former lessee of the Los Angeles track and owner of tha stallion, Nomad, has refnsed an Eastern offer of $1,200 for tha horss, based presumably npon tha performances of his daughter, Toloca, hred by Charles Kerr, of Bakersfield. He says it will taka $2,500 to buy him or ha will keep tha horse himself.

DAN HONIG has at last sent a good thing through. He had Our Climata placed in a good soft spot and tha result was hardly aver in donht. Judging from tha happy look on Dan's fsce, ha must have been down good and hard. Thera is nothing lika changing your mascot once in a whila.

W. B. FASIG'S GREAT SALE.

Harneee Horeee Bring Excellent Pricee in New York at Auction.

If any lover of tbe light harness horse has allowed the thought to enter bis mind that the recent revival in the breeding and racing of trotters and pacers has only been confined to a few persons and locations, that thought has probably been abolished by the account of the sale conducted by W. B. Fasig & Co. last week at Madison Square Garden, New York. The sale began Monday evening, and will be continued during all of next week. On the opening nigbt the migbty Star Pointer, 1:59¼, champion pacer of the world, and tbe only two-minute horse, was sold. There were ten thousand people present when be was led into the ring, and after some lively bidding he went to tbe nod of W. J. White of Cleveland, Ohio, for $19,000.

On the second evening the great three-year-old pacing champion, Klatawah, 2:05¼, was sold. He was purchased by James Butler of New York, owner of Direct, 2:05½, Directum Kelly, 2:08, and many other fast horses. Klatawah brought $7,000.

The Marcus Daly consignment of horses brought good prices, and in fact up to this writing the average of tbe horses sold bas been high. On Tuesday the average for seventy-four head sold was $700. Surely this will not be considered a low average for any class of borses, and is far in excess of many of the sales of choice thoroughbreds. Here are some of the animals sold together witb their pedigrees and new owners:

Handspring, trotter, b c, 2:19½, 1896, by Prodigal–Alice Wilson, to H. F Pierce, Pawtucket, R. I., $4,025.

Cuprum, trotter, br g, 2:12⅔, 1895, by Prodigal–Camiol, to G. A. Tbompson, New York, $2,500.

Laurels, trotter, b f, 2:14¼, 1895, by Prodigal–Laurel B., to J. H. Bronson, New Haven, $2,925.

Improvidence, trotter, b f, 2:13¼, 1894, by Prodigal–Queen Wilkes, to J. M. Ford, Boston, $3,190.

Red Tape, trotter, b f, 2:36, 1895, by Prodigal–Brown Silk, to J. M. Ford, $2,500.

Dominant, trotter, b g, 2:15, 1895, by Prodigal–Dolly Jobnson, to W. H. Boyleston, Boston, $2,500.

Parallel, trotter, br f, 2:21, 1895, by Prodigal–Annie Jackson, to J. E. Nubinger, New Haven, $500.

Limerick, trotter, b g, 2:19½, 1895, by Prodigal–Annie Wilton, to H. D. Bradbury, Holyoke, Mass., $1,525.

Lua, trotter, b f, 2:21, 1895, by Red Wilkes–Queen Anne, to W. E. Spiers, Glen Falls, N. Y., $1,300.

Phyllis, trotter, b f, 2:29, 1896, by Milroi–Provincial, to J. J. O'Neil, Lexington, Mass., $775.

Wilderness, pacer, b g, 2:18½, 1894, by Prodigal–Fanny Witherspoon, to N. W. Hubinger, New Haven, $2,800.

Great Barrington, trotter, b g, 2:23¼, 1894, by Prussianier–Real, sold by Montevideo Stock Farm, Great Barrington, Mass., to N. W. Hubinger, New Haven, $2,100.

Pray Tell, the famous wagon trotter, with a record of 2:09½ to wagon, was sold to Robert Bonner for $5,100.

Other sales were made as follows:

Consignment of F. X. and J. H. Fitzpatrick, North Cambridge, Mass.:

Jolly Bird, r m, 1892, trotter, 2:15¼, by Jay Bird–Belle Almont, to Samuel McMillan, New York, $3,700.

Courier Journal, blk s, 1893, pacer, 2:08¼, by Wilkesberry–Jessie King, to Edward Hills, Boston, $3,150.

Consignment from estate of Colonel William Edwards, Cleveland:

Lulu A., cb m, 1890, trotter, 2:19, by Dialonia–Amulet. to W. C. Harrington, Troy, N. Y., $1,100.

Consignment of Cbarles Tanner, Cleveland, O.:

Acumen, br g, 1892, trotter, by Electric Bell–Genevieve, and Varce, br g, 1891, trotter, by St. Vincent–Aurelia, W. H. Snyder, Parkville, L. I., $1050.

Split Silk, ch m, 1891, pacer, 2:09¼, by Bourbon Wilkes–Nannie Etticott, Edward Hills, Boston, $2,650.

Volamaid, b f, 1895, trotter, 2:15¼, Red Wilkes, dam unknown, J H. Murphy, New York, $1,015.

Anna Lee, b m, 1893, pacer, 2:07¼, by Alfred G.–Jessie P., D. N. Armstrong, Bridgeport, Conn , $1,235.

Magnet in the Stud.

The first announcement of a tboroughbred stallion to make the season of 1899 in this State is tbat of Magnet, owned by the Burlingame Stock Farm and advertised in tbis issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. No borse in America has a better license to be the sire of race horses than tbis son of the great St. Blaise and the good mare Magnetic. Tbe breeding of Magnet could scarcely be improved upon. He was begotten by a Derby winner that brought $100,000 at auction, and St. Blaise was by a Derby winner, Hermit, best sire of b's day in England. he by St. Leger winner Newminster, son of Touchstone, winner of the St. Leger The beauty of Magnet's breeding is that tbe first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth dams, right straight back, were producers of great stake winners. Most breeders "go" more on this than on any other point. St. Blaise for several years headed the list of winning stallions in tbis country, and The Ill-Used, sire of Magnet s dam, for a long time was eitber at tbe top or near it. As the sire of His Highness, Badge and Fides, The Ill-Used's fame is undying. Fides (wbo beat our Geraldine) was bred mucb like Magnet. In the pedigree of this great race borse we find sixteen winners of tbe Derby, to wit: St. Blaise, Hermit, Orlando, Blink Bonny, Wbisker, Pyrrbus I., Whalebone, Plenipotentiary, Diomed, Saltram, Pope, Smolensko, Bay Middleton, Waxy, Moses and Emilius; five winners of the St. Leger—Newminster, Touchstone, Octavian, Stockwell and The Baron, besides Blink Bonney, Manuella and Cobweb, winners of the Oaks. Altogether it would be bard to find in all America a horse bred on sucb ultra fashionable lines as Magnet. He was a good race horse and out of eighty-two starts was forty times first, twelve times second, twice third and eighteen times unplaced. His winnings amounted to nearly $20,000.

Magnet will be booked to but a few mares this season and it is thereby advisable to book them early.

M. H. TICHENOR & Co., tbe dealers in high-class carriage, coach and driving borses, whose beadquarters are at the Union Stock Yards, Cbicago, and who have branch establishments in New York, Liverpool and tther important centers, bave imported five Frencb Coach stallions, with the idea of selling tbem to the breeders of the west and nortbwest, to try to get tbese breeders to improve the carriage stock in these localities.

CRESCEUS, 2:09¼, son of Robert McGregor sold at Fasig's sale in New York this week for over $14,000 Trotters outsell pacers at all the sales and are more in demand.

THE SALE OF THE SEASON.

Theo. Wintere' Yearlinge and R Hughes' Six Young Mares in Training.

One of the greatest sales of the season is to be held next Monday evening in the splendidly arranged building, known as tbe Occidental Horse Exchange, at 721 Howard street There are two consignments; one of yearlings, tbe other of tried young race mares tbat have achieved fame upon the iurf and whose names are familar to every race-goer in the United States.

The sixteen yearlings to be offered for sale were bred by Tbeodore Winters at bis Rancbo del Sierras. Twelve are by the greatest race horse ever produced within the confines of tbe Golden State—the undefeated, invincible El Rio Rey. Tbis borse is already an acknowledged successful sire, and is following well in the footsteps of his lamented sire, the unbeaten Norfolk. Four are by Rey del Sierras, own brother to tbe turf queen, Yo Tambien.

In this sale is a sister to Belle Boyd, a half-sister to Laura Gardner, a three-quarters sister to Don Jose, Pocatello, Judge Post, a half-sister to Lady Helen, Una Colorado and Una Grande, a brother to Zepbyr, a sister to Rey Hooker and Adelante, a three-quarters sister to Dolly McCone, a full sister to Caliente, P. A. Finnegan ane Uncle Giles, a half brotber to Malo Diablo, a colt from Rose Hickman (sister to Don Jose and Ed Corrigan), a filly from Nellie Post (sister to Don Jose also) a filly from tbe grand race mare, Louise M., a colt from Miss Courtney, a sister to Mandolina, and the rest are out of young mares from famous racing families, and all the animals in this consignment are fully up to the high standard of excellence set by their breeder.

These are all at the salesyard and for condition as well as individuality are even bett:r tban the splendid lot sold here last year, which included many tbat proved winners. Mr. Winters says this has been the best year for colts he bas ever known in Nevada. Follow ng these is a Martenhurst, the two-year-old gelding out of Songstress, by Luke Blackburn, and is therefore half-brotber to tbe frequent stake-winner, Mary Black. He is a maiden baving never been saddled until six weeks ago and as the owner is leaving this State, he is compelled mucb against bis will to part witb this promising youngster.

Then will he led in tbe R. Hughes consignment consisting of six handsome young mares, and the abilities of five of the six are well known to all our turfmen and racegoers. The sixth is a yearling, sister in blood to Olinthus, Diggs and Sutton. Mr. Renzi Hughes, the owner of the consignment, is retiring from the turf because of ill-health, his condition being such that the excitement attendant upon racing is likely to do him great harm. Of the five tbat have raced, Modwena and Jennie Reid are stake-winners, Ann Page, a winner of stake class and Hannah Reid, a very speedy and promising one. If there is as good a two-year-old filly in California as Modwena, turfmen do not know where sbe is to be found, and Mr. Hnghes thought so much of her tbat he looked forward with a confident feeling of success to the time when she should meet even such a good one as Briar Sweet at weight for age in a race of six and a half furlongs. Mr. Hnghes thinks her—thc BEST TWO YEAR-OLD FILLY in a State full of good ones and a coming American turf queen, barring accident Jennie Reid won the California Annual and Shafter Stakes at the State Fair meeting, defeating, among others, Midlove, Casdale, Obsidian and Rainier.

This is a rare opportunity to get horses ready to win money now. Ed Lowry, the silvery-tongued auctioneer, will preside and an evening cannot be spent more pleasantly than at a sale like this.

PALO ALTO YEARLINGS.

The Sixth Annual Sale to be Held in This Otty Next Tuesday.

The sixth annual sale of thoroughbbred yearlings from Palo Alto Stock Farm will take place Tuesday evening November 29th, at Killip & Co.'s salesyard, corner of Market and Van Ness avenue. There are sometimes good reasons for saying that the best lot of yearlings ever sold from a place will be offered. In this instance the reason for claiming aucb to be tba caso is that many of the great producing mares are represented in tbe sale, togetber with several of their daughters that were bigh class in racing as well as breeding. The great broodmare imp. Amelia (whose success as a producer of winners has been phenomenal having produced from seven different sires the winners, Auerlia II. Leland, Rinfax, Nomad, Picton, Vivace and Bohemian Lass. her daughter imp. Janet N. (tbe dam of Crescendo, Bellicoso and Wandering Nun) has claims for being considered one of the great thoroughbred broodmares of Americs. This producer of race horses is represented in tbe sale by the dark brown gelding, Orsino, a bardy, stout youngster, by Oscar, son of Wildidle and imp. Petroleuse, by Plebian. Orsino is bred in the same blood lines as Nomed, e grand race horse and is entered in tbe State Fair Futurity for 1899.

Tha great broodmare, imp. Rosetta, by Struan, son of Blair Athol aod Terrific, by Touchstone, has produced Rhono (mile in 1:40) Rover, Rosebud, Romair, Floodgate, Rosalie, Headflower and Rosalbra, all winners, her daughters, Rosebud and Headflower, producers of winners.

Rosetta is represented in this sale by the racy looking Oscaretto, son of Oscar, the grand looking fast son of Wildidla and imp. Petroleuse, by Plebian. Oscaretto is entered in the State Fair Futority for 1899.

Flirtation, the stake winner, pronounced by Mr. Thos. H. Williams while racing here to be another Firenzi, is represented by a stake winner in looks, tbe speedy sbeped, brown filly Loyta, by imp. Loyalist, by The Marquis (son of Stockwell) and Loyal Peeress, by The Peer.

Loyta is surely one of tbe best bred fillies in America, combining tbe blood of Stockwell, Touchstone, Hermit, Glencoe, Australian and Lexington.

He is entered in the Coney Island Futurity, 1899; Tbe Annual Champion, $25,000, to bs run in 1900, and thereafter; The Lawrence Realization, $6,000 added, to be run in 1900.

Imp. Qneen Bess, by Strathconan, dam of Nero, Foremost and Qneen Flambean, winners, is represented by the greod looking bay filly Queen of Light, full sister to Queen Flembeau.

Gerbardine, the good young broodmare by Flood, dam of Gordins and Benham, a very fast colt, hes in the sale tbe bay gelding Flambeaus, e good looking, strong yearling, full brother to Benbam; Fannie Lewis, by imp. Buckden, dam of tha great winoer Rico, Wm. Pinkerton, Ecarte, Slomber and Ray Heath is represented by a fine looking chestnut filly in Ftamora, full sister to Ray Heath.

Flam (by Flood, dam imp. Amelia, by Salvetor), dam of Chula, La Flecba and Flandes, is represented by the large, well developed filly, La Flame, full sister to La Flecha.

Aurelia II, a winner (full sister to tbe great race horse, Nomad), dam of Sly and Aerolite, winners, is represented by as grand a looking yearling es will enter tbe ring in 1898 the cbestnnt gelding Lorelio; tbis youngster looks like a race horse and comes from a family of race horses, his grandam, imp. Amalia, being one of tbe greatest producers.

Miss Rowell, by Hyder Ali, a young broodmare, is represented by her second foal, the bay gelding, Firelight by Flambean. Her first foal, Flamigero, was purcbased by Mr. Joe Terry, who pronounced him a very fast two-yeer-old; unfortunately, he was taken sick and died, not getting a chance to face the starter.

Firelight is a fina individual, racy looking and considered a great prospect, his breeding being in very speedy lines.

Charm, tha young Cheviot mare, out of imp. Fairy Rose, dam of Racine, Fairy and many other winners, is represented by tha cbestnut gelding Charming, his racing inheritance is great, his individuality will speak for itself.

Rosebud, winner, daughter of Wildidle and imp. Rosetta, dam of Roselle and Prompto, is represeoted by tbe good yearling Rosebusb, full brother to Prompto. Rosebud has had four foals, Rosella and Prompto, winners, her third Rosebud was very fast and we are informed would have been a winner but for an accident; her last the yearling Rose bush. It would seem that Rosebud is destined to be a great producer of winners.

Lottie, by Faustus, is represented by the chestnut filly Flamotte, as fina a looking filly as was ever led into the ring, racy in appearance and bred for speed. The sire of her dam got Galen and Bobby Beach, while her second dam was by Virgil, sire of Hindoo, Tremont, Virgic, Vagrant, etc. Flamotte is by Flambeau.

Regina, by Shannon, out of Riglin, producer of many winners, is represented by the hardy looking brown yearling Loyal Alta, by Imp. Loyalist, sire of Duoboy.

Phoebe, by Grinstead, half sister to Thornhill and Piquant is represented by a fine appearing filly in Phera, by Racine, the champion of hia day.

Tbe young broodmere Experiment, by imp Cyros, dam Mozelle, dam of Mozart, is represented by tbe racy looking cb g Expedient, by Flambesu.

Imp. Ceres, by Peregrine, out of imp. Rosetta is represented by a good stout chestnut filly, by imp. Loyalist called Loyresa Levana, by Argyle, out of imp. Laelie, by Cornelion bas e extra fine looking yearling filly in Loyana, by imp. Loyalist.

Belle D., by Belmont, sou of Lexington out of Infallible, by Lightning, has e filly of great substance in Loyelle, by imp Loyalist.

Minetta, by Duke of Montrose out of Kitty Clover, by Aristides bas in tbe bay yearliog Rscetto, a speedy bred one by Racine.

Marcella, by Grinstead, dam imp. Mutiny, dam of Muta and Rebellion, has a stout well turned filly by Oscar.

Muster, by Flood, dam of Mosculado, is represeoted by the strong and compact gelding, Rotery, by imp. Loyalist, and last, but not lesst, tbe half sister to the great race horse, Cbeckmate, Helpmate, by Planet, dam Full Cry, by Vandal, is represented by tbe chestnut filly, Honor Bright, a filly bred in the stoutest lines to race and go over a distance of groond. She is by Flambeau, out of a Planet mare; do not overlook her because she is last on the catalogue.

The yearlings will be ready for exhibition Suoday, November 27th, at the salesyerd of Killip & Co., Van Ness avenue end Market street.

Those with racing engagements will be sold with their eogagements, tbe acceptances to be signed with Killip & Co.

Attend tbe sale and get a winner, for there ere a high-class lot of youngsters to be sold.

Leveling the Hoof.

The leveling snd balancing of the hoof and the methods employed by practical horseshoers vary bnt little, and that little depends opon tbe condition of the hoof and legs of the horse to be shod, says a practical shoer in the Horseshoer's Journal.

To give the reader e clesrer idea of the methods employed by practical horseshoers it is necessary to make e great many explenations, in conveying the idea to the reader, of the methods employed by the practical horseshoers when preparing the hoof for the shoe.

The first part of the work is to remove the shoe, and in doing that see that your clinchers are all cut so as not to break the wall when raising the shoe off the hoof.

The shoe removed, clean out the bottom or sole part of the hoof, being sure that yon remove nothing but the loose deed parts, that is, in sonnd, healthy feet. The next is to remove tbe higber parts of the wall to a level with the sole that abuts the wall. By dressing the wall to a level with tbe sole, you distribute and enlarge the bearing surface of the wall, but if the sole is dressed past its natural level on one side of the wall do not rasp off the otber side to get it even witb the sole, or you may throw the hoof out of level. As that word level means the futnre welfare of the horse, for without a level hoof and a center to pass over, no horse moves without friction, as tbe unleveled hoof means an uneven bearing on tbe heads of the upper and lower pastern bones, also the coffin bone, one of the herdest to treat successfully when injured.

As few men can dress a board to a given width, length and thickness without using tbe square or rule, it is also fair to say tbat the farrier cannot get lengths, widths and angles without the square and level.

Leveling and balancing the horse's hoof for the shoe is one of the most essential parts of the farrier's art, as one or two cuts witb the knife will undo what nature took monthe to accomplisb.

As mucb of tbe rasping and cutting of the horse's hoof is the wish of the owner, the farrier is not always to bleme; for thin paring and high rasping of the anterior wall means fever and contraction of tbe hoof and later on, corns and maturated heels. If owners and tbeorists knew more of the anatomy of tbe hoof and leg of the horse there would be less lame horses snd better mechanics working at the art of horseshoeing.

As the preparetion of the hoof for the shoe means years of study end a thorougb knowledge of tbe anatomy of the hoof and legs of the horse, it must not be supposed that every man calling bimself horseboer or farrier is master of the art he professes to understand.

To level aod bslaoce the hoof, first find the center of the boof in front of the coronet by running a string from the cleft of the frog close to tbe coronary band around tbe hoof, theo double tbe string and run it back from tbe cleft of the frog to the front of the hoof close to tbe coronary band as before, and you have tbe center of the hoof in front of the coronet. To find tbe top center at tbe bottom of the boof, lay the square lengthwise of the frog, taking the cleft of the frog for the center of tbe boof; run your line from the cleft of the frog down over the frog's point to the toe and you heve the center of the boof top and bottom. Then apply the leveler, and if tbe hoof is level the square will stand directly over the line from the toe to the coronet, if not, tbe square will pass tbe line at the coronary band to the high side of the hoof. To get tbe heigbt of tbe heels, use the sliding square at the back of the leveler. The lengtb and angle of the toe will be found by using the square attached to the front of the leveler. The next is to balance the heel. Again you must use tbe level and place the hoof on it with the cleft of the frog straddle of the back square, aod the square in front over tbe center toe line, and the figures on face of the leveler shows the big or small side of the hoof, if it it is not balanced. Having the hoof leveled and balanced, it is ready for the shoe.

Gunney Gue, the well known turf writer of New York, will shortly publish a book giving the full breeding of all tbe 2:15 performers. Mr. Gue has been at work on this list for twn years and has been indefatigable in hunting up pedigrees of all those in the 2:15 list.

MILE HEATS, TWO IN THREE.

The Happy Medium Between Three in Five and Dashes.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—That the season of 1898 on the grand circuit in tbe East drew forth an almost unanimous protest against the "three best heats in five" system of harness racing causes no surprise, In tbis age of speed, when the msjority of heats ere trotted and paced below 2:15 in all tbe more important races, it is no wonder that owners and trainers are crying out against a costom which limits the treck life of a fast horse to two or three seasons, end prevents the winners of the earlier part of tbe season from participating in, let alone winning, races during tbe closing weeks of the circnit. Oot here in Californie we heard complaints years sgo from the public in regsrd to long drawn out races, and deleys caused by the three in five system, wbile the horsemen were unanimously of the opinion tbat a change was necessary. In obedience to the clemor for a change tbe dash system was inaugurated by the "Breeders" Association end at its summer meeting this year this plan was given a trial. I must confess that the first two weeks of that meeting led me to believe that we had fonnd something better than the old heat races, but tbe tbird week shook my faith in the dash system as an improvement over old methods.

We went from Oakland to Santa Rose, where another scheme was tried, and instead of the short dashee or the long drawn out tbree in five, we struck what I believe to be the happy medium, and the program was made np of mile and repeat races, or "two in three" as they were styled in the pspers. As a participent in a few of the racee at Santa Rosa, end an interested looker-on at many others there, I am reedy to testify that it is the most satisfactory system tbat has yet been devised. Nineteen races were pulled off at that meeting, twelve of whicb were ended in two beats and would have been ended in tbree nnder the old style as the winners outclassed tbeir opponents sofficiently to have accomplished that result. In five races three heats sufficed to decide the winner, and in two races it took four beats to determine which was the best horse. There was not a day of tbe meeting but the card was finisbed in ample time for the spectators to reach home in time for dinner, and by sun down the last horse had been cooled out end pnt away in his stall for the night. The crowd went home satisfied that the best horses had won, snd was not so fagged out but it was ready to come beck the next day to enjoy a continuetion of the sport. Owners and trainers were pleased that their horses were not trotted and paced to death, and if any horses left that meeting the worse for herd driving or overwork it was because they had been sterted three or four times during the week, or had been drilled to deeth on the track in their treiniog.

I know that nothing succeeds like success, end as the Senta Rosa meeting was one of the most successful ever given in California (circumstances considered) the claim mey be made thet the two in three system was only an incident of the meeting and not one of the prime factors of ite success. I will not admit it. Had the program at Santa Rosa called for dash races, or three heats in five, I firmly believe the result would have been very different. Of course, we all know the management of the Sante Rosa meeting was first-class, and that the people of that locality were ripe for a meeting end patronized it liberally, but the fact remaine that the system of racing pleased them and they are anxious to have it repeated next yeer, which would probably not be the case had tbe racing been on a different plan. Take it from any and every point of view and I think the two in tbree or, as we formerly termed it, the mile and repeat system of harness racing is the very best that has yet been devised.

One thing I would like to add is, that to make any system of harness racing popular with the public, we will have to abolish bookmaking and have no pools sold on heats.

Much Better, 2:07 1-4, in the Courts.

Soon after the harness racing season of 1898 began Dr. C. G. Bull, of Alameda, entered into some sort of an agreement with C. F. Bunch, Superintendent of tbe Vendome Stock Farm, of San Jose, by which the latter was to take the Doctor's mare, Much Better, and campaign her. It is also eeid that Bunch was to have an option on tbe mare. At the close of tbe season Mr. Bunch made an offer or tender of $500 for the deugbter of Ches. Derby, which was refused, and tbe Doctor has now brought snit for tbe recovery of the animal. We understand that the suit will be fought by Mr. Bunch and that it is bis iotention, in cese the court decides in his favor, to breed Much Better to the Vendome Stock Farm's premier stallioo, Iran Alto, 2:13¾, son of Palo Alto, 2:08¾.

As Much Better holds the record for four-year-old pacing mares, and is coosidered by good judges to be one of tbe greetest prospects for 1899, this suit will attract much attention among the horsemen of tbe Coast. The Sheriff of Santa Clara county recently received a claim of delivery and went out to the San Jose race track and placed Mucb Better under attachment. Authority for this action was given in a bond procured in San Francisco in the sum of $4,000, double the price of the mare as given in tbe complaint. Bunch will be allowed five days in which to except to the bond. In case he does not do so, he may file a bond in the sum of $8,000 and retake the mare. Further procceedings in the matter will be awaited with interest.

LIBERAL POLICY IN BREEDING.

Suitable Stallions Should Be Selected Irrespective of Ownership.

[W. H. ROWE.]

It is not easy to deduce rules for an art. Indeed, this is virtually approachable only in the directions where the art itself may be considered from the standpoint of whatever it possesses in the nature of science. This reasoning, it seems to me, applies very appropriately to the breeding of the thoroughbred racehorse. The propagation of the breed is, of course, entirely too dependent upon many various surrounding influences, which are bound to arise from the very nature of the conditions, to make it possible to ever reduce the course of procedure to an exact science. But that certain data which may be utilized with great advantage to the breeder is a matter which admits of almost no debate whatever.

The liking of certain well defined strains for each other, the suitability of certain individuals for inbreeding, and the operation of certain well known "nicks," especially when used in conjunction with certain other well defined strains—these and other deductions from the plain teachings of the Stud Book and the Turf Guides are matters upon which the breeder cannot be too well informed, and upon which he cannot too carefully found his plans.

Probably the greatest obstacle which prevents the very best development of the American thoroughbred today is the reluctance of breeders to send their mares to other men's stallions. I may be quite justly accused of threshing old straw when I write upon this line of thought. But may I not retort that the matter is of an importance sufficiently vital to justify its careful and forcible presentation now, in view of its application to the future?

A man who owns a thoroughbred stallion or broodmare owes it as a duty to that horse or mare to have him or her mated annually in such an alliance as that the bloodlines of the chosen mate shall be as suitable as can possibly be arranged. The question of the ownership of the chosen mate should never be allowed to influence the choice, either one way or the other. Is this too ideal a state of things to ever hope for? Personally, I think it is not. At all events, as a matter of strict consideration along the lines which point to the greatest possible percentage of chance for success, I fail to see how there is room for any reasonable amount of argument upon the question. And I repeat that the prevailing American practice of almost invariably limiting the alliances of a stallion or mare to the confines of their own owner's stud is unbusinesslike, unpractical and unworthy of a nation of people who are, in about all other matters, eminently businesslike and practical.

Let me present this idea in another way. Supposing an owner does decide, as is sometimes but far too frequently the case, to send a mare or two to some other man's stallion. Does he not carefully take the resultant pedigree into careful consideration? Next spring, for instance, Ornament enters upon stud life, and here is a certain breeder who has been deeply impressed with the horse's racing career, and, being convinced that the horse is going to do well, takes a subscription to him. Will he pick out one of his mares in a haphazard sort of way and send her to Ornament, or whichever the selected stallion may be, without making any sort of calculation as to the percentage of chance which the resultant pedigree will have for producing a high class racer? I think not. And yet there are scores of American breeders returning their mares to their own horses where, were the ownership of the horse vested in someone else, these same breeders would regard the alliance as far too lacking in suitability to justify their patronage.

Horses or mares cannot get or produce great racers from mates whose main credential for union with them is the fact that both are in the same ownership. And continued unsuitable or comparatively unsuitable alliances based upon the sole credential of similar ownership are, as I have said, unbusinesslike, unpractical, unworthy and, I may add, the veriest extreme of shortsightedness.

How can any breeder, or, at least, the average breeder, find within the confines of his own stud a sufficient number of suitable mates to give his stallion, or each one of his stallions, if he owns more than one, a really genuine opportunity every year to sire racers of the desired high class? It is, in the great majority of cases, almost a mathematical impossibility of the most obvious nature. But these suitable mares, and a sufficient number of them, are almost certain to be found here and there by a careful resume of other studs. And with these mares in the vast majority of cases annually mated at present with more or less unsuitable stallions, and these same stallions annually denied access to suitable mares, how is it possible for either the horses or the mares to do anything like full justice to themselves, to their owners or to the development and improvement of the thoroughbred race horse?

The experiences of breeders, both past and present, are crowded with illustrations from which I fancy I might aptly quote. For instance we hear nowadays that St. Blaise has "gone back." Nonsense. He has only experienced somewhat the same sort of temporary misfortune as does the upper part of a structure when the foundation caves in. Selected in England and imported with a view of being mated with the well suited mares of the late Mr. Belmont's stud, St. Blaise promptly began the work of furnishing high-class winners for the "maroon and scarlet." Need I recall the roll? I think not. Then came the dispersal sale, and the son of Hermit went to Mr. Reed's stud, only to have a very large number of the suitable mares with which he had been mated swept out of existence by that memorable lightning accident. Since then what sort of really reasonable chance has St. Blaise been afforded? Put him again at the head of a properly selected stud, as was Mr. Belmont's or arrange for owners of suitable mares to send them to him, and I have no manner of doubt that the Potomacs, La Toscas, St. Florians and St. Carlos would speedily put in a reappearance.

The same is true, although the parallel may not be developed by the same circumstances of many, many other American owned stallions. Lack of proper and reasonable opportunity is the bane of these horses, whose greatest curse is their bad luck to be located in a land where the great majority of breeders are too short sighted or too jealous—or both—to send their mares when they will have the greatest percentage of chance to produce high class stock.

Decrying as I do the prevailing policy of American breeders, I do not mean to imply that we do not as a nation breed good horses—yes, great ones. We do breed grand specimens but we don't annually produce as many of these great ones as we ought. Were the accessible and comparatively neighboring sections of this country utilized by the large majority of breeders for the purpose of arranging suitable meetings irrespective of ownership I have no question that our blood stock would be vastly the gainer.

I have doubtless done an injustice to some breeders by insinuating that their policy of keeping their mares for their own stallions is prompted by selfishness or jealousy. I am well aware that, with some of our private breeders especially it is a matter of the purest sentiment. Of this feature of the case it is not easy to write dispassionately, for sentiment in breeding and racing is far too seldom in evidence nowadays to justify anyone in discouraging its occasional appearance. But, as a matter of fact, this sentimental side of the matter is too often warped by a misconception of the true merits of the case. Supposing that a breeder sends his mare to an outside stallion and the alliance results in a Futurity or Realization or Kentucky Derby winner, is not the knowledge that he owns the mare and arranged the meetings quite as full a need of sentimental gratification as would be on the other hand, the pride of possessing both the dam and sire of the winner?

It is simply this: Against the pride of owning the sire, we must set the pride of having arranged the alliance with another man's horse. While I do not suppose every one will agree with me, I nevertheless regard the two cases as of equal cause for gratification, and I am quite sure that the course of patronizing the most suitable horse will surely be vastly more profitable. Sentiment is a most desirable and thoroughly praiseworthy quality in a turfman or breeder. But sentiment is not business, and I am treating this subject in the cold light of a business proposition, having in view the production of the greatest possible number of high-class winners from a certain number of mares in any one stud.

The dictates of reason and of common sense, and, as I read them, the unmistakable teachings of the Stud Book and the Racing Guides—all unite in urging a most universal and liberal policy of breeding upon these Americans who furnish our turf its racing stock.—N. Y. Telegraph.

Thrilling Accident in Auetralla.

At Caufield, October 16, 1898, almost thirteen years to a day since Donald Nicholson, the rider of Lord Exeter, was killed by his horse falling, another terrible accident occurred which is thus told by the "Weekly Press."

The thrilling catastrophe of thirteen years previous, when Donald Nicholson, the rider of Lord Exeter, was killed, when a number of horses amongst the forty-one starters were brought down, was repeated three hundred yards after the start for the Cup. P. Flansgan, son of the owner of Robin Hood, whose family is in independent circumstances, and who had recently ridden the horse into second place in the A. J. C. Metropilitan Stakes, expiring before reaching the casualty room; whilst C. Foon, the rider of Reka, fractured his ankle: A. Hearn, on Mischief, broke his collar-bone; and A. Powell, rider of Acton, sustained severe concussion of the brain, which proved fatal next morning.

At the start for the Caulfield Cup the horses travel some 350 yards in a bee line before rounding the first turn. Naturally, when large fields compete, the jockeys on the extreme outside make a direct course for the corner, approaching which they crowd in on those nearer the rails. On passing the grand stand yesterday it was noticeable the jockeys were more pronounced than usual in the outcries and shouts of "Keep out!" "Keep out!" The first warning the spectators had that danger was imminent was opposite the members' reserve to the grand stand. Acton, in the centre of the field, some distance out from the rails, stumbled, apparently in the same manner as did Too Too in 1885, through crossing his forelegs. Reka, racing directly behind, fell over Acton, and Mischief, Majestic, The Musketeer, Superb, and Robin Hood likewise came down, whilst R. Lewis, on Cocos, was shot up into the air with uplifted arms, clean out of the saddle.

Quite a number of the contestants jomped over the prostrate horses and jockeys with marvellous instinct, Flanagan being cleared by several until trying to roll out of harm's way, when he was buffatted about, receiving fearful injuries, his neck, both legs and an arm being broken. Had Acton fallen in towards the rails instead of outwards, or had the accident happened fifty yards further on at the elbow on the turn, the catastrophe would have assumed greater proportions. As it happened in full sight of the people on the stand and lawn (whereas in Grace Darling's year the contretemps occurred near the home turn), the screams of the ladies lent additional excitement to the scene, which completely marred the afternoon's enjoyment. So far as has been gleaned, none of the horses are seriously injured, but Reka cut an artery, and other are very lame.

ORAIBEE, the Orizaba gelding which graduated from the maiden class during the last Oakland meeting and which was made the medium of a killing by his stable on that occasion, has been sold by his owner, Dan Honig, to Perry Hildreth; the consideration was not made public, but Uncle Dan appeared to be well satisfied after the money changed hands.

Rufflanism on the English Turf.

[From the New York Telegraph.]

In the English sporting papers of the past season there has been quite a deal of discussion in regard to the black-guardism that is at all times more or less prevalent on the turf in England, and which is to be seen at even the most fashionable meatings.

This recalls anew my astonishment on first going racing in this country at the orderly, good behavior of the average American race-goer, as compared with those on the other side of the water, where the hordes of foul-mouthed ruffians which are to be met on the care and in the different enclosures (with the exception of Tattersalls') are so offensive to all decent people that it is really a wonder some determined effort has not long since been made to get rid of what is undoubtedly a great blot on English racing:

I need not refer here to the manner in which the average race-goer conducts himself in this country, but will relate what is to be seen on nearly all race-courses in England where, be it understood, there is not the system of protection that is to be found in the metropolitan district here, where one feels as safe in the ring or on the grandstand of a race track as he would at a church sociable.

In England there are organized mobs of all sorts of trick-in-the-loup fakirs, who from the moment they get into the railway carriage until they return in the evening have been plying their occupation, and a man has to become pretty well accustomed to their game and their language before he would want to ride in the same car with them a second time, while as to any respectable woman traveling in the same car, that could not be thought of.

At the various race tracks the principal sources of annoyance are the welcher and the ticket snatcher. The latter gentry carry on their occupation chiefly on what is called over there "the outside" (that is, outside any of the rings), and when there are great crowds and many bookmakers. Quite a percentage of the bookmakers are safe, good men, but there are also many welchers among them, and as the ticket snatchers and welchers are practically one breed of varmint, they work in together. If there is anywhere on earth to be found a more brutal and audacious gang of ruffians the locality has not yet been heard from.

In regard to the welching fraternity, there any number of well known ones that have been at the game for twenty years or more and are still at it, although they are known to the police and also to the officials at the different race meetings, but in this, as in other matters in relation to racing in England, everything is conducted on the principal of the survival of the fittest. The racegoer is permitted to pay his money and protect himself, and if he hands his money over to a welcher instead of ascertaining who is safe end who is not, that is his lookout.

This may be all right in one view at least, but in the matter of the ticket snatchers, who are simply bands of brutal thieves, it would seem as though the police nor the racing officials have done their duty by the racegoing public, else this evil would long ago been stamped out, The ticket game is worked in this way: Backers are spotted when they make their bets, and in the event of their horse winning or their ticket in any other way calling for cash, when their ticket is held up to the bookmaker, who is always on a box or something to elevate him above the crowd, it is promptly snatched.

A favorite method is for one of the gang to get on the opposite side of the victim and just as he is in the act of handing his ticket up to give him a terrible rap on the shoulder, which in nine cases out of ten will cause him to turn his head that way and in a twinkling a confederate has the ticket, and although the victim may have plenty of witnesses, he has no redress, and most invariably the snatcher collects the coin.

There are, of course, lots of instances where some game, handy fellows get satisfaction, but the thieves are so well banded together that usually discretion is the better part of valor. On rare occasions a policeman will take a hand, but it is so common for racegoars to be welched and to have their tickets snatched that but little is thought of it, and it is only when a victim is being abused that the "bobby" interferes, so that it will be seen there is practically no protection for the small bettor in England.

In the rings, with the exception of Tattersalls, welching also abounds, and it is rare indeed that money once handed over to a welcher is ever recovered. In this connection it may be stated that racegoers in England have to pay much more for accommodations than is the case in this country. Many of the older courses are free to what is called the field in this country, but what cost two dollars at the first class meetings in the neighborhood of New York costs five dollars in England, and with no such sense of security of purse or person as is the case here.

There has been, as stated above, repeated newspaper agitation going on for years in regard to race-track ruffianism in England, but things are just about the same today, according to what is reported to have been going on during the past season, as they were twenty or thirty years ago. And it must be said that this is one thing that is very much better done in this country, where such scenes as are common on English race tracks are practically unknown.

KELSTON.

THE way the racing public rush to gain advantageous positions to the steeplechases, shows it must be very highly exciting. If the Ingleside Association could only manage to have a few good jumpers brought from the East a race of that sort would be worth going a long way to see. The band of cattle that started Saturday, in the jump, should not be given stable room as they are absolutely worthless. Dan Honig must have had a grudge against McAuliffe when he put him up on Filou, as the crab fell not less than four times. With good horses steeplechasing is very fascinating, but, with the class that started yesterday it is a farce.

THE ORMONDE FILLIES.

They Average Over a Thousand Dollars at Auction Monday Night.

The first of the get of "Horse of the Century" to be sold at auction were sold in Killip & Co.'s big tent on the corner of Market street and Van Ness avenue last night. There was a large crowd present, but the heavy bidders who have made sales of choice stock so successful in former years were not present. John Mackey, Col. Burns, A. B. Spreckels and others who bid by $500 jumps were conspicuous by their absence. But the sale was lively and there was no dwelling. Edwin F. Smith made the announcement that every filly would be sold no matter what the bid was, and Mr. Chas. Baldwin, who was looking after the Macdonough interests, said that if any purchaser was dissatisfied he could bring the animal back and get his money.

Three St. Carlo yearling fillies owned by Mr. Macdonough and two yearling colts by the same sire and owned by Dr. Posey and P. W. Selby, Esq., respectively, were sold first. They averaged $350. A filly by Morello brought but $150. Then the first of the Ormonde fillies was brought into the ring and there was a craning of necks. She was a grand looker and no mistake, and was started at $500. There were a half dozen bidders at first, but it finally settled down to a contest between W. B. Sink Jr. and Ed Lannigan. Mr. Sink finished stronger than his opponent and his bid of $2,300 secured the handsome filly amid applause.

The average for the five Ormondes sold was $1,070. The average for the St. Carlos $350. The Morello sold for $150.

The grand total of the sale was $7,250 and the average for all was $660.

The following were the prices obtained for each:

PROPERTY OF W. O'B. MACDONOUGH.

St. Felicity, ch f, by St. Carlo—Princess Idle, by Prince of Norfolk; E. Lannigan	$400
St. Elizabeth, ch f, by St Carlo—Bessie W., by Darebin; Judge C. Post	300

The Antrim Yearlings.

On Wednesday evening at the Occidental Horse Exchange, the yearlings from Chas. Kerr's Antrim Stock Farm were sold. There was a good attendance and the prices obtained were fair for a lot of colts by mostly untried sires. The total received for the twenty-two head was $3,805, which is an average of $172 95 per head. The prices obtained and the buyers were as follows:

B c by Sam Lucas—Audacity; W. D. Randall	$125
Ch f by Rio Bravo—Cinderella; Fred Edwards	225
Ch c by Rio Bravo—Rosa Belle; H. L. Haskell	85

Del Norte, the pacer who holds the record for guideless performers, is only pursued, in his exhibitions, by a man mounted on a thoroughbred runner, and it is the desire of the pacer to keep ahead of the runner, which causes him to go so fast by himself. With other guideless wonders grooms are stationed at convenient distances around the course and pelt the animal with little missiles to urge him on. There seems to be some merit in the style of Del Norte.

Murry's Sale of Thoroughbreds.

It is seldom an opportunity is offered all who are engaged in the horse business to get exactly what they went at a sale. Mr. Wm. Murry, whose fame as a judge of what good horses should be, has resolved to dispose of all his horses not in training, among them are royally bred stallions, broodmares, geldings, colts and fillies by such sires as Three Cheers, Morello, Major Ban, imp. Mr. Pickwick, Oscar; Thornhill, imp. Loyalist, Jackson and in fact horses whose names are known to every follower of the races. These are out of famous dams and we promise seekers after good thoroughbreds that many bargains will be secured. All of the horses are in excellent condition and as the prospects for a good season in 1899 include the surety of district fairs, every farmer should attend this sale and get the foundation of a fortune. The auction sale will take place at the Occidental Horse Exchange, 721 Howard street, next Friday night, December 2d. Horses will be on exhibition Thursday and Friday.

A new use has been found for steel by a firm in Sheffield, Eng., who are now making a steel harness trace, consisting of a narrow ribbon of steel, from three-fourths to one inch wide, rolled very thin and cased in leather. A single trace of this kind, when tested at the Sheffield testing works, recorded a tensile breaking strain of 4,575 pounds, while an ordinary leather trace of the best quality, tested at the same time, broke at a strain of 2,700 pounds. In addition to being lighter and stronger trace, the steel article is about 20 per cent cheaper. The steel is necessarily of the very finest quality, and is so pliable that it can be twisted in any direction.

VIRGINIA BRADLEY.

A Kind Word for the Much Abused Owner of Boney Boy.

Speaking of the closing of the Lakeside meeting, the World of Sport says:

"Virginia" Bradley was again the central figure. In the six days ending Saturday Mr. Bradley has started his Blitzen—Sue B two year old, Boney Boy, five times, and for the fourth time the youngster has returned winner. It was the gelding's sixth race in seven racing days, and the distances he had traversed were from six furlongs to miles. The youngster is certainly possessed of those qualities which gave his sire the name of the "iron horse." After his win in a mile race at Lakeside, Saturday, he was cooled out and loaded on a car to be shipped to Bennings. Mr. Bradley's critics declared that he went in a box car, and his entry in a race Monday at Washington track was telegraphed ahead.

Since Treverser fell dead in a race at Hawthorne, "Pa" Bradley has been harshly criticised for his manner of running his horses. Perhaps the tall Virginian is a severe task-master, but in getting what all the other owners are after—purses—Mr. Bradley certainly has greater success than those who nurse their charges. Mr. Bradley is in the racing business for business first and sentiment afterward. A lifetime in the care of horses has made him an expert in that line. He is no inferior veterinarian, and any ailment in his stable is treated by himself. To those who have called him a "driller," and a man devoid of sentiment for the horse, it may be news to hear that he is opposed to "firing" as a needless cruelty. No owner knows more about a horse than "Pa" Bradley, and few know as much. If there is ailment in any of the stables in his vicinity he is prompt with a method of treatment, and any number of horsemen can testify to the efficacy of his remedies and advice. It was Mr. Bradley who deterred Mr. Cameron from having May W. "fired," and by his counsel and remedies the fast mare was brought out of her lameness without the use of the iron. Mr. Bradley's eccentricities make him the object of all sorts of shafts, but he doesn't care about a little thing like that as long as they are not shot in his hearing. Few care to take a chance of offending the Virginian in his hearing, for he has the Kentucky habit of ostensibly paring his nails with a big bladed jackknife, and fastening his keen blue eye on one in disconcerting fashion when an argument is imminent. Mr. Bradley said before he left Saturday for Bennings that he had in Boney Boy a better horse than Blitzen ever was.

Safety and Humanity.

A fence that will effectually keep live stock in or out without the objectionable feature of great cost and the danger attendant on the use of the cruel barbed wire is one that every stock raiser needs. Just such a fence as this is to be had in the "American" all steel woven wire Field Fence, in addition to the condition of its durability, cheapness and easy facility of construction it has the additional advantage of being an ornamental structure, in fact, it is in every way the stock raiser's best friend. See advertisement in this week's issue.

Used With Success for Cocked Ankles, Etc.

Angola, Ind., June 22, 1897.

Wish to use "Gombault's Caustic Balsam" on an outside splint, and as our dealer has no printed instructions I would be thankful if you would mail me pamphlet. Have used the above remedy with success on cocked ankles, curbs and enlarged glands, but want some instructions on this splint, as the patient is one of my favorite driving mares.

F. W. Kinney.

Sudlersville, Md.

I have used a bottle of Absorbine with good effects.

Saddle Notes.

JOHNNY REIFF hereafter will not be allowed to accept more than two mounts daily.

HAL BROWN has been engaged to ride for the Ezell stable during the present racing season.

THERE is an alarming increase in the touting business and unless the two associations do something to stop it the sport will suffer materially.

SKEETS MARTIN just at present is riding in great form; he shows great improvement over the work he did here last winter.

BABIECA, belonging to the string of Doke & Wishard, was suffering from an incurable disease of the foot, and on Tuesday had to be destroyed.

BOARDMAN is only a fair two-year-old, but if Mr. Sink will start him in a few more gentlemen's races he might be able to sell him to some glue factory.

IF Jockey Rutter does not show improvement in the handling of his mounts, he will soon be enjoying a well deserved vacation and viewing the races from the ground.

A CARLOAD of horses belonging to Tom Ryan and which has been delayed on the way, arrived at the Oakland track Saturday night. Among the twelve were Demois and Don't Skip Me.

ANOTHER victory placed to the credit of that good two-year-old Ventoro. Does anybody know how good he is? He wins driving and he wins easily from about the same class, but he always wins.

AN American syndicate has purchased in London of Mr. Debell, The Rush, chestnut horse, foaled 1892 by Barcaldine, dam Whirlpool, by See Saw, out of Miss Pool, by Parmesan, etc. The price reported is $25,000.

MR. J. B. HAGGIN has bought two Bend Or stallions in England for his California establishment. They are the four-year-old Orelio and the five-year-old Conroy. The former is a full brother to Ormonde, but was not a racing success.

MR. HOBART purchased Mistral II. Thursday before the mile race and the horse ran in his colors. Once before in an amateur race Mr. Hobart was put up on "a dead one" and evidently he was not willing to take chances of having the trick repeated.

MR. CORRIGAN has sold Joe Ullman to Mr. Wishard and Einstein to Earnshaw Bros. It don't seem as if Mr. Corrigan will have a very formidable stable this year, his best horse, Geyser, is reported to have again gone wrong and may not start this winter.

WASH. KING, a jockey who has ridden on Eastern and Western tracks for the past sixteen years, is dead at his home in Atchison, Kansas, from the effects of a fall received while riding at Denver two years ago. He rode in California at the old Bay District track on the flat and over the jumps.

THE racing public will have to excuse the ragged starting of Wednesday. The experience that Mr. Caldwell went through Wednesday morning at the very unfortunate Baldwin Hotel fire was enough to shake the nerves of any man. He lost everything and barely escaped with his life, as did the rest of the guests.

C. A. TILLES, the St. Louis turfman, expects to spend the winter on the coast. Tilles owns Her Favor, Ferroll, Bishop Reed and several other well-known performers. Trainer Rodegap will winter them at Lexington. Ferroll and Her Favor both won at Lakeside this week, with all kinds of long odds posted against them.

COL. JACK Chinn will sell his entire breeding stud at Woodard & Shanklin's sale November 28th to December 3d. The list is headed by the grand race horse and most promising sire, Lissak, and includes about twenty richly bred mares and fourteen yearlings, some of which have been tried and shown phenomenal work.

THE number and calibre of horses is constantly improving and the racing public from now on will witness some high class sport, Horses are arriving every day. A few more of the bookmakers and plungers are coming which will make betting a little better. The present outlook is that we will have a splendid meeting this winter.

BALTIMORE was shut out in the matter of racing dates this year because there were not dates enough left to divide between the Bennings and Pimlico tracks. The application of the Washington people was received months ahead of that from the management of the Baltimore track, and the selection naturally fell to Washington.

BARNEY SCHREIBER has sold Bozzaris to a sea captain When Dan Honig learned that the St. Louis bookmaker had parted company with one of his "also rans" he inaugurated a desperate search for the buyer. If the bold seaman is willing Dan will load him up with several of the choicest stake winners (?) that ever came over the pike.

MR. FRED ANDERTON has preferred charges with the Pacific Coast Jockey Club against Virginia Carroll and his very brave assistant, one Mosely. It is to be hoped that the Stewards will take immediate action in the case, as from all accounts the assault was most dastardly. There is no doubt but that the officials will mete out justice and that very shortly.

SHREWD form players are just as considerate about their own form and condition as they are desirous of high quality in horseflesh. The Sutter Street Hammam Baths now offers the best conveniences in the city. This establishment has been entirely refitted recently. The shampooers are first class, all other necessary details are high class and will readily meet the approbation of the many patrons of this popular resort.

D. S. QUINTON has sold Ed Heffner the two year-old bay colt Ellerdale, by Knight of Ellerslie-Banana. The price paid was $1,200. Quinton is a young Philadelphian, and this is his first year on the track. When Ellerdale became Heffner's property he had already been scratched, but as Quinton had engaged Willie Simms to ride the horse in the first race, he paid Simms for a losing mount. This is somewhat rarely occurs on a race track.

NICK HALL left Canace and Sevens in Kentucky. Last spring they were as promising a pair of two-year-olds as an owner would care to own, and great things were predicted of them. With Canace Mr. Hall won three races, but Sevens was a complete failure, breaking down early in the season. Canace was in the money several times, but three brackets was all she scored. Mr. Hall said he might bring them to the Coast later in the season, but just now his two-year-olds were of no account.

S. C. HILDRETH, who is very much in love with his new position as trainer to Mr. Sydney Paget, is a busy man getting everything into shape at Wheatley, where Mr. Whitney resides part of the season, and where he has a private race track and stables for his race horses. There are altogether thirty-one horses, including yearlings, under Mr. Hildreth's care, and as in the lot are some excellent material, this clever horseman, who has but few superiors in the conditioning of horses, is likely to be very much in evidence during the season of 1899.

THE great and only Tod Sloan arrived in New York on Saturday and expects to be in San Francisco by Christmas. Truth accuses Tod Sloan of unfair riding in the race for the Palatin Plate on the Friday before he sailed, and says that if an objection had been lodged Sloan would assuredly have been disqualified, as he nearly sent the horse ridden by Weldon over the rails, and also palpably interfered with Liebenstein. If Truth were as well acquainted with Tod's characteristics as the average American race obser er is, it would never have stultified itself so far as to have published the foregoing.

PIERRE LORILLARD arrived in New York Thursday. Before he left England he sold all the horses in training to his former partner, Lord William Beresford. It was said he sold out on account of poor health. Turfmen now expect that Mr. Lorillard will remain here to renew his racing interests on this side. Trainer John Huggins, who had charge of Mr. Lorillard's horses in England, remains abroad as trainer for Lord Beresford. Mr. Lorillard has maintained his breeding farm at Rancocas Stud, Johnstown, N. J. His crop of coming two-year-olds will give him plenty of material for a new stable—Daily Racing Form.

SAILOR KING, supposedly sold to J. J. McCafferty at one of the Morris Park sales for $4,600 by W. Jennings, and afterwards said to have been sold to J. J. McCafferty at private sale for $5,000, is still in Mr. Jennings' stable, and the sale was evidently a case of "hid in." People who indulge in these "faka" sales do more to hurt the whole thoroughbred industry than a casual observer would guess, and the practice deserves universal condemnation. Public confidence has been almost entirely destroyed in thoroughbred auction sales, and with good reason, and no one would especially care did it not so seriously react upon the breeders themselves, and aid in destroying the value of their property. "You can't fool all the public all the time," however.

HORSEMEN who have seen imp. St. Gatien since he arrived at Rancho del Paso say that he is a perfect type of thoroughbred. A rich, dark mahogany bay, almost a brown, standing very nearly sixteen hands, with both hind feet and near forefoot white and a stripe, the stallion is a very handsome animal, as might be expected from his illustrious lineage. His powerful back, quarters and middle piece mark the weight carrier all over as he proved himself to be when on the English turf, while a splendid set of legs, powerful shoulders, and a most intelligent-looking head show the blood horse of the very highest type. The veterinary who brought the stallion over said that he was a better sailor than himself.

WHITE CROSS, V. L. Kirkman's snow-white thoroughbred, made his first start yesterday in the second race, which was for two-year-olds at four and a half furlongs. Such an unusual sight as a white race horse attracted great interest, and many of the horsemen at the track had never seen such a thing before. White Cross is as good looking a specimen of horseflesh as one could find in a day's travel, but he failed to make any showing in his maiden start. However, he had no chance when the flag fell. Sherland, who had the mount, thinking that it was no start and pulled the colt up. He made no effort thereafter, seeing he was hopelessly beaten. White Cross is by Palestine, dam Black Gal, and probably gets his color from far back in his ancestry.—Nashville American.

ALL this talk about Clawson not being allowed to ride whenever he pleases is getting to be very nauseating. The people in whose hands Clawson's affairs have been placed know what they are doing, and if W. C. Whitney has signed the boy for next season it is dollars to doughnuts that he will ride for the Whitney Stable and no one else. Slavery was abolished in this country over thirty years ago, and as far as contracts are concerned, the obligations on both sides are equally binding and must be strictly lived up to or the contract becomes null and void. The boy is now riding at Bennings and if there is any virtue in the contract which binds him to ride in California this winter why is an injunction not served on the Bennings management to prevent him from riding at their track?

HUGH D. MCINTYRE, Secretary of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, has been elected to the position of Secretary of the Brighton Beach Racing Association. Mr. McIntyre will continue as Secretary of the Brooklyn Jockey Club as well. The decision was arrived at during a recent meeting of the Directors of the Brighton Beach Association. There were about twenty applications for the position. Mr. McIntyre received three of the five votes of the Board of Directors. Mr. McIntyre was a close friend of the late Charles Victor Sass, for years Secretary of the Brighton Beach Association, and was, until last season, the handicapper for the Club. He is understood to have been the personal choice of Mr. William Engeman, President of the Association. His selection is an assurance that the duties of the position will be filled in the most acceptable manner.

ALL through the racing season this year bettors have been wondering if the Metropolitan Turf Association would take any steps by which the difficult betting propositions which spring up from time to time might be easily solved. The Jockey Club refuses, of course, to take cognizance of any betting, and on the few occasions that vexatious questions cropped out, the bookmakers have interpreted justice to the bettors in a manner to suit themselves. It is needless to say that the public were given none the best of the decision on any of these occasions, and as a result there was an urgent demand that some set of betting rules which would cover all cases be arranged. The Metropolitan Turf Association, which includes all of the bookmakers who do business in the big ring on the metropolitan tracks, discussed the matter at a meeting held on Monday night and elected George A. Wheelock, Edward Borke, E. N. Marks, Edward Gaines and Robert L. Rose a Governing Committee to appoint an arbitration committee which will draft a set of betting rules.

THE origin of the expression "lobster," which has come to have only an opprobrious significance, in spite of the high regard in which the crustacean is held, has been traced by investigators to the Guttenborg race track, which is rarely the source of anything so widespread as the perverted use of this word has come to be. The races held there have developed necessarily an intensified vocabulary to describe the proceedings accurately. Ordinary words of race track currency were not adequate. One of these used to describe a particularly slow horse was the term "lobster," which implied that locomotion in its most laborious stage was represented by the animal. In the way that many similar misuses have traveled far, the word "lobster" came to have the general usage it enjoys to-day. It meant originally that the qualities of the lobster were not the most desirable in a race horse, even if he ran on the Guttenborg track. Now the opprobrium extends to any object not fitted to the purpose for which it is intended or possibly not fitted to any at all.

OLD PAROLE, which in 1879 gave the Britishers a foretaste of what was coming when two years later, his victories were supplemented by Iroquois' and Foxhall's brilliant performances in classic English and French events, it is interesting to note, in his 25th year, and still in good shape, and this wiry, clean-limbed gelding can be seen every summer at Rancocas roaming around in a large pasture with the yearling colts. Caiman, which recently won the Middle Park Plate in England, had the old horse for a particular "pal" the summer before last, and apparently benefited by the tips given him by the old war horse. Dr. Carter, the stud manager at Rancocas, discovered several years ago that Parole was in many ways a most desirable companion for yearlings, consequently he is much more in evidence than is customary with has-beens in the shape of geldings, no matter how brilliant. Parole's career as a race horse was a most wonderful one, and although many poob poob his being first class, the fact remains that he beat first-class ones at all distances, both here and in England, and were he on the turf in these degenerate days he would be an all-round champion.—[KELETON.]

THE starting of Tremargo in the first race at Bennings last week brought about an altercation between Jockey Simms and M. Menzies, Manager of the Sensation Stable. When Simms got up on Tremargo, as he states, the horse was not fit, and he made complaint before going to the post to the stewards that he was afraid to ride Tremargo, as would not gallop in the mud and be feared he would fall with him. Tremargo was well played, got off fourth, and stayed there throughout the race. When Simms returned to the paddock he met Menzies, and it is said that the latter charged Simms with not trying on Tremargo. Simms thereupon struck Monzies in the face. He expressed regret at having done so afterward, but said that he had been badly treated by Menzies. It was said that some of Simms' friends had bet quite heavily on Tremargo. The stewards took sharp action in the matter, fined Simms $200, suspended him for the meeting, took his badge away and referred the case to the Jockey Club—[Jockey Simms' quick temper, it will be remembered, got him into similar trouble at Ingleside last year, which was settled by the boy paying a $200 fine and apologizing to Mr. Kuhl]

MR. ALEX SHIELDS and other owners have made up a carload of racers for California and on last Thursday evening it started on its westward trip. Mr. Shields takes five horses, Topmast, Sugden, Guilbert, Frank Jaubert and Dick Warren. The latter does not belong to Mr. Shields, but will be trained by him for a Chicagoan. Topmast is a recent purchase and will be more than a useful horse. He can run well either in the mud or on a dry track. He says the colt Sugden has shown some speed and should be a breadwinner Mr. Shields remarked, "I have a fair string, but there is no Logan among them." A Toronto man named Carruthers is a part owner of Topmast. In the same car with Mr. Shields,' it takes a dozen to make up a load, go four horses belonging to "Cass" and Fremont Sloan, two of F. D. Collins' and old O'Connell. The Sloan's take Dare II., Prince Blazes, Ruskin and Charmante. All have won during the past season and it seems should win at San Francisco. When good, Dare II. is almost a stake horse. He cost the stable $1,450 at public auction and up to date has failed to win for them. F. D. Collins' two are Annowan and a maiden two-year-old. H. Sanders takes O'Connell. This old horse seems to be as good now as he ever was and his past reputation speaks for itself.

Passing of the Turf Plunger.

The old time turf plunger has become a thing of the past. This statement is made with due regard for the operations of speculators on racing events at the present time, and the undoubted fact that the volume of betting is greater now than ever before in the history of the turf.

"The "Plunger" Waltons, the Mike Dwyers, the "Pittsburg Phils" of the old days are not now in evidence.

"Plunger" Walton went broke against the game, as he must inevitably have done on his betting system.

Mike Dwyer also went broke, though he is not yet out of it entirely, and may retrieve his shattered fortunes in another season. Dwyer possibly made more big bets in his time than any other individual better, taking 1 to 2 and less for the majority of his money.

"Pittsburg Phil" is still a factor in turf speculation, but his operations are on nothing like the extensive scale of previous years, when he was wont to bet $50,000 on a race. His biggest bet of the season was one of $10,000 on Handcoff at Morris Park.

Riley Grannan was a heavy bettor only a few years ago, but even before his enforced retirement from the turf he had trimmed his sails and took no such chances as he did when Henry of Navarre ran his famous dead heat with Domino. Grannan took $70,000 in this race, and bet heavily on Henry of Navarre.

The reasons for this change in affairs are numerous. For one, no such betting as was formerly done would be possible under the present system.

There is no open market now, and not nearly the same number of men with big capital behind them are willing to lay the odds.

Under the new system speculation has gradually become diversified, and its tendency is to drift more and more into the hands of the public. There has thus arisen a state of affairs where the aggregate of bettors has increased largely, while the volume of individual transactions has diminished in corresponding ratio.

The new system in fact seems to be responsible for, or at least has conduced to, a more conservative business, in a great degree. As it has tended to put turf speculation more and more on a strictly business footing, so it has tamed the fiery spirit of the plunger, who was wont to bet the limit very often when he had a bottled up good thing.

Take "Pittsburg Phil," for example. He is probably worth the biggest part of half a million dollars, all of which he has made in turf speculation. He has made it in nervy plunging, through shrewd, sound judgment and knowledge of horses and the prices laid against them. He has won thousands upon thousands by the tip of a thoroughbred's nose, and it was when he had the least that he bet the heaviest. He has accumulated a fortune, and is now evidently devoting himself to the task of keeping it. In the early part of the season he did very little betting, preferring to wait until the summer and fall meetings, when form had become established. The temptation to plunge is perhaps as strong within him as ever, but the opportunities are not the same, and the preservation of the fortune he has already gained tends to decrease the amounts of his wagers.

Mike Dwyer, could he have back the immense sums he has wagered on 1 and 2 shots, would hardly go the same pace again, even though he had the opportunity, which he would not have now.

Riley Grannan has become one of the most conservative of bookmakers, partly through necessity, perhaps, but nevertheless it cannot be doubted that a change has come over the plunging fraternity, and this change dates to the enaction of the Percy-Gray law, and the placing of turf affairs on a sound basis.

The plunger was the natural product of the excess into which racing drifted a few years ago, and from which it was opportunely rescued by the Jockey Club and wise legislation.

The passing of the plunger marks, in fact, a new era for the turf in its speculative side, and in this as well as all other branches of the sport a healthier tone prevails than ever before.—New York Telegraph.

John Brenock Files a Cross Complaint to that of Curtis and Kuhl.

The litigation in which the Chicago Racing Association is already involved over the possession of the Hawthorne race track has been further complicated by the filing by John Brenock of a cross bill to the complaint of D. H. Curtis and George H. Kuhl against the association.

The answer contains twenty-two counts, and sets up that the transfer of the race-track property from the association to Richard Fitzgerald was entered into for the purpose of ruining the complainant's interest in the track, and was in reality fictitious, the track being alleged to be still in the control of Corrigan, though nominally in the name of Fitzgerald.

It is also declared that the remaining stockholders are dummies, who act under the direction of Corrigan, whose avowed intent is to force the complainant to sell his shares of racing association stock. In conclusion the bill asks that the court issue an injunction against Richard Fitzgerald to restrain him from transferring or in any way incumbering the property transferred to him, which order was entered by Judge Tuthill pending the hearing of the case.

When the case comes before the court for adjudication an effort will be made to secure an accounting from Corrigan of all the moneys which he has received from the association since the commencement of the racing season. An accounting is also asked from the remaining stockholders and directors.

The Chicago Racing Association, Edward Corrigan, G. H. Kuhl, D. H. Curtis, James C. Burke, Thomas Loonan, James M. Davis and Richard Fitzgerald, who are all alleged to have an interest in the property of the association, are made defendants in the cross bill.

A Simple Fire Protection.

Too much protection cannot be taken by the owners of valuable horses against the awful results of fire.

The desirability of having separate buildings for stallions, so that in case of fire they are not so readily exposed, and the further benefit of having the stallion barn of brick or stone, if possible, is generally understood if not always followed out. But if no extra precaution is taken in the way of separate buildings every farm should have some appliance right at hand by the aid of which an incipient blaze can be checked and a serious conflagration possibly prevented.

Where nothing more elaborate is arranged, some chemical engines, hand grenades, or something of the kind that are not expensive but always effective, should be provided. The Scientific American recently published simple directions for use where nothing else had been provided and which may prove of value.

Take 20 pounds of common salt and 10 pounds of sal ammoniac (nitrate of ammonia, to be had at any druggist), and dissolve in seven gallons of water. Procure quart bottles of thin glass, such as are ordinarily used by druggists, and fill with this, corking tightly and sealing to prevent evaporation.

In case of fire throw so as to break in or near the flame. If the fire is in such a place as to prevent the bottle from breaking, as in wool or cotton, knock off the neck and scatter the contents.

The breaking of the bottle liberates a certain amount of gas, and the heat of the fire generates more, thus working its own destruction.

Thoroughbreds for Austria.

H. A. Fleischman of Vienna, Austria, has recently purchased in Kentucky the following thoroughbreds for shipment to Austria for breeding purposes:

Donatello, ch h, 10, by Ten Broeck—Slipaway, by Longfellow	$ 1,500
Fanny Fonso, ch m, 10, by Fonso—Sita, by Algerine	300
Spellbound, b m, by Rapture—Rebecca, by Australian (with brown weanling foal at foot by Newton)	500
Sita, ch m, 18, by Algerine—Springlet, by Australian (with brown weanling filly by her side by Newton)	500
Bessie R., b f, 3, by Donatello—Lady Crafton, by Fellowcraft, bred to Newton	300
Minnewaska, b m, 6, by Hoover—Alice May, by Glengarry	500

These horses will be shipped to New York and will be sent across the water, starting December 3d. Last year the same buyer sent a lot of thoroughbreds from the bluegrass to Australia and they are doing so well that more are wanted.

Duroc Prince Dead.

Duroc Prince 18,651, died some weeks ago from the effects of a kick received from another horse. He was owned by George Owens, McMinville, Or., and his breeding as given in the Year Book is as follows: "Black horse foaled 1877, by Messenger Duroc 106, dam Lovina by Truesdale's Hambletonian, son of Hambletonian 10, grandam Babbit's Abdallah by Abdallah 1. Bred by Charles Bachman, Stony Ford, N. Y.; passed to John Redmond, McMinnville, Oregon, then to George V. James, Hillsboro, Oregon. He was sold at the James sale some years ago, and has not been kept very prominent before the public since. He was the sire of Rosie C., 2:16¾; Princess D., 2:18, and the dams of Lady Dephne, 2:21¼, Ben Bolt, 2:10½.—Rural Spirit.

The Greatest Horse Market.

John Splan made the stetement that Chicago is the greetest horse merket in the world, and an Eastern paper took him to task for it. And this is the way "the only" ceme back: "In 1897 there were received et this plece one hundred and eleven thousend six hundred and one horses (111,601). In 1896 there were one hundred end five thonsend nine hundred end seventy-eight horses (105,978). In 1895 one hundred and thirteen thonsend one hundred end ninety-three (113,193) horses. In face of the fact that the gentleman writes that bicycles and electricity have driven out the horses, it looks as if we were still some on the horse. Up to January 1, 1896, the Union Stock Yards had been in operetion thirty-two years and five days, and in that time there beve been received one million two hundred and five thonsand eight hundred end ninety-two horses. In the same time they have shipped awey by rail one million one hundred end eight thonsand nine hundred and fifty-four horses—the balance was absorbed by country trade. March 25, 1895, they received here in one day one thousand foor hundred and thirty-one horses. For the week ending March 30, 1895, they received foor thousand three hundred and sixty-nine horses. For the month of March, 1897, the received seventeen thousand seven hundred and eighty-two horses. These figures, together with the fact that there is comfortable stabling in the market for five thonsend horses—the handsomest and most expensive sale building in the world—makes me think that I am right when I say we sell more horses here than any other place in the world end have the finest place to sell them in, but em willing to be convinced to the contrery, providing our critic from the East will show us the figures."

Los Angeles Horse Show.

[Herald, Nov. 21.]

H. M. Dobbins, vice-president of the Horse Show association, has just returned from the East, and has put his shoulder to the wheel to help the work of the association in preparation for the coming Horse Show. Meanwhile Mr. Wooster, secretary of the association, has left for San Francisco to remain about a week, for the purpose of closing arrangements with the Southern Pacific railroad to bring down the exhibits of the gentlemen from San Francisco and Burlingame. Within a few days it is confidently expected that a long list of entries can be announced from these gentlemen.

William Curlett, of San Francisco, the consulting architect of the Horse Show association, has been here for a week making estimates and drawing plans for the boxes and stalls and seating arrangements for the Horse Show. Mr. Curlett will be remembered as the architect of the magnificent court house in this city, as well as many other buildings, public and private, in this city. His artistic sense has been of great value to the association in laying out the plans for the Horse Show.

The donation of cups and prizes for the different events in the horse show still continues, more than a dozen cups being already offered.

A friend of the association has just made a donation of $500 toward the cash prize list, and another a donation of $100. Both donors desired their names to be withheld. It is such evidence of appreciation and interest which greatly encourages the promotors of the horse show enterprise and assures the success of the first horse show in this city.

A Successful Horseman.

Mr. Wm. B. Fasig, one of the most prominent horsemen in the United States, and who has met with wonderful success in New York City conducting the great horse sale makes the following statement: "I have known Quinn's Ointment for years, some of its cures have been little short of miraculous. For all enlargements that are just coming on, or of recent origin, it is infallible." For curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all bunches, Quinn's Ointment has no equal. Price $1.50, smaller size 50 cents. If you cannot obtain it at your druggist, address W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y.

Ithaca, Mich.

Dear Sirs—We have used the Continental Ointment and think it is the best thing for hard and cracked hoofs that we have tried. Enclosed please find two dollars ($2), for which please send me Continental Ointment. I think I can sell it as I am doctoring horses all the time. Yours,

J. P. Whitman.

Reina de Cuba was much fancied by her stable to win the stake Saturday and was hammered down in the betting from eight to one to fours. At the paddock gate she seamed to have a good chance of winning, but dogged it badly in the last few strides.

Your stable is not complete without Quinn's Ointment. An infallible cure for all ordinary horse afflictions. Follow the example set by the leading horsemen of the world and your stable shelf will always hold a bottle of

Quinn's Ointment

A. L. Thomas, Supt. Canton Farm, Joliet, Ill., remarks, "I enclose you amount for six bottles of Quinn's Ointment. After one year's trial must confess it does all you claim for it." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins, Windpuffs or Bunches.

Price $1.50.

Sold by all Druggists or sent by mail.

W. B. EDDY & CO., Whitehall, N. Y.

Sukly Notes.

TROTTERS are worth money agaio.

THE list of 2:10 pacers nnmbers 236.

THE youngest son of George Wilkes is fifteen years old.

KENTUCKY breeders want Directum down in the blus grass country.

CALIFORNIA'S circuit for 1899 will he worth preparing a good horse for.

CLAY S., 2:14 is foll 17 hands high. Is there a horse as fast as he that is any larger?

DURING his stud career in the past three years, Star Pointer has only served twenty-two mares.

THERE ars a number of horseshoes upon the market in which rubber plays a prominent part.

JOHNSTON, 2:06½ to high wheel sulky, is dead. He was one of tha greatest of the great pacars.

THE American light harness horse should be well represented at the Paris Exposition in 1900.

DIRECT, 2:05½, is the sire of thirteen standard psrformers, five of which entered the list this year.

ROAD horses handled and for sale. Orders taken. Address D. N. Misner, 1309 Fulton street, City.

STAR POINTER weighed 1,130 pounds when in shape for record-breaking performances last Septemher.

THEY are partial to gray mares in France and those that can trot miles from 2:15 to 2:25 hring long prices.

THERE will be more meetings and higger purses for harness horses in the East next year than ever before.

THE most successful fair associations in the East are already claiming dates for 1899. What are our California associations doing?

TOO MANY purchasers overlook the fact that a poor hroodmare is dear at any price, and that a good one is always the cheapest in the end.

TAKING the Fasig sals this week as a criterion, Much Better, 2:07¼, would have hrought ahout $2,500 in New York if offered at anction.

THE Kentuckians sold mora horses at private sale, says one who knows, at the last breeders' meeting than in any season for eight yeare.

A fair association at Ballevue, Ohio, has declared a dividend of 3 per cent on its capital stock. The management knows how to conduct a fair.

"THE sooner farmers procure an extra set of wide-tire wheels for their farm wagons," says the Horss World, "tha sooner will the era of good roads he ushered in."

PRAY TELL, 2:09½ to wagon, is now owned by Robert Bonner, of New York. That gentlsman paid $5,100 for the chestnut son of Axtell at Fasig's sale laet Tuesday.

T. E. KEATING has a three-year-old by McKinney which he will take East with him next year. This colt is a pacer and is as fast as any young horse Mr. Keating ever handled.

A WISCONEIN hreeder, who has given the subject much thought and study, says that the coach typs can hest be obtained by breeding a grads Percheron mare to a stallion of the Mambrino Patchen typs.

THE Horss Fancier is a late addition to turf journalism. It is published in New York by ths proprietors of the American Horse Exchange and is filled with timely articles written by well-known turf writers.

MARGARET WORTH, 2:15, by Alexander Button, shipped East with a consignment of horses for ths Fasig sale last Monday, is one of the handsomest mares that ever left California. She should bring a good price.

DIRECTUM may bs taken to Kentucky for a season after being mated with his ownar's mares at Glsns Falls. Thera is snch a demand for the blood of this horse that he will he assured a full hook wherever he stands.

A COLLAPSE of the hicycle boom in England is looked forward to, and it is estimated that the capital invested has depreciated $50,000,000 in ths past few weeks. It is also noted that the prices of horses are going up.

LENNA N., 2:05½, the champion pacing mare was raced at the Point Breeze track, near Pennsylvania last week against Sanger, the Danver hicyclist. She heat him two heats out of three and did not have to go hetter than 2:12½ to do it.

THE catalogue of the Fasig sale now undar way in New York haa been received at this office. It is the largest and most complete sale catalogue ever issuad and a very valuable book for reference as it contains nearly 900 pedigrees.

ALFRED G., 2:19¾, son of Anteeo, and one of California's productions, stands well up among tha sires of new standard performers this year. He has seven new ones to his credit, among them the three-year-old trotter Charley Herr, 2:13¼, and the fast pacing mare Annie Lee, 2:07¼.

THE starting record is probably held by Newton Imus, of Mendota, Illinois. On Octohar 2, 1896, at the Illinois State Fair, ha started twenty-six trotting and pacing heats and five ruoning heats. He did this all in eight hours, an average of less than seventeeo minutes per heat

IT is not at all difficult to go out and buy an outclassed trotter or pacer, or a promising youngster, hut when a man asks for one thst can demonstrate the ahility to go fast enongh to win over tha mila tracks, he will find that they are not so plentiful hut that it takes a hig price to get one.

THE three fastest French trotting threa-year-old stallions of the seasan were all purchased by the government of France, the prices paid heing $4,000, $4,000 and $3,800. Each of these horses will stand next spring at a fee not exceeding a ten dollar note and more likely at seven dollars and a half.

MONAACH, 2:28¼, by Woodburn, son of Lexington, out of Victress by Belmont, was a thoroughhred trotter, who got his record in Oakland in 1878. Thos. Jones, Snperintendent of J. B. Chase's thoroughhred breeding farm, says he remembars the old gsldiog well and that he won ruoning races as well as trottiog events and was a pretty fair race horse.

THERE is an opportunity to dispose of a high-class road team that can show a 2:25 gait. They must have size and style and he absolutely sound and of a desirahle color and good conformation. The requirements are rather high hnt the dollars are ready in a goodly sum for such a team. Send word to this office if you have a team of this description for sale.

ONE of ths very best if not tha best lines of the Hambletonian family is the Abdallah 15 line. Almost to a horse from this line horses are sound, handsome, good sizs, full of speed and race horse quality. The Almonts, Belmonts, McGregors, Woods Hambletonian, need no commendation from any pen ae they universally do their own talking in a mute hut forcible way.

KLATAWAH did not bring as much as it was expected he wonld. It is said parties in this State would have paid $10,000 for the great colt, but thought it was nseless to send a commission on to New York, as they helieved he would not sell for less than $15,000. He is worth more than the $7,000 paid for him, and can win himself out next season if he stays good, very easily.

ENTIRE sons of Director are scarcs on this Coast. Mr. McHugh of the Fashion Stables in this city has one. He is registered as A. A. Moore, 23,872, and is hv Director from Admirita, by Antevolo, second dam Monte, by Admiral, third dam Oakland Maid, by Captain Webster. Ha is hut six years old and has had hut tha most limited opportunity in the stud. His progeny are all good lookers.

THERE is a possihility that Arion, 2:07¾, msy bs trained again next season. The great son of Electioneer is all right in every way, and as Mr. Forbes has never been satisfied that his mark any where near rapresents the stallion's speed limit, the greatest two-year-old which the world has ever seen mav hear tha bell ring once again. If so Arion and his son Nico will bs by far the fastest father and son ever on the track during the sams season.

LIBERTY BELL and Rex Americus, both foaled in 1890 are the youngest sires ever credited with 2:10 trotters. Liberty Bell is the sire of Tommy Britton, 2:09¼, and Rex Americus got Battleton, 2:09¾. Arion, foaled in 1889, is the sire of Nico, 2:08¼, and Chimes was the same age when his daughter Fantasy entered the 2:10 list in 1893. This is a grsat showing for Electioneer blood.

NINETEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS for Star Pointer is a pretty fair price everything considered. Whila he is the champion pacer and the only two-minute horse in the world, there are no class races in which he can be entered, and exhibitions are the only means by which he can be made a money earner except in tha stud. Pacing hred sires do not command large servica fees nor get ths choice mares of tha country, so $19,000 is a pretty good price for the champion after all.

MR. H. DUTARD, of this city, now owns Fanadma, 2:19½, by Eros, dam by Elmo. He purchased her from Dr. Ira B. Dalziel, of this city, who says he really gave the little mare away, as he hargained for har sale before he really knew how fast she was. Fanadina should be able to get a very low mark next year if properly handled. Mr. Dutard has one of the hest stables of ro.d horses to he found in America, Algregor, 2:11, and Chris Peterson, 2:13¼, heing in his string.

IT IS said that Lady Flanagan, dam of Eagle Flanagan, 2:07½, who was long drivan on tha road in Brooklyn, N. Y., by John R. Flanagan, once trotted a mile in 2:22½. She was not bred until well along in years, hut has already three trotters to her credit: Eagle Flanagan, 2:07½, by Eagle Bird; Marshall, 2:20, hy Egbert, and Fly, 2:24¾, by Tha King. She is called untraced in the Register, hut was always represented as a daughter of Wood's Hambletonian, the roan son of Alexander's Abdallah.

ROBERT MCGREGOR, 2:17½, the king of the homestretch, died at the Ketcham Farm, Toledo, Ohio, last week. No gamar horsa ever looked through a hridls and he transmitted that quality to his sons and daughters. He was foaled in 1871, and up to tha time of his death was the sira of 76 trotters and fonr pacsrs with records hetter than 2:30, while 32 of his sons and 27 of his daughters are prodncers of 2:30 speed. He was by Msjor Edsall, his dam heing Nancy Whitman, by American Star.

ONE of the prominent trainers of light harness horsea in New York, speaking of Bumps on the Speedway, said: "I would like to have Flying Jih np there for about two minutes. I think I could make Bumps pnmp up a case of heart failure. In a hrush to road wagon, I don't know of any other horse that can beat him. At the distanca of the speedway Nawcastla would beat him. But thera is nothing that I know of that can get away on the wings of the wind in such a flight of speed for a half or three-quarters of a mile as Flying Jib.

SILAS SKINNER, 2:17, is tha sire of one of ths handsomest road geldings that is driven in Golden Gate Park. This roadster is 16½ hands high, a dark hay or brown, a grand looker, sound as a nsw dollar, very stylish and can speed a 2:10 gait. He is ont of Eveline, by Nntwood, the dam of Maud Fowlsr, 2:21¾, and Tietam, 2:19. Dan Misner is handling him, and says he is a great prospect for 1899. If he could mate him tha team would sell for a big price.

MR. F. P. LOWELL, who formerly owned Fallis, and for whom Don Lowell, 2:14½, was named, has recently returned to this State from Spokane, when he has resided for the past year. Mr. Lowell says that ha has noticed the Eastern papers give the pacer Baloon Jih, 2:16¼, as by Noonday, dam untraced. He says this geldiog was bred hy Wm. Gamhle, of Sacramento, hrother to Ssm Gamhle, and his dam was a mare called Black Swan, hy Nephaw 1220; second dam Fanny, by Doroc, a son of Nephew 1220; third dam Lucretia, hy Morgan Rattler.

AN immeuss crowd assemhled in the main street of Arcola, Il., recently, to witness a shorse-hitchiog contest, which originated in the brain of a local harness dealer. He offered a prize to any woman who would hitch a harnessed horse to a huggy in the least time. There were six entries, and each woman went at the task with as much unconcern as the averags hostler, and the time made in each case was remarkahly fast, considering the space in which the women were compelled to work, as the crowd fairly swamped them. Miss Watson, a youog woman from the country, won first prizs in 2:30 flat, while Mrs. Alfred Donnelly was a close second, with a mark of 2:33.

THE mare Rohlet by Rohin, out of Eveline (dam Maud Fowler, 2:21¾, and Tietam, 2:19), by Nutwood, is causing quite a stir in the courts of Sonoma county in the settling of the estate of the lata John T. Rogers. At a sale two years ago by the executor of the estate of the late Isaac De Turk, the mare Roblet was knocked down to the hid of Mr. Rogers. Ever since that time the mare has remained in the possession of the executor and Mr. Rogers during his life time had no control of her, but she is put in as ons of the assets of his estate. On the other hand the executor of the Da Turk estate claims no actual sala of the mare was made to Rogers. The court will hear evidence in this peculiar casa next week.

THE slickest trainers and drivers of this country ara having a good laugh at tha assertion mada hy one or two of the German horsemen that Colonel Kuser, the American trotter that now holds the championship of Europe, can heat anything in this country, says the New York Telegraph. One of them said as much during the Lexington meeting in the hearing of one of the Hnbingers, and was picked np quick as a flash. Huhinger told him that if they would hack Kuser for a sufficient amount to make it an object, he would take John Nolan to Germany and race thsm at any distance and for any amonnt they might name. The talk about Kuser's superiority still goes on, hut nothing is said about taking up Hubinger's defi.

NO TYPE of domestic animal is so given to shying as the horse, and this characteristic is accounted for on the grounds of inherited instinct. A great deal is said and written of the effects of education upon the mind of sire and dam, but no one can assert that many of the peculiar habits and manners of the horse are not relics of that wild state in which their ancestors lived hsfore snhjection hy man. An old saying among plainsmen when the writsr first crossed the Missouri river in 1876 was: "That you could not ride a ranga-bred horse into a hole or over a dangerous piece of quicksand." Ths horse upon the open plain feared few enemies, but every shrnh along the watercourse might shelter an enemy and a rnstle of leaves sent him far away. The domestic horse often shies at some harmless object on the roadside, and in so doing is but proving the theory that pre-natal influences rsmain as indelible characteristics through generation after generation of descendants.

THE Penn Valley Stud Farm, one of the best known trotting stock farms in the Keystone State, has recently changed hands. H. S. Henry made it famous years sgo when he honght Anteeo for $50,000 from the lata S. A. Brown, of Kalamazoo, and placed him at the head of the stud, in which he also had Barnhart, Young Wilkes, and a choice hand of hroodmares. This lot of choice horses has been dispersed, but the new owner, Edward Winter, of Philadelphia, a wealthy merchant of that city, is busy gathering togethsr a stud which will soon revive the reputation of the farm. He has engaged the well known horseman, William Runnion, as Superintendent, who has already bought a choice lot of trotting stock hy such sires as Trevilian, Red Wilkes, Director, Dictator, Directum, Young Jim, Don Pizzaro, Eagle Bird, Eros, Gambetta Wilkes, Nuthurst, Pretender, Ashland Wilkes, Cecilian and others, the dams of the stock heing the great producsrs in the great hroodmare list. Andy McDowell will develop the stock and have charge of the racing stable.

JOHN SPLAN is credited with having said: "No one should sver bs allowed to make a hook on any heat of a trotting race. Betting on the result of the race is all that the horsemsn want." Many other prominent drivers and turfmen have expressed similar convictions on this subject, and it does seem to us that the wishes of practical turfmen should count for more than the clamor of professional gamblers in trotting turf affairs. True, heat betting brings a revenue to the track managers, hut without heat hstting the auction pool betting on race resnlts would be much heavier, and consequently the revenue would he about the same as nnder mixed betting. Then, too, the incidental evil effects of heat hetting ara plain to all who sea fit to study the snhject disiuteresteds. Heat hetting clearly offers incentives for dishonesty, and dishonesty, everyone must admit, is inimical to the best interests of the trotting turf. The trotting turf is essentially an institntion for the benefit of legitimate horsamen and the entertainment of a decorous and genteel public. The pnblic is clearly against heat booka and the consequent incentive to jobbery—there can be no question about that. Now, if the essential factors of a successful trotting turf view heat hatting aa inimical to their interesta and pleasures, why should not that practice he stopped, especially, as Mr. Splan says, track managers conld lose nothing hy the change. As we have always insisted, the wishes of operating turfmen and the visiting public should be consulted and heeded in trotting turf management. This suhject merits the serious consideration of trotting turf law-makers.—Western Horseman.

San Francisco, Saturday, November 26, 1898.

THE ABSORBING TOPIC among live stock breeders and owners in California at the present time is the district fair. That they will be held in a majority of districts this year, there is scarcely any doubt. Every member of the Legislature so far heard from favors them, and there will be no hitch to the appropriations. The only drawback may be in one or two districts where a lethargic board of directors will allow the fair to go by default, but this surely will not be in any of the principal districts of the State. Correspondence with people from all parts of the State shows that the idea is almost universal that the districts must hold fairs this year—not simple race meetings, but FAIRS. The old-time agricultural exhibits must be revived, and the way to do this is to offer premiums of a respectable amount for the products of the breeding farms and the grain fields, as well as those of the orchards and vineyards. The breeder who spends large amounts of money in importing the best beef or milch cattle, wool and mutton sheep, draft and road horses, should be offered premiums to exhibit the same that will at least compensate him for his actual expenses in exhibiting them, if he wins first prize. In some of the districts it has been too often the case that a prize winning animal that cost its owner thousands of dollars to import or raise, and whose progeny has added many thousands to the value of the herds of the State has been put off with a ten dollar prize and a blue ribbon, while a skate race horse that could run a half mile a little faster than several others just about like him, has had large sums hung up for him to compete for. Now the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN desires to see good purses offered for both harness and saddle races at all our fairs this year, but we believe it to be the first duty of the fair directors to provide a premium list for the live stock and agricultural exhibits that will induce the farmers and breeders to show the products of their farms. If there is a first-class pavilion and stock exhibit the people will attend, and all will be benefitted. The race program will come about all right. The horsemen will attend to that. Announce the fair early, get the premium list out as soon as possible and advertise it all over the State. District fairs should provide the bulk of their premiums for district exhibits, but there should be some open to all the State. Especially is this true in live stock classes. There are some districts where but little attention has been given the choice breeds of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. The people need education to the value of blooded stock and the profit to be derived from breeding it. The best instruction is by object lesson and the fair furnishes the opportunity by which it can be given. Let the main object be to give a fair—an up to date instructor for the people of the district.

The races will furnish diversion to the crowd and should not be neglected. They will tend to improve the breeds of horses and are of value in more ways than one. Make them popular by having them conducted on the strictest principles. Put them on a high plane. Let those who want to bet on them have the opportunity, but don't make this feature the most prominent of the meeting. Conduct the fairs so that the best people in your district will patronize it and will want to go every day of the week on which it is held. Make it as high class and respectable as it is possible to make it and it will come back to its old position as the leading feature of our State's glorious summer season.

RACING AT INGLESIDE, since our last report, has pursued the even tenor of its way without any particulary spectacular effects. The racing has been good without going of high class. The attendance has kept up and on Thanksgiving day nearly reached ten thousand. On Saturday lest the San Francisco Stakes was run. Four two year-olds started for the $1,000, the distance being six furlongs. The race went to Humidity, Burns & Waterhouse filly, by Hindoo out of imp. Calphurnia, she winning by a nose from Elizebeth R. in a drive, the time, 1:16¾, being very good as the track was muddy. On Wednesday of this week the Golden West Stakes, one mile and a half for three-year-olds and upwards, called out but two starters, Buckwa and Marplot. The latter was favorite, but Buckwa won easily and increased his lead of three lengths at the first quarter to fifteen lengths at the finish. On Thanksgiving Day, the Gentlemen's race was the feature and was won by Mr. Walter Hobart. This is the second time that gentleman has won, and if he can repeat the performance next year, the handsome cup offered for this event will be his. Next Monday the horses will race at the California Jockey Club's track.

ONE of the best-known horsemen of California has passed away. Mr. John L. McCord, of Sacramento, died at his residence in that city last Saturday morning after a short illness and as he was on the streets but a few days previous in his usual health, the announcement of his death was a surprise to all. A few years ago Mr. McCord suffered from a stroke of paralysis, but he seemed to recover entirely from it, and when the writer saw him during the last State Fair, he looked to be in perfect health. Of late, however, he has been suffering from heart trouble and asthma. Mr. McCord was widely known, and one of Secramento's most esteemed citizens. He engsged in the breeding of harness horses years ago, and purchasing the stallion Tom Banton, by Gen. Benton, bred and raced Mary Lou, 2:17, and Shylock, 2:15½, both eired by that horse. He was one of the best types of a gentleman breeder who entered upon the buiiness for the love of it, and raced and drove his own horses. His honesty was unquestioned and when one of his horses started it was known that he was out to win if he could. Genial and whole eonled, a gentlemen always, and a man who had friends in nearly every county in California, John L. McCord will be missed among the breeders and horse owners of the Pacific Coast.

ELEVEN RICH STAKES offered by the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, and to be run at the Ingleside track after January 1, 1899, close to-day. Horse owners should not allow this day to go by without meking their entries. Among the stakes are the California Oaks of $2,000, a mile and a furlong for three-year-old fillies. The California Derby, a mile and a quarter and guaranteed to be worth $5,000, for foals of 1896. The Ingleside Stakes worth $3,500, a handicap, and the distance four miles, the Crocker-Woolworth Bank Stakes worth $1,750, two miles and a quarter, besides many others that are both liberal as to the money and conditions. The stakes and conditions will be found in detail in our advertising columns. No mistake can be made in entering in these stakes, in fact the only mistake will be made by those who own horses that are eligible and do not enter.

HOOF BEATS.

ADABELLE, full sister to Adbell, 2:23, the champion yearling trotter, is in foal to Larabia, 2:12½ at three years. She is owned by Alex McLaren of Ontario.

AN item states that there have been but five deaths at Mr. L. V. Harkness' Walnut Hall Farm in six years, although there have never been less than 250 animals on the place This is most remarkable, if true.

DOMEBA, 2:16¼, by Domineer, out of the dam of Joe Patchen, goes to Australia. She wes extensively raced in Ohio and Pennsylvania this year and successfully, having won eight first moneys.

ELECTIONEER got his second new 2:30 performer of the year, and possibly the last that will ever be credited to him, at Readville, Mass., November 3d, when his daughter Genevieve took a trotting record of 2:27¼.

ONE of the best bargains to be had in California is offerad by a gentleman who advertises for sale in this issue the thoroughbred stallion, Lodowic, and eight large mares in foal to him, two of them being standard bred trotters. These mares were bred to Lodowic, who is a large, handsome horse, with the idea of producing carriage horses. They are all on a ranch near Fresno, and ten tons of hay, and the use of ten acres of alfalfa pastura will go with the horses if sold. Also the use of a good dwelling and barn until next fall. This can all be secured for $1,000. For further particulars apply at this office.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

CONDUCTED BY
WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C.V.C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

J. O'C.—Please tell me what you think is the matter with my horse. He goes lame in one of his front legs, especially when I take him out of the stall first, and when I turn him round in the stable, but after I drive him half a mile you would not know that he was leme at all. Answer—I need a better description of the lameness before venturing an opinion. If you answer the following questions, I may be eble to advise you on the subject:

1—About what age is your horse?

2—Are his feet contracted in the heels, or are they very wide and flat soled?

3—Are there any rings around the foot, such as would result from founder (laminitis)?

4—In backing and turning round, does he lean backwards with his body, keeping his fore feet well out in front of him and his hind feet well forward under his body?

5—Does he go much lamer on hard ground then on soft?

6—Does he rest the lame foot when he stands, or does he keep shifting the weight of his body alternately from one foot to the other when at rest?

7—Examine his feet for corns, thrush, seedy toe, quarter cracks, side bones, ringbone, etc., and give result of your examination.

8—Does he go lamer down hill then up?

9—Do you find any thickening on the tendons, or any other blemish connected with his fore limbs?

Give as full a description of the lameness and visible blemishes as you can, and I will reply to it in our next issue.

C. P. H.—What do you think of grass hay for horses, does it cause the heaves? They say that in the East, a great many horses have the heaves, from eating timothy hay. Answer—Some grasses are good, some are not. The amount of nutriment in the hay depends on the grasses the hay consists of.

Timothy (Pheleum Pratensis) is a good grass. So are the Loliums, which comprise Solium Perenne or Perenniel rye grass and Lolium Italicum or Italien rye grass.

The Lolium Temulentum, however, owing to fungi, which it generally contains, is considered a bad or poisonous grass.

Hordium Murinum, which is commonly (but not correctly) called foxtail, is a bad grass. It has very little nutriment in it and often makes horses' mouths sore.

The real foxtail or Alepicurus Pretensis is a soft hoshy grass like a fox's tail and is a good grass. There are many other good grasses, as well as inferior ones, but space does not permit me to go too deeply into them.

It is a fact that horses fed on timothy or grass hay are more subject to heeves than those fed on wheat or oat hay. But it is not a fact that good, well-cured, grass hay produces the disease. We grow wheat and oat hay here, not because we consider it a better food for horses, but because the climate is too dry in sommer to produce gress hay long end luxorient enough to cut as hay.

In countries where they produce large quentities of grass hay, they have rain in almost every month of the year, and the rain is liable to fall when the farmers are cutting and coring their hay. The damp hay is liable to become musty, especially if stowed away while it is still damp, and this mosty hay if fed to horses is liable (especially if assisted by other causes) to produce heaves. Here we do not have musty or mouldy hay; because we can get fine weather to cut and save it, and have no difficulty in following the old maxim, viz, "Make hay while the sun shines."

On the Track of Nettie George.

PALO ALTO, Nov. 23, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER & SPORTSMAN.—I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Theo. Winters, of Washoe, Nev, former owner of Norfolk, in which he says the breeding of Nettie George, as far as has been given, he knows to be correct. He further says that reading the article on the breeding of the mare in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has refreshened his memory, and that when he next visits San Francisco he will gladly give me any information he has.

I have got on the track of Nettie George as a race mare dates not verified yet, but she did run a two mile and repeat race at Carson somewhere about 1872 against Bois d'Arc, son of Norfolk. Verification of this not complete but under way.

Yours truly, FRANK W. COVEY.

Owing to the low prices brought at the recent sales of thoroughbreds, prominent breedars of Central Kentucky held a meeting at Lexington last Thursday to take steps to encourage their interests and maintain a staple market. The organization will be known as the Breeders Mutual Benefit Association. Colonel E. F. Clay was made president. A committee was appointed consisting of Colonal Clay, Overton, Chenault, Richardson, Gibson and Colonal Milton Young. This committee will control the association. It will solicit subscriptions from breeders and will buy up cheap and inferior thoroughbred mares that are a menace to the business, ship them to Southern and Western markets and sell them without their pedigrees that they may not come into competition with the better class of thoroughbreds. A fund of $1,500 was raised from those present and it will easily reach $5,000.

ORPHAN, black horse, by Orphan Boy, made a rather remarkable performance at the Great Bend (Kansas) meeting in October. He started on the 18th to beet 2:30 trotting and took a record of 2:26¾. On the 19th he started to beet 2:25 pacing and took a record of 2:19½.

These Fish Cost Something.

A few cases like tha following will result iu a wholesome respect for the law hy careless or indifferent fish vendors and the observeuca of statutory provisioos hy the heretofore unecrupulous fishermen and middlemen who are tha prime factors in inducing smell dealers, restaurent keepers and others to take chances on arrest, convictiou and fine for violetion of tha law.

Judge Moore, of Cakland, is a magistrete entitled to the good wishes and strong support of the community at large for the prompt and salutory proceedings takeu in these cases. It is needless to say that the Judge has won tha warmest regards of sportsmen, particularly of the eogliog fraternity.

Two Oaklend fish dealers, George Smith, of 914 Washington street, and John Rucker, of Washingtou end Twelfth streats, were this week made to feel the penalty of violating the game laws of the State. Last Wednesday they wera arrested by Deputy Fish Commissioner John Davis for selling huss weighing less than three pouuds. Davis purchased two emall fish for twenty-five ceuts from each place, which he held as evidence of the violation. The meu were released on $10 hail, and when the cases were called on last Friday they forfeited their hail, evidently supposing that this was the last of the matter.

In this they made a serious miscalculation, for Judge Moora had them brougbt into court on hench warrants. He heard the evidence aud examined the fish. Without much ado the Judge imposed a fine of $30 on each offender, and made some pertineut commeut upou folks who eucourage peopla to violate the laws of the State hy buyiug and disposing of the product of such offense. The fiue of $30 added to tha forfeited hail of $10 brought the price of the fish up to about $80 for tbe two, to say nothing of the lawyers' fees.

Superior Judges Wallace, Cook aud Borden ou Friday a week ago rendered a decisiou of much importance to the poultry, fish and game dealers of this city and incidentally of sopreme eatisfaction to sportsmen. The decision was on the case of F. J. Corriea, appealed from Judge Conlin's department of the police Court.

Ou August 27th last Corriea, who is a dealer in poultry, was arrested at the instance of the State Fish Commission for having wild duck in his possession out of season The time of the arrest was six weeks before the opening of the duck season. Corriea was tried before Judge Conlan, found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $100 which was the heaviest peualty ever inflicted for such an offeuse. Corriea appealed the case and the decisiou of the Superior Court was in couformation of Judge Conlan's action.

The members of the Fish Commission are highly pleased over the decision. This will have the effect of deterring for the time being thoee dealers who have heretofore openly violated the game aud fish laws.

The cloee season for trout commences a week from today. Judging from the indifferent success of most anglers during the past season not many regrets will be felt. Low water this year has played havoc with the anglers and materially decreased the cbances for a natural increase of fish in many streams.

Russian river prospects are not of tbe best, local anglers have joined the farmers in their prayers for rain.

R. Sangster caught sixty-one trout in the watere of San Andre-a lake recently.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no h anges have been made this year, hut the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open seasou as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:

Alpine—Deer. Sept. 2 to Oct. 15.
Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15.
Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15.
Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Contra Costa—Deer, July 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited).
El Dorado—Doves, July 20 to Feb. 1.
Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game out of the county prohibited

Sutter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan 1.
Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Ventura—Quail, any variety, Oct. 1, to Nov. 1.

The Olympic Gun Club.

The Olympic Gun Club, in its elegant new quarters on Morton and Keerny streets, is having a boom. The preserve in Sooome county is visited every Saturday by an interested lot of sportsmen, all of whom find good eport, and es for tha trap shooting it mey be uecessary next eeason to adopt some new classification to eccommodete the increased membership. The following new members have been elected: Ed Dubedat, J. F. Haucock, Dr. De Chratreux, Leon Bocqueraz, Edward May, C. A. Gray, Dr. F. Fehleisen, W. W. Sauderson, H. Flood, Samuel M. Ewiog. This makes 190 members, aud as the membership limit is 200 and several names remein to be voted on the chances of a large waiting liet are good.

The directors of the club recently elected have orgauized aud committees have been appointed as follows:

Finance—H. H. Wbite, George Walker, W. H. T. Huie.
House—C. W. Hibbard, C. H. Shaw, A. A. Borlini.
Social and Entertainmeut—W. H. T. Huie, Merton C. Allen, C. W. Hibbard.
Membership—N. H. Neustadter, E. L. Schultz, George Walker.
Trap shootiug—M. C. Allen, W. H. T. Huie, E. L. Schultz.
Club preserve—C. H. Shaw, George Walker, C. W. Hibbard.

Ducks.

The flight of ducks from the north is now strongly in evidence, they have been comiog in to a certain extent for the past three weeks; the recent raius, however, have brought them down in goodly numbers and sportsmen are now gettiog shootiog galore. Along the San Joaquin, in the vicinity of Stockton, birds have been plentiful, the Suisun districts are more than promising for good bags; sculling in and around the arme and sloughs of the latter district has been excellent. The hunters who frequent the Petaluma marshes have had good huntiog for tha past week while the prospects on the eastern hay shore grounds sooth of San Leandro indicated plenty of shooting for this week. The hags made recently contained mostly sprig and widgeon. Mallard were fairly numerous and the royal canvashack is not absent by any means—a Sunday shoot uear Black Point a week ago showed a striug of thirteen cans to one gun. Tbe Los Banos district did uot pan out well for ducks last week, the shooters had to take Hobson's choice in the shapa of geese, there being myriads of these birds down that way.

English Pheasants for Orsgon.

The introduction of the English or gray pheasant into Oregon will he attempted by a number of prominent Portland sportsmen uext spring. It is proposed to import at least fifty pairs of these birds, and as they are hardy and prolific, that number, if they are properly placed and protected for a few years, should give the species a fair start. The Willamette Valley should be a paradise for them, as they prosper best where the higher state of cultivation prevails, and besides are said to he a benefit to agriculture. Subscription lists to defray the expense of bringing the birds from England are now in the hands of several sportsmen and also in the various gun stores of Portland, and are being liberally subscribed to. Mr. Steiuer, of Salem, Or., recently received at his market a bird which seems to he a cross between the blue grouse and the Chinese pheasant. It is claimed tbat this ie the first specimen of the kind ever seeu hy any of the Salem sportsmen.

The shape aud markings of the hird plainly show that it is a hybrid of the two species named. The body is shorter and more chunky than that of the pheasant; the head is sheped like a pheasant, the red circle aronnd the eyes being plainly visible, though uot so marked as in tbe pheasant. The legs and feet are those of the grouse, and are devoid of the spurs worn by pheasants. The colors and markings of the two birds are so blended in the cross that it is hardly possihle to tall which parent it favors most. The tail is longer than that of tha grouse, and shows a slight inclinatiou to be pointed like that of the pheasant. The breast shows a semblance of the rich purple coloriug of the pheasant hut thare is no sign of the white ring around the neck. The hird is plumper and heavier than a pheasant of the same age, and it is evident that the cross ie an improvement on the species whicb produced it, except that it is not so handsome as the pheasant.

A similar hybrid shot uear Corvallis, Or., by a Portland sportsman soon after the shooting seasou opened this year, can he seen mounted in very good style in the wiudow of a Portland eun store. These are the only specimens of a cross hetweeu the pheasant and the grouse which have been heard of hy the Portland people; hut a year or two ago a whole brood of the progeny of a pheasant and a domestic fowl were on exhihitiou.

The female pheasant heiug so much plainer in plumage than the cock, the female hybrid of the two might pass without notice. It is scarcely prohable that any new species of geme hird will result from this cross breeding as soch hybrids are rerely fertile.

Sport With a Small Bore.

The use of small-bore rifles is becoming more frequent as tbe capahilities of the 22 is better understood. E. L. Crahb, of Lost Cabin, Firewood county, Wyo., writes the E. T. Allen Co. that he has "heen using a 22, 4½ lh, 22½ in. barrel rifle in the Big Horn mountains for the past two seasons and it has proved itself a wonderful little gun, having over 200 grouse to its credit aud also two full grown black-tail deer killed with the 22 long smokeless cartridges. Mr. Crahh ordered a 20-gauge cylinder bore from the above named dealers, who carry a complete and varied stock of rifles of ell kinds. They have some new style air rifles in stock that are very efficient for short range work.

A Few Suggestions in Regard to Good Loads.

Many hunters are inclined to trust their fortunes for a day's sport to tha support of a very slender reed in tha shape of cheap or carelessly loaded shells and when they return with empty bags hesitate not the least in anathematiziog their shells, gun, dog, etc., etc., never for a moment pausing to think that the fault may possihly lia with themselves. We principally refer to the shooter who has not been long enough at the game to have knowledge of experience, observation and the information necessary to plan, carry out and eojoy a day's sport in a meuner that will obviate any chanca of failure or disappointmeut hy reason of any overlook in the nature of poor or imperfect ammnnitiou, etc. Many sportsmen prefer to load their own shells, having certain ideas and prefereuces as to powder, weds, loading aud etyle of shell; these gentlemen generally echieve satisfactory results when efield. Others egain make an ettempt to do thie, but for lack of experience, time or other drawhecks, have to take a chence on resnlts. Another cless will try to satisfy themselves with cheap hand-loaded emmunition and knowiog the uncertainty of their dope will try to meke up the defects of their loads hy pot shots at short reuge, this is et best poor sport; mauvais sujets of that ilk are generally incorrigable and only useful to the sporting fraternity in the light of awful exemples of a decadent style of field sport. Another drawbeck has been found through carelessuess in exposing loaded shells to the actiou of moisture, this too, frequently on the part of shooters who know bettar. Negligence of this character is no excuse for condamning the powder, mannfactnrer or dealer who puts up the load.

Taking all things into consideratiou it is better—unless ous prefers, and can do so in a proper and efficient manner, to load his own shells—that the sportsman will supply himself with a high grade factory loaded shell, such as the leading dealers keep in stock and which goods are always reliable.

These goods are carefully and accurately loaded with the standard hrands of powders, black or nitros, wade, etc., and can always be depended on. The Selby loads have a reputatation in this respect as good as the best and better than many. Further: sportsmeu who have a formula and style of tbeir own can now, at a comparatively moderate expense, have their shells loaded to order, thus saving a deal of time and bother.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Geo. Franzen sculled the creeks near Alvarado on Sunday last; he hegged forty-two ducks, principally sprig.

One of the duck honters at Point Reyes, Nelsoo hy name, last Sunday hagged forty docks.

The indications are most promising for plenty of duck shooting near Point Reyes, after a rain or two.

O Fisher and M. McLain maneged to pick up a fair bag of English snipe near Schellville on Sunday.

Quail were not any too numeroue near McGill's last Sunday. G. Cook's string carried but eight birds on his return from there.

A Tubbs island shoot on Sunday last rewarded two young Nimrods with a snbstantial bag containing three dozen widgeon.

Harry Golcher and Ed Bosqui had a pleasant quail hunt at Point Reyee on Sunday last. Fair hags were made to botb guns.

English snipe are becoming scarce at the different resorts of this erratic flitter. Some good bags, however, have recently beeu made near Alvarado.

W. J. Hynes and W. S. Street hagged fifty-three ducks last Sunday near the Tulle Belle preserve on the Suison marshes; mallards were a fair proportion of their heg.

Fred Butler, Jr. and C. E. Rodolph hagged seventy qoail near Point Reyes recently. This is a better showing for a day's shootiug in that vicinity than has prevailed lately.

It is rumored that Fresno will he next in line on a short opeo season for quail. The Fresno Game and Protective Association are alive to material issues in sporting lines.

The announcement of the South Pasadena Ostrich Farm in our advertising columns this week will he of sufficient interest to some of our readere to prompt them to write to either address for farther particulars.

The lakes nnder control of the Spriug Valley Water Company in San Mateo county are the resort for countless thousands of ducks of all kinds, who have lately made themselves at home on the surface of those haveus of refuge.

Ducks were plentiful at Sherman Island on Sunday when five of tbe Black Jacks manned the tule-splitters and took their stations in the blinds. The best shoot fell to "Sherman" and Dietz; a nnmber of fiue fat mallards falling to Sherman's gnu. Fred Johnsou, President Lemmer aud Bert Weyman also had a good shoot. The total bag for tbe day was 240 birds, mallard, sprig, widgeon and a few teal. Stumpy Weyman's entourage de fusil has now a working capacity of three dozen ducks. In refereuce to the distribution of the game, Secretary Marklaud said "the aspect of affairs induced by a careless system of distribution is liable to produce a crop of bristles."

In England, when a man puts on his "hunting" clothes, he is understood to he going fox huuting; in America he is known to he going out after hirds or rabbits or other game with a shotgun or rifle. In England the man who shoulders his gun and goes afield after gama is said to he "going shooting;" here he is said to he "going hunting." Both terme aptly describe the differeuce hetweeu tbe two methods of pursuing sport with the gun that prevail in those countries. In England game is not hard to find; it can scarcely be said to be "hunted for." It is "walked up" or "driven" to the guns, while in America we go out with dog and gun and in very truth have to "hunt" for our game. In European game preserves the skill of an expert with a shotgun is all that is required of the man with a gnu, provided the bag is to be filled. But over here the successful gunner must have a good dog, a knowledga of where hirds are most likaly to be found, a keen eya to merk birds that have flushed wild, and a quick hand and eye to score those birds that rise before the dog's nose. It is "hunting" in its best and truest sense.

At Sears Point Sunday last Jules Bruns and J. Karney bagged two dozen teal. W. Williams and brother gathered a dozen widgeon.

Ben Baum and Edg. Forster were satisfied with a string of twelve quail which they shot near Sears Point on Sunday. Birds were not too plentiful.

The quail grounds in the vicinity of Point Reyes show the results of the hammering given the birds this season, they are getting wary and scarce.

W. E. Murdock shot on Petaluma creek Sunday a bag of twenty ducks; canvasback, sprig and teal testified to the presence of ducks and his skill with a shotgun.

Mudd had the Price to pay for twelve teal and widgeon at Reclamation on the first day of this week. J. Schackleton foreclosed on fifteen teal the same day and place.

Frank Vernon and C. E. Rodolph shot together at Point Reyes on Sunday. They bagged several dozen quail. Mr. Vernon had a nice duck shoot there on Saturday evening.

Chas. Cata side-tracked duckless Mowrys for the time being and with several friends recently tried the hills and valleys near San Pedro for quail and rabbit. An enjoyable day's sport and a big bag was the result.

Phil B. Bekeart and Lee Larzalere tested the productive qualities of the Spooney Club preserve last Sunday—each hunter had three sprig after the shoot was over; Larzalere had six ducks after the dice throw was made for the whole bunch.

A thousand hunters were afield on the morning of November 1, in Frederick county, Virginia. The Nelson game law making a close season for the past three years expired on that day. The shooters were reported to have made good bags each.

The wild turkey is practically extinct in Indiana. Not so many years past this game bird was comparatively plentiful in that portion of the State known as "the pocket." Within two years one of the birds was shot in Dubois county, but turkey shooting in the State now is a thing of the past.

Clabrough, Golcher & Co. received from the Hunter Arms Co. this week two elegant L. C. Smith brown steel barrel guns; one, a 12 guage, was ordered by Walter Dreyfus of the Olympic Gun Club, the other, a 16-guage, was made for W. W. Lambert and is a gun that should be seen to be appreciated.

C. A. Haight, Jim Maynard and Dr. Ayers took their usual trip for snipe and ducks last Sunday. Jim Maynard had prepared for a shoot at a pond on which he had his weather eye located for a week or two. On arriving at the place, he found that ducks were only a memory, a friend had anticipated him by a day and bombarded the frequenters of the erstwhile quiet feeding resort; the result was that Maynard's bag was rather light.

The combined bag of the hunters who shot on the Empire pond last Sunday numbered about fifty birds, composed of mallard, canvasback, sprig, teal and widgeon. Messrs. C. W. Hunt, Dr. H. W. Fearn, Frank Bowers, W. W. Lambert, Ed. Linforth, J. B. Haner and J. P. Sweeney were the sportsmen present. Haner's individual bag was the largest in numbers while Sweeney had the proud satisfaction of bringing in a string of thirteen fine "cans."

Quail shooting was the order of the day on the Tamalpais Club grounds last Sunday. Birds are fairly plentiful although they have a strong penchant for the higher grounds and denser cover than is liked by the average hunter; however, the sportsmen take consolation that before long the quail will frequent the grain fields for feeding and then—many birds have been promised to friends. Among those present on Sunday were Fred Drinkhouse, who bagged nineteen birds, W. C. Brown, John Bergez, Dr. Winterberg and H. F. Wagner, each of whom had a fair share of birds.

Americans are a nation of marksmen. Speaking of the army which took Santiago, General Shafter has said: "This was an army of marksmen. I suppose four-fifths of the men in that army wore on their breasts the marksman's badge. In that battle, which lasted two hours, less than ten rounds per man were fired by us, and the losses, notwithstanding that my men exposed their whole bodies while the Spanish were entrenched and only showed their heads were about equal. That speaks volumes for the shooting of our men." It does. It shows also that every able-bodied man in this country ought to learn something of the rifle and revolver. It pays more particularly if you intend to go to New Mexico or Colorado and preach the value and desirability of the gold standard.

Joseph Tumlinson, now dead, was for many years one of the most noted killers of the lower Rio Grande district.

He is said to have had the ghosts of nearly fifty men following him about, "that is," as an admirer once remarked with naivete, "countin' Mexikins as men." It is certain that he had slain in personal encounter nearly twenty whites. His private graveyards were numerous. He shot equally well with the repeating rifle and with a six shooter of 45 calibre. This latter is a force-ball weapon, with a heavy charge behind the lead. It has much "kick-up" to it, and with it accuracy is specially difficult of attainment. Tumlinson used to take a six-shooter in his hand and write his initials into a tree while galloping past it; would scallop the edges of a tin plate set up at thirty yards by striking it with half the bullet; would stand with his heels close together and wheel rapidly, clipping the red "pear-apples" from cactus leaves twenty yards away; would shoot geese, sandhill cranes, ducks and Mexican quail up in the wing, using a repeating rifle; would stand for hours on the banks of Soldier Lake, in Dimmitt county, severing tha heads from moccasins, which swam far out; would take a pistol in each hand and send two Mexican dollars spinning far upward and bored through. He shot, if anything, a little better when drunk than when sober, and desperadoes with smaller reputations went into back rooms and locked themselves in when he came to town, which was not often. Nobody had any trouble with him if they saw him first. He died finally by his own hand in his sixty-fourth year.

Oakland Specialty Show.

The premium list for the second annual bench show of the California Collie Club has been issued. Entries close tomorrow night. The judging will commence Thursday, December 8th, the opening day. Mr. S. Taylor of Pasadena will judge. The Secretary of the club makes the following announcement:

Feeling that the best way to introduce a breed of dogs to the public is by holding a show of that breed, the California Collie Club has decided to hold a specialty show of collies and cocker spaniels. Owners of those breeds are invited to send their dogs to the show, and thus help to popularize the breed in which they are interested. The dogs will receive the best of care and attention in the comfortable hall specially engaged and decorated for the purpose. The benching used will be that of the Oakland Kennel Club, kindly loaned for the occasion. The benching has only been used once and has been thoroughly disinfected. The dogs will be properly fed, under the personal supervision of the superintendent of the hall.

Owners who are unable themselves to be present need have no fear of sending their dogs alone. Competent handlers will care for them and they will receive the best of attention. In connection with the dog show will be held a first-class poultry show, where all the aristocrats of the feathered world will be on view. The combined show will be one of the society events of the season, and no expense will be spared by the management to make it attractive.

To accommodate those who wish to enter dogs of any breed for exhibition or for the purpose of sale only, and not for competition the management will accept them on the payment of one dollar entry fee for each dog to cover cost of benching and feeding. Entries to be made on regular entry blanks and forwarded to the Secretary, N. J. Stewart, Aromas, Monterey Co., Cal.

The Best Puppy in the Litter.

Taking St. Bernards first, size is, of course, of great importance, but in all breeds "type" must come first. Color is of great consequence. The puppies to select are the largest, with the shortest and deepest forefaces, most bone and muscle.

In Newfoundlands we come to a different type again. Size is not a great essential, but here weedy puppies should be discarded. A short face, small ears, great bone, a dense coat and short tail are the proper thing.

While in Great Danes the opposite is required, in head proportions at least, the puppies with the largest and narrowest heads, square muzzle, and small eyes and ears, short body and bony limbs should be selected.

The growth of puppies is considerably aided by the judicious addition of a little fine bone meal to their food. This supplies them with the particular constituents needed to develop their frame. It ought not to be given freely as it will then tend to induce constipation. Care should be taken to obtain pure bone meal; it is of little consequence whether it is of the "white" or "green" kind. The percentage given on an average may be about five; but for puppies of the larger breeds, in which special power of limb is required, from seven to ten per cent may be given. As they grow older and can manage to crush up small bones with their teeth, the necessity for the powdered product will naturally cease.

Puppies ought not to be over crowded or confined within too small a space. Nothing is more conducive to sound health and rapid progress than fresh air and exercise. Not only are they healthier (particularly as regards strength of lung) when kept in a spacious apartment, but they are far less troubled with parasites.

The exercise ground should be quite distinct from the sleeping apartment, and should be lain down with grass if possible and their dam should be turned out in the exercise ground, and their dwelling-house should be thrown open as widely as possible.—Notes to Novices in Our Dogs.

Eastern Field Trials Club's Trials.

The club's trials began with the Members' Stake on Friday, November 11, 1898, at Newton, N. C. The judges were Col. Arthur Merriman, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mr. S. C. Bradley, the club's secretary. These gentlemen, both thoroughly experienced and competent judges officiated with that degree of ease and accuracy which only comes from a thorough schooling in field trial matters.

We are indebted to the American Field for the following summary:

MEMBERS' STAKE.

Winnere' Classes.

On this snbject tha American Kennel Gazstta nrges the attantion of all—mora especially of tha dog show committees charged witb tha issning of preminm lists—is directed to the rules regarding winnsrs' classes, which are worded so plainly that it is difficnlt to nnderstand why thay are not followed in their entiraty. It is tha mora necessary to do so at this tima hscausa of a vary important change mads at tha last meeting of tha American Kennel Clnb. Ths rnle definition of the winnsre' class is given as Section 5 of Rnla XII., and is as follows:

5. Tha Winners' Class shall ba open only to tha winners of first prizes at any show giving at least threa of the beforementioned classes, ona of which must ha tha open class, and the winner of threa prizes in this class will thereby become a champion of record, he so registered by the American Kennsl Clnb, and, if registered in tbs Stnd Book, will ba entitled to an Amsrican Kennel Clnb champion medal. Befora awarding "reserva" in this class, tha dog or dogs having bean placed eecond to tha winner in any of tha regular classes must be brought hefora the judge for competition with ths ramaining dogs in said Winners' Clase. No class winner can be withdrawn or withhsld from compstition in the Winnere' Class, and no entry fee shall be charged for said competition in this class. A dog that has already won ona or mora first prizes in the late challange class shall retain these wins to its credit, toward becoming a champion of racord, the remaining qualifying wins to he gainad in the Winners' Class. The Winners' Class can be divided by sex, provided ths required three classes, as advertised are also divided by sex.

Tha important change in this rnle is tha striking off tha final sentenca requiring winners' classes in all cases where tha regular classifications warrantsd them. In place of giving latitnde to divide and add winnsrs' classes at the last moment when but very few could ba made awara of the change and in some cases could not be so advissd until tha dogs were actually in tha ring, the clnb has put a stop to that by an addition to Section 3 of the rules governing clnbs, which now reads as follows:

Section 3.—Tha classification shall ba confined to tha established breeds which may ha devided or limited by variety, weight, color, height or ssx, and otherwisa as provided for in the dog ehow rnlss. No changa in classification not covered by tba pnblished regnlations of tha show in tbe preminm list will ha allowed unless annonncad in tha ksnnal press hafors tha data of closing entries.

This, however, does not psrmit of any change in winners' classas from tbose annonnced in tha preminm list.

Notwithstanding the clearness of tba rnla as it stood at Braintres, and still stands in tbat particular, where it says: "Tha winners' class can ba devided by ssx, provided the required threa classes ara also divided by sex," ths show committea divided tba winners' classes by aax when not entitled to do so. The result will ba the cancelling of all snch classes and a vary graat hardship is tbns imposed npon thosa who suffar therefrom. The American Kennel Clnb is not to blame for the cancallation of classes positively forbidden by the rnles. That it is well known to be snch is proved by the nnmber of lettars received from interested exhibitors asking what conras the American Kennel Clnb will pursne. That is perfectly plain, and it is a matter for great regret that snch a mistaka should bave occurred at Braintrea.

We have jnst been enabled to check what would have been a bad arror at tha Pet Dog Clnb show, wbich takes place daring November. Not ona winners' class was mantionad in tha preminm list when the proofs wara obtained, from which to write tha notica which appears below this (Pet Dog Clnb Show annonncemant). Tha result wonld hava bean that there could hava been nona at the ehow. Fortnnately there was time to maka the correction and insert tha list of winners' classes.

Tha rules regarding winners' classes are as simpla as words can maka them, and errors can only arise from not reading tham over carefully, and nnfortnnately it is tha axhibitor who has to suffer and not those who make the errors.

A decision rendered by the clnb at its last mesting regsrding responsibility for special prizes should also ba borne in mind, and it was ordered incorporated as a rnle. The clnb annonncing a special to he competed for at its show randers itself responsibla for the payment of the prize.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

J. E. Da Rnyter is chairman and J. P. Norman secretary-treasnrer of tha A. K. C. special committea for the Pscific Coast.

A conrsing clnb was organized November 14th at Lodi with the following officers: President, D L. Smith; Treasurar, Martin Dnffy; Secretary, A. Chappsll.

Conrsing in Mexico seems to be catching on—Curtis & Sons shipped threa promising long-tails to a leading leashman of Mexico city this week.

Ths Eastern Field Trials Clnb's Derby was won by Connt Danstone, by Ch. Connt Gladstona IV—Dan'e Lady, owned by Rev. J. P. Green of Kinsman, Ill., and handled by Geo. E. Gray, Tuesday, Novamber 15, 1898.

Wa are in receipt, throngh courtesy of M. A. Viti, Esq., of Philadelphia, of a very interesting and nsefnl pamphlet issued by the American Spaniel Club. The book is carefully compiled and contains a deal of nsefnl information.

Capt. C. W. Merry of Los Angsles, hss a grand candidate for conrsing honors in Orpheum Lass. Shs took $125 of the pnrss, heing third in the finals, dnring the recant mest at Msrced. Her work on the hares was vsry favorably comented on by tha leashmen present.

Local fanciers are intsnsely interested in Eastern field trial competitions and tha results. One prominent and enthsiastic fancier who pinned his faith on Connt Dsnstone's work at the Eastern Field trials has a snbstantial token for tha accuracy of his judgment in the shape of soma golden shekels wagared by ons of tha donbtars who always "thinks different."

Some fanciers claim that ths best way to teach a dog to kill rats qnickly, is to giva him a nnmber to kill at once after he has been broken in and is accustomed to kill them. A good device for obtaining a snpply of rats for nse in training terriers, is to sprinkle a few drops of rhodinm around tha bait in the traps; tha latter are vary partial to tha odor and unhesitatingly entsr the trap.

Tha announcement in the advertising colnmns of this issns of the Pacific Field Trials at Bakersfield, January 16, 1899, shows four stakes to ba rnn: the Members, Annual Derby, All-Age and Champion. Eastarn field trial men are on the qui vive regarding tha coming trials. Reports from varions gentlemen and handlers who are getting tha dogs in shape ara with bnt one or two exceptions very enconraging.

Of Nancy Gladstone, who was placed third in the Indiana Derby, the American Field says—she is a very handsome and sweet littla bitch, weighing abont forty ponnds. She has plenty of style, ranga and speed, and can win first in an average Derby. She will ba heard from again, if nothing happens to her. She is orange and white in color and hy Ch. Connt Gladstone IV. ont of Hops Hunter.

A favorite system of some of tha snre-thing men at the coursing parks is to deposit a lump sum of money with the cashiers of the pool-boxes prsvions to the diffsrent conrses. The pool-seller is nnder instructions and awaiting the nod of the flim-flammer as soon as that individual is ready for investment after ha has completed his arinous labors of steering snckers np against money that is enchored with chains and things. Soma peopla like to fall against work of this character and their simple brains ara infiltrated with the idea that they ara thoronghbreds.

Although St. Bernard dogs are, perhaps, not quite so fashionabla or so valnable as was the case some few years ago—says tha Field—when from £500 to over £1,000 was paid on more than one occasion for a specially fine dog, specimens of mora than ordinary excellence still command high prices. Recently Mr. Storey, of Annfield Plain, Durham, sold a yonng dog for £490, Mr. C. M. Pearson, of North Kibworth, near Rugby, being the purchaser. Tha most money ever paid for a St. Bernard was £1,300, for which Mr. T. H. Green sold Sir Bedivere to Mr. E. B. Sesrs, of Melrose, Mass.

At the lata show at Worslay, England, the sensational Collia Ormskirk Emerald (the £1,500 dog) had to take second place in the compstition for best dog in tha show, ths prize going aftar a close contest to a St. Bernard.

THE FARM.

Ideas About Milking

First, twenty pounds of milk drawn at the beginning of milking will produca only about one-half pound of butter, while the same amount drawn at the end of milking yields nearly two pounds of butter. A Danish experiment in the same line shows as follows:

1. Milk from the first streams, 172 lbs.—gave 1 lb. of butter.

2. Milk from the middle streams, 38 lbs.—gave 1 lb. of butter.

3. Milk from the last streams, 27 lbs., gave 1 lb. of butter.

4. Milk from last drops, 12 lbs.—gave 1 lb. of butter.

This shows that the after milk is very rich in butter elements and therefore very valuable.

Second, straining the cow's milking capacity to its utmost will develop the udder toward rendering as perfect service as possible.

When tha milking is finished the cow should again receive a kind word and a stroke with the hand—never with the milking stool.

Milking with wet hands is, of course, a thing of the past. Tha milker's hands should be dry and clean.

When the milking is finished the teats are usually moist with splash, moisture, etc. Unless wiped off this moisture is likely to form a dry, adhesive coat, which may give rise to cracks in the surface of the skin and accumulate bacteria.

Within reasonable limits, frequent milking increases the yield. But whether one milks twice or three times a day the hours should be regularly kept and the cows milked in a fixed succession—if possible by the same hands. If tha milking starts too early the animals are not prepared for it; if too late, they grow impatient and may even suffer considerable pain.

In either case the animals are sure to yield less milk than ordinarily.

Any inconvenience suffered by the milch cow will result in a loss of milk.

Any unusual condition of the udders and teats calls for immediate attention. Soreness of any portion, sores of a pecoliar character and obstructions of tha milk ducts should be promptly treated.

Cows with diseased udders are likely to be afflicted with some contageous sickness and should therefore be placed apart from the remainder of the herd. Their milk cannot be gathered in the same buckets and pails as are used with the other cows until health is restored.

Tuberculosis (consumptive) cattle must have no communication whatever with healthy cows.

Whenever a "hard milking" cow is found the narrowness of her milk canals may be obviated by rolling the teats between two hands. The passing of a straw into the milk canal is disastrous to the animal and may cause an inflammation of the udder. On being milked after the first calf many cows are very sensitive to the milker's touch. Nothing but patience and gentle treatment will avail in such cases.

A dirty udder should be cleaned with warm water before milking and rubbed dry with a clean cloth.

Inflamed udders have been successfully treated with water as hot as can be borne by the hand and applied frequently.

A light stable, well ventilated, is of necessity a clean stable. Cleanly milking cannot be practiced in the absence of sufficient light.

Milch cows should never be allowed to drink ice cold water, as it is sure to cause a decrease in the yield of milk.

A correspondent of the Orange Judd Farmer gives the following as a process that will prevent wagon wheels from shrinking: Scrape old paint off wheel rim. Set wheel in kettle of boiling water and boil it and keep turning it for an hour, then set it in a kettle or pan of boiling oil and keep turning and boiling till it won't drink in any more oil (oil won't dry in on the wood). The secret of boiling in water consists in expanding the air in the cells of the wood, driving all moisture out, and the wood expanded as well as the tire. Now, the cells being open, will fill up with oil and prevent the wheels from shrinking, and the tire cools and shrinks to the wood. The oil hardens in the wood and will remain there for years. If kept painted will never need resetting.

The charge for dipping cattle at the Fort Worth, Tex., Stock-Yards to free them from ticks has been reduced from fifty to thirty-five cents per head.

Poultry Notes.

The lazy hen is never a well one.

While hens are moulting, it is not necessary to clean coops; wait until later.

No class of live stock gives a better return for skim milk fed to it than poultry.

Feed fowls that are being fattened for market four or five times a day, but do not feed them more than they will eat each time.

If moulting hens seem out of condition as to general health, a few drops of tincture of iron in the drinking water will tone them up.

Do not leave food in the coop after hens have eaten all they wish. They will overeat and afterwards lose their appetites or have indigestion.

There is nothing like meat for bringing up the egg record. Dried meat can be fed quite freely; say one pound to each twenty-five hens, with the soft feed.

If the turkeys are fed at home in the morning they may form the habit of staying away at night; if fed in the evening only, they will always come home to roost.

Shut up your hens, three years old or over, in a darkened room, except at feeding time, and fatten them for market. There is no money in carrying them through the winter.

When a hen is found showing symptoms of difficult breathing, the sides of the face appear to bulge out with each breath; another may show signs of recently contracted cold, Give such hens a two-gram quinine pill.

Hens which eat eggs can be cured by putting nests in a dark place and leaving china eggs in tha yard where they can try to break them, also supplying them all the oyster shells they need for lime. Hens which have the egg-eating habit in confinement often drop it without trouble upon giving them free range, having other things to attract their attention.

When to Apply Manure.

A year ago the Ohio experiment station began a comparative test between cow manure, taken directly from tha stable to the field in the spring, and manure of tha same sort which had been allowed to lie in the open yard during the winter. The plan of the experiment is to apply both kinds of manure to land intended for corn, plow under at a shallow depth, and follow the corn with wheat and clover, without any further manuring. Four duplicate plots are treated with each kind of manure, applied at the rate of ten tons per acre, the treatment for each pair of plots being exactly alike in all other respects. The result thus far is that tha corn of 1897 gave an increase of thirteen bushels per acre from the yard manure against sixteen bushels from the stall manure, and the wheat crop following has given an increase of ten bushels per acre for tha yard manure against eleven bushels from the stall manure. Valuing the corn at 33 cents and the wheat at 80 cents per bushel, and the straw and stover at $3 per ton, tha increase from the yard manure in the two crops has amounted to $15 per acre, and that from the stall manure to $17, an average of $2 per ton for the manure, with further effect probable on succeeding crops.

An Effective Remedy for Flies.

One part crude petroleum, one part coal tar, one part lard or common grease, one-half ounce crude carbolic acid to gallon. This has been my remedy on my cows for two years. In any weather it will keep them off for a week or more. They must be covered litterally with it except the udder. The crude petroleum alone is the best remedy I ever tried for ticks on horses. It will not take the hair off in the crude state. It is very cheap here; sometimes it can be dipped up from the low places and gullies near where they are drilling.—J. Y. Bates, Texas Farm Ranch.

A band of 4,600 Oregon wethers sold for $3.50 per head at a railroad station recently in Wyoming to go to Nebraska feed lots. They had been driven through with the exception of about 400 miles, the journey being in May. All were two-year-olds, weighing about 105 lbs. when sold.

Cattlemen in Texas for the first time have had to resort to Indian Territory herds for feeders. This is a remarkable state of affairs and goes to clinch the general report of a shortage of cattle in that State.

Every cotton-seed oil mill in Texas is now feeding all the cattle it can carry. It is related that one man fed 400 head last winter at a cost of $7 per head and made a net profit of $8 per head on the lot.

Most farmers do not fully appreciate the cheapness of horse power these days and are not prepared to make the best of it by having tha right kind of implements. On Mr. Watson's big farm near Kearney, Nebraska, two-horse teams are not to be seen. Human labor is too expensive. A man drives three, four or six horses to the plow, harrow or drill. The ground is plowed, immediately rolled or floated, harrowed with a disc harrow next with a wide slanting tooth harrow and drilled. Mr. Watson says that it costs him not more than sixty-five cents an acre to prepare land and sow wheat, using the modern and most improved implements. A few years have no doubt wrought a great improvement in the care taken in preparing land and sowing wheat all over the west. In fact with the improved implements, it is not possible to do first-class work unless tha land is put in fine order. The disc drill is coming rapidly into use and tha claim is made that it will do better work in weedy, filthy land than tha hoe drill; also that it will work better in hard compact soil.

Rabbit farming is rapidly becoming a profitable American industry—a Scotch industry which "Yankee enterprise" has been quick to utilize. Rabbit fur is converted into what is known as Electric Seal, and tha demand for first class rabbit skins is increasing. In Scotland over $500,000 is invested in the rabbit farms. The industry can be carried on in connection with poultry raising or ordinary farming. There are many rabbit breeders in this country and good stock can be bought almost any time.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. Men whose success in whatever they engage depends on perfect physical condition, will be interested in the claims made for The Niagara Vapor Bath Cabinet.

A hunter, John C. Bayler, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I began to feel as though my happy hunting days were over. I thought I was getting old, my joints were getting stiff, and a day's outing after game always needed a other day to rest up in. Since I am using The Niagara Vapor Bath, I feel like a new man. It keeps me limbered up and in good shape for work or sport."

The Niagara Vapor Bath, if used regularly, keeps a man in the most perfect physical condition. Keeps his system aglow, his weight normal, his head free and clear, his muscles pliant and elastic, and not only prevents, but also cures, some of the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout and completely eradicates all the ailments arising from over-indulgence in liquor or food.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated baths at home, &c. Purifies the system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN

Vol. XXXIII. No. 22.
No. 22½ GEARY STREET.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1898

SUBSCRIPTION
THREE DOLLARS A YEAR

A GRAND LOT OF YEARLINGS.

An Opportunity to Secure Elegantly Bred Youngsters that May Not Again Offer.

There has never been a time, since the breeding of horses was first entered upon in California, when such opportunities to get the choicest of thoroughbred yearlings have been offered as this winter's sales have afforded. When the history of next year's racing is written many will be the winners and stake horses recounted which were picked up at the 1898 sales in this State for a song. There has not been a sale held as yet in this city where the thoroughbred yearlings have brought anything near what they were worth, but this loss to the seller is the buyer's gain, and the only wonder is that there are not more buyers in the market to snap up the many bargains which are offered every week.

At the corner of Market street and Van Ness avenue, next Tuesday evening, will be begun a sale of yearling thoroughbreds, which for breeding, looks, quality and all round excellence have not been surpassed by the youngsters sold from any stock farm in America. We allude to the yearlings from the Napa Stock Farm of A. B. Spreckels Esq., twenty-eight of which are to be sold to the highest bidder by Killip & Co. on the date and at the place above mentioned.

There is not one in the whole consignment that has been broken or tried in any way, but all are in splendid condition and ready to go to work at their first lessons in racing. This is the second sale of yearlings bred at this farm, and if the first sale is recalled it will be seen that such good race horses as Canace, Sevens, Headwater (all stake winners) Zinfandel, Aluminum, Little T. G., Oahu, Abano, Nibau and others have already been sold from the place.

The sires represented by their produce at this sale are imp. Idalium, imp. Creighton, imp. The Judge, and those grandly bred native horses Eolo, General Miles, Puryear D. and Lew Weir.

Idalium is a full brother to the noted horse, Sir Modred, but he does not depend on relationship for his reputation. He sired many good winners in New Zealand before being brought to this country and while but very few of his get raced there, there is a very large proportion of winners among them.

Crighton, one of the grandest lookers ever seen on a a track, was a good race horse himself, and is a sire of winners.

The Judge is the sire of some of the best lookers in the consignment. He is one of the most royally bred horses that ever left England and proved himself a horse of phenomenal speed when he raced here. This is his first crop of foals and there are but a few of them.

Eolo, son of Eolus and War Song, Gen. Miles by Falsetto out of Hypatia, by Waverly, she a granddaughter of the great mare Levity. Puryear D., a son of imp. Deceiver and Ada D. by Inquirer, Lew Weir, son of the great Longfellow and Latonia, by imp. Billet, are all stallions that will make names for themselves as sires if there is anything in looks and breeding.

The matrons which produced these yearlings were selected for their individuality and blood lines, and they were purchased without regard to their cost for the purpose of founding a breeding farm that would be the peer of any farm in America of corresponding size. Among them are Nellie Bell, sister of Faro; Amaryillis, by Grinstead, a very fast mare; imp. Yarnabee; imp. Candid, a stake winner in Australia and America; Annie Race, a frequent winner; Folly, the dam of Sevens; Frisa, the dam of Alexis; Patricia, a good race mare and own sister to Misty Morn; Dolly McCone, winner of twenty races in the East and California; Maria F, half-sister to Jim Brown, one of the best race mares of her time in the State and the dam of Baggage; imp. Zara, dam of Huguenot, Chartreuse, Kummel, Lew Zara and two other foals that are winners in Australia, and was a stake winner herself; Border Lassie a phenomenally fast mare; Piquante, a stake winner and the fastest filly of her year in California; Straight Tip, by Peel, the sire of Bellicoso, and many others. These are all young mares bred in the purple and good winners when racing.

The colts and fillies to be sold are such a magnificent looking lot that they have received nothing but enthusiastic praise from all who have seen them. The persons who secure them at the sale next Tuesday will be fortunate and will be able to make a very large profit on their investment before a year has passed.

Pilatus Sold for $10 000.

The stallion Pilatus, 2:09¼, was sold this week by his owner, J. N. McClelland, of Des Moines, Iowa, to a syndicate of Louisville breeders for $10,000. This is one of the most important sales made this year, as Pilatus was bought principally for breeding purposes, as was the great stallion, Directum, 2:05¼, recently sold for twice that sum. Pilatus is a son of the great sire Onward, out of Pbyllis, by Egbert, second dam Coquette by Pilot, Jr., third dam Forty Cents, the noted thoroughbred mare by Wagner. He stands 15¾ hands high, is handsome, and weighs about 1,200 pounds. He is now six years old. As a two-year old, he took a record of 2:37, reduced it to 2:15 last year as a five-year-old, and still further reduced it to 2:09¼ this year under the pilotage of Andy McDowell. He stood in Iowa last season at $25. In color he is a magnificent chestnut.

The hearing in the case of the officials of the Washington Jockey Club and the bookmakers doing business in the ring, who are charged with violation of the laws of the District of Columbia, in allowing gambling to go on at the Bennings racetrack, came up before Police Justice Kimball on November 19th The defendants pleaded not guilty and the case was laid over until Friday, November 25th. The men have asked for a trial by jury. It is the Jockey Club's intention to fight the matter, and have it decided now whether or not betting can go on under the Percy-Gray law, as in New York. August Belmont has telegraphed the lawyers who are defending the Jockey Club in the matter to fight it out to the end. All the officials of the Washington Jockey Club were released under personal bonds of $100 each. They were President S. S. Howland, Stewards Jessie Brown and Samuel Ross, Timer W. H. Barretto, Starter Mars Cassidy, and Patrol Judge C. D. McCoy. Judge McDowell was not in court, but bonds were given for his appearance on Friday. Eight bookmakers were held for $500 bail, which was also furnished.

Stallion owners who intend to make seasons with their horses in California in 1899, should announce this fact as soon as possible. We are receiving inquiries every week in regard to these matters.

CALIFORNIA HORSES BRING GOOD PRICES

Buyers at Fasig's Big Sale Pay Good Money for What They Want.

Wednesday last the consignment of California horses shipped East in charge of Samuel Gamble, was sold at Madison Square Garden, New York, to W. B. Fasig & Co. Mr. Gamble took about sixteen head across the continent, all owned by citizens of California, and we are glad to bear that the prices obtained for them have averaged well. A telegram received Thursday morning gives the prices received for six of them which are as follows:

Bay filly, by Direct, out of Eva G., by Anteeo, the property of M. Donovan of San Francisco, was sold to Kalamazoo Stock Farm for $500.

Rudolph Jordan consigned two head to the sale. One the mare Margaret Worth 2:15, by Alexander Button out of Adeline Patti, by Effingham, was knocked down to Carl S. Burr, of Cammack, Long Island, for $1,000, not a cent more than this grand mare is worth, but more than she would probably have brought in California El Milagro, a bay yearling colt, by McKinney, from the dam of Margaret Worth, sold for $700, the purchaser being Senator John McCarthy, of Brooklyn.

Mr. P. J. Williams sent the mare Silver Ring, 2:14½, to the sale. He decided at the last moment to send her. The readers of the Breeder and Sportsman, and the horsemen in California know all about Silver Ring. She is as fast as her record any time, and a great road mare. She brought $1,500 at the sale, which is highly pleasing to Mr Williams, as he did not expect quite that sum, but knows she is worth more. Silver Ring is by Silver Bow, out of Maud Singleton. Jacob North of Brooklyn was the purchaser.

The mare Madera, by Dexter Prince, consigned by H. D. Wise brought $525.

W. W. Carey of San Mateo, sent a promising two-year-old trotter by Guy Wilkes that while not worked for speed, had shown that he was a coming trotter. He was a handsome chestnut and Senator John McCarthy, of Brooklyn bad to bid $1,000 to get him.

It is a matter of congratulation to California breeders and owners that this consignment has brought such good prices and it will lead others who were inclined to send horses to the Fasig sale, but who backed out at the last moment, to have a little more confindence next time. It must not for a moment be thought, however, that everything and everything will bring good prices in the East The buyers there will not pay large sums for anything that does not come up to the requirements. For young animals there is a demand for those of tried and proven racing families that show ability to race well. Among the aged horses, those with fast records, first-class road qualities and good looks are the ones that are wanted. For horses of this description there is a good market in the East and will be for years to come.

Dean Sage 1,000, by Hambletonian 10, dam Nellie Sayre, by American Star 14, is still owned by Peter Lentz, a farmer living near Ellsworth, Minn., and is represented in the standard list by two trotters, one son with two trotters and two pacers to his credit, and two daughters that are each the dam of one performer. Dean Sage is not the only son of old Hambletonian still owned west of the Mississippi river, as Aladdin 2,235 is doing stud duty at Oswego, Kan., and Richmond 5,323 is owned near St. Louis, Mo.

LOS ANGELES HORSE SHOW.

H. J. Crocker Suggests an Elaborate Coaching Parade.

Mr. Wooster, secretary of the horse show, is in San Francisco completing arrangements with the Southern Pacific company to take down the exhibits of the gentlemen in San Francisco and Burlingame who will compete in the horse show. He is meeting with gratifying success.

Walter S. Hobart has promised several carloads of horses and carriages and Henry J. Crocker has made entries in fifteen or more classes.

Richard McCreery, who has achieved so much fame as a judge at the famous horse show held annually at Madison Square garden, New York, has consented to act in a similar capacity during the Los Angeles show in connection with Mr. Beylard of San Mateo and Mr. Kirkpatrick of this city, these gentlemen judging the harness classes.

Henry Crocker has make a suggestion that bids fair to be pretty feature in Los Angeles during the coming winter. He is organizing a coaching parade, which will be participated in by Mr. Hobart and others, besides Mr. Crocker, after the horse show. Their coaches are to be driven along the principal thoroughfares of Los Angeles. They will probably drive in a body over to Pasadena.

It has been suggested by many of the associates of the Horse Show association that the valuable cup offered by C. P. Huntington of New York be awarded to the California bred horse which takes the most ribbons during the coming horse show. This would seem to be an admirable way of arousing interest among the owners of California bred horses some of whom will be fortunate enough to carry off the trophy offered by Mr. Huntington.

An Eastern View.

[Freeman in N. Y. Telegraph.]

Every one of the prominent owners, trainers and drivers of trotting horses now in this city has a gun to fire at the rule prohibiting the laying up of heats, and if the framers of the rule, or those within whose power it is to rescind it, could be brought face to face with those most affected by the rule, I do not see what excuse they could possibly have for not wiping it out, or putting in its place some rule that would prove more palatable and at the same time meet the purpose for which the unpopular rule was framed. The well known trainer, Barney Demorest, voiced the sentiment as follows:

"The intention of the framers of the rule was undoubtedly all right. They intended that it should do away with what is almost universally conceded to be bad practice. The mistake has been in the application of it and in that way it has proven to be sadly deficient. A judge may be as keen eyed as a hawk and yet not be able to determine whether or not a driver has laid up a heat, and under the system so much in vogue on every track in the country of placing non-professional men in the judges' stand, the erratic enforcement of the rule has been the cause of the general opposition and criticism which cannot possibly redound to the best interests of the light harness turf.

"There are unquestionably times when it is perfectly legitimate to lay a horse up—times when the sentiment of humanity and good sense shows both drivers and judges that it is a good policy to pursue. Why do not the authorities go to the root of the evil, which they intend to wipe out? It is within their power to abolish heat betting on the races, and that would end it. But the shoe pinches when it begins to touch the pocketbooks of the associations. The bookmakers, of course, are a source of profit to the associations and the officials of the parent organizations do not want to offend them.

"But I am sure if they would apply drastic measures and kill the root of the evil, they would find that hooking would go right along and interfere very slightly if at all with the income from that source. I am also in favor of the adoption of a two-in-three heat system. The old three heat in five heat idea originated when 2:40 horses were in the play, and always had something in reserve. Now they go a killing pace right off the reel and three heats are just one too many for a horse to go to win."

While there is so much guessing as to what trotter will be the champion of 1899, the owner of Jasper Ayers believes the son of Iris will be able to trot a mile in 2:06 next year.

Lenna N. and Star Pointer To Be Mated.

At the Fasig sale in New York this week the mare Lenna N., 2:05¼, the fastest pacing mare in the world, and owned by Mrs. H. D. Wise of California, was sold to John H. Shultz, owner of the Perkville Farm. Mr. Shultz paid $3,000 for the mare. She will be bred to Star Pointer, 1:59½, the fastest pacing stallion in the world and the result of this union will be watched with interest. Mr. Shultz states that he will withdraw her from the turf. Lenna N. made her record in the first heat of a race where she met Searchlight. She drove that stallion out the second heat in 2:04½, showing that she did not quit after her supreme effort. As a matter of interest to students of blood lines we append a tabulation of the pedigree of the foal which may result from the union of the champion stallion and mare:

Good Roads.

There is no public question which appeals to all progressive citizens so strongly as that of good roads, and men of all parties can unite in pressing upon the various State Legislatures the necessity of building them. It is the duty of the State and not of the municipality or county, and only by a liberal plan of State aid can the best results at the least cost be attained. The State Engineer can lay out plans which will benefit all parts of the State and arrange the grades in a beneficial manner, which would be impossible if the roads within the limits of each country were under the direction of an independent official.

It is an exploded doctrine that highways should be built and maintained by those who live alongside them. In sparsely settled districts, where the farm lands are of a small value, the burden of taxation would be unbearable to the farmers who lived along the line who would pay for roads which everybody used. A. B. Choate, an authority on the question of good roads, and an equitable system of taxation to raise money to build them, in a recent leaflet says:

"Equality of taxation is a familiar principle, yet nothing could be more unequal than to tax farm property alone for the construction of roads which ultimately benefit the entire community. In the newer States the taxable property is more nearly equally divided between town and country; but in the older ones the preponderance is greatly in towns and cities, in New York the proportion being about six to one.

"The hearing which this fact has," says Mr. Choate, upon the question of State aid for building country wagon roads is very apparent, for, if the farmers are required to pay taxes on their proportionately very small amount of property, to improve the long stretches of country roads, while the city people only pay enough taxes on their great wealth to improve the roads within the city limits, it will be necessary that the road taxes levied upon the farm property shall be very much heavier in proportion to the value of that property than the road taxes upon city property, and the principle of equal taxation will be violated.

"The business men in the cities have learned that it is to their interests to have better country roads. The whole State is interested in the improvement of all the roads, and since the city people are insisting that they shall be improved, it would be fair to levy a tax on city property as well as country property for the improvement of country roads. This is what is meant by State aid."

Mr. Choate then sums up the question in the following brief, yet masterly manner:

1. All taxes should be equal.
2. Taxing farm property to improve all country roads, and city property to improve city roads only, results in unequal taxation.
3. City people desire to have country roads improved; equal and just taxation requires that they contribute toward the expense.
4. State aid simply requires all benefited property owners to contribute to the expense of road improvements that benefit them.
5. State aid for road building is the same in principle as State aid for public schools.
6. State aid is not a new experiment in road building, but has proved successful in New Jersey, Massachusetts and elsewhere.

The above six points are clear, simple and convincing, and if the farmer is once convinced that he will only have to pay a minor proportion of the cost, there will be little opposition in any of our Legislatures to bills for the purpose of constructing good roads.

John Kinney, of Buffalo, New York, will campaign Rosie Lynn, 2:21½, by Nutford, next year. He expects her to get a record close to 2:10.

OAKWOOD PARK YOUNGSTERS.

Prices Brought by Them in New York Last Month at the Fasig Sale.

Kletaweh, 2.05½, was the only horse with a record consigned to the Fasig Sale in New York last month by the Oakwood Park Stock Farm. As was stated in these columns last week he brought $7,000 and was sold to Mr. James Butler of New York, owner of Direct, 2:05¼, Directum Kelly 2:08, and many other fast ones. Besides Kletaweh, twenty-three head, mostly two-year-olds, were consigned to the sale. The total received for the lot was $3,445, an average of $150 per head. Following is a record of the sale:

Kletawah, 2:05½, b c, 1895, by Steinway—Katie S., by Electioneer; James Butler, New York	$ 7,000

Trotters Becoming Better Gaited.

During the past year or two it has been most pronounced that the average trotter of the best class has become better gaited than the one of former years, says the Stock Farm. Few of the fastest horses that are seen at the various trotting tracks exhibit the uneven, ill-balanced gait that has been so common in the past. That generations of rich breeding and inheritance from sire to son of the trotting gait has much to do with this there is no doubt. To-day a large per centage of America's best trotters are by developed sires and good ones as well. Rough-gaited trotters are no longer useful, although one occasionally sees one of this type winning important events. The demand for good road horses has been and is so great that the badly-gaited trotters are of little or no account after they cease winning. The fast young stallions that but yesterday were the kings of the turf are to-day the sires of many of the most notable performers. The idea that developed sires were no better than those untrained has long since ceased to be the case. Arion with his Nico, Direct with his Directum Kelly, Allerton with Geyton, Axtell with Elloree, and Stamboul, Prodigal and other mighty trotters of a past generation speak volumes for the developed sire. Not only were the sires trotters themselves, but in most instances were great ones, stars of the first water, in fact. The champions come from champions, and such will be the case from this time on. This being the case, only a few years must elapse before the lovers of light harness racing will see the sons and daughters of classic event winners themselves the victors in these same important events.

Will Take Horses to England.

W. H. Freer, of New York City, is getting together a string of good horses, which he will take to England about the 10th of this month. He has several youngsters that show promise of being very speedy and will add to the bunch at the sales this month. He is also thinking of making a show of American horses at Paris during the exposition of 1900. He says there is no trouble in selling American horses in Paris and that the custom rule applying to the importation of American horses is nowhere the bugaboo it has been cracked up to be in some of the turf papers. Forty dollars duty on each horse is demanded, and that is all there is to it. He says that the kind of horses wanted for French racing are the big ones that can trot anywhere from 2:25 to 2:35. They must be strong in order to trot on the turf. He is of the opinion that if a better method of shoeing was adopted in that country faster time would be made.

Here is something out of the common in the way of ice trotting. The Gentlemen's Driving Club of Rochester, New York, is making arrangements to give a trotting and pacing meeting on the Erie canal this winter. Permission has been secured from the Superintendent of Public Works, and a stretch of the canal will be set aside for this purpose in which boats will not be allowed to winter.

William Doty, an old and respected citizen of Meridian, Cal., died at his home in that place last week. He bred and owned several good trotters and was a great admirer of the light harness horse.

Orme in the Stud.

Ormonde's greatest son, Orme, is rapidly making a great name for himself in England.

The chances are that the Orme colt Flying Fox will be the winter favorite for the English Derby, a fact which calls to the attention of breeders the remarkably successful start which Orme has made upon the English turf. This is further emphasized by the victory of another Orme colt, Frontier, in the Dewhurst Plate, at seven furlongs, who, barring only Flying Fox, is undoubtedly the best two year-old of the year. So far Orme's stock have won about seventeen races in 1898, fourteen of them having been secured by two-year-olds, nine of whom have added to his winnings something like $45,000.

In another year many are predicting that this great son of Ormonde will be in the very first rank of English sires, especially as he is being sent only to the very choicest mares in England, as witnessed in the above mentioned two colts. The dam of Flying Fox is Vempire. She (Vempire) is a Galopin mare, and as Angelica, the dam of Orme, is also by Galopin, Flying Fox is very closely inbred to the famous old stallion, who, despite the fact that he is twenty-six years old, heads the list of winning sires for the present season. Vampire's first foal was by Gonselvo, but he died before he was old enough to be trained; Batt, by Sheen, came next, but Flying Fox is an improvement on Batt, being both a better looking colt and a much more consistent runner. Indeed, the inbreeding to Gelopin and the Stockwell cross seems to have suited Vampire better than the Hampton cross; and there is a yearling colt, own brother to Flying Fox, amongst the team which have been sent from the Eaton stud to Kingsclere this autumn.

Quetta, the dam of Frontier, is an older mare, having been foaled as far back as 1885. She has always been a good breeder, and when six years old she threw, among several other fair performers, that very smart horse Gray Leg, who won the City and Suburban for the Duke of Westminster, and afterwards won the Portland Plate with a big weight in the saddle. However, Frontier is a distinct improvement upon his predecessors, and it is quite possible that close inbreeding has again to be thanked for the satisfactory result. Frontier is by Orme, by Ormonde, by Bend Or, and Quetta is by Bend Or out of a Rosicrucian mare. No one seems to understand the secrets of breeding better than the Duke of Westminster, and it will be noticed that the Eaton yearlings are, as a rule, closely inbred to successful winning strains.—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

Increase the Number of Geldings.

[Kelston in The Horse Fancier.]

It seems a pity, in view of what geldings like Monitor, Parole and Banquet accomplished, that more colts are not added to the list when yearlings, instead of waiting, as most men do, until they have formed a lot of bad habits, when the same good results are not so likely to follow. With the overplus of no account stallions with which this country abounds it would certainly be a wise move to increase the allowance for geldings, for at any rate a specified series of years, and also give allowance for spayed fillies. This last is fully as important as the other, as there is no fear that the breeders would operate on the most desirable to keep as brood mares. Col. Cley, of Runnymede Stud, is strongly in favor of the breeders organizing with a view to using this as a means of reducing the production, and for the last three years has been setting the example, which this last season has been followed by Milton Young, of the McGrathiana Stud, who has had about thirty yearling fillies operated on. Of those thus operated on at Runnymede two years ago, and which Messrs. Clay & Woodford have had in training for the last two seasons, it has been demonstrated that, besides becoming bolder and generally more masculine, they train and race better, are less subject to coughs and colds, are hardier in every respect. In the middle of last winter, when on a visit to Runnymede, I saw several of these fillies, then two-year-olds, and one very noticeable feature was that each and every one of them had exceptionally glossy, healthy coats; indeed, so much so that they had to be seen alongside of other horses to realize what a prominent feature this was in the condition of these sexless fillies. Haman, the trainer, who is a man of long experience, informed me that from close observation in the course of two seasons he had no doubt whatever but what, with fillies of equal class, the spayed one would prove the better all round race horse. This, of course, is too broad a subject to be treated in an off-hand fashion, but if, as Col. Clay states, it tends to reduce the production and lessen the number of undesirable mares, it will be for the ultimate betterment of the intelligent breeder, and will also prove beneficial to the interests of the turf; and it might be a wise move on the part of the Stewards of the Jockey Club were they to recommend races in the Metropolitan district exclusively for geldings and sexless fillies, as such a step would induce breeders generally to follow the lead set by Col. Clay.

SALE OF PALO ALTO YEARLINGS.

Twenty-One Youngsters Disposed of at Very Low Prices Tuesday Night.

The yearlings from Palo Alto Stock Farm were sold at auction last Tuesday evening by Killip & Co. The prices obtained were very low, in fact this seems to ha the rule with sales all over the United States this season. There were twenty-one youngsters disposed off at this sale and the total was $2,245, an average of not quite $107 per head. Following is a complete record of the sale:

Mr. Sime Admiree Sloan.

George R. Sims, the well-known English dramatist and newspaper writer, is evidently very much impressed with Tod Sloan, the American jockey. Mr. Sims, who has conducted for many years the "Mustard and Cress" department in the London Referee, published the other day a half column eulogistic of the jockey, including the following burst of song:

THE HERO OF THE DAY.

The Sirdar has taken Khartoum and come back
And been met at Victoria Station;
And Dreyfus contrives still to keep on the rack
The whole of the French population.
From Fashoda the Major has shifted his ground—
His position was certainly rocky;
But the popular hero of England was found
In Sloan, the American jockey.

In crime and in politics, science and war,
In music and matters dramatic,
We have names there are plenty of paragraphs for,
But the taste of the public's erratic.
Of none of the names that the newspapers boom
Have the owners the right to be cocky.
For it's off with your hat, you who captured Khartoum,
To Sloan, the American jockey.

Disinfect the Stables.

One of the first things a trainer should have done before moving his string of horses into new stalls is to have them thoroughly cleaned and disinfected under his own supervision or that of a trusted representative. Influenza, distemper and nearly all kindred complaints to which horse flesh is heir are infectious diseases and can be acquired from stalls, buildings and other premises where afflicted animals have been housed. Every horse owner should set apart certain days when every feed-box, bucket, bin and stall should be thoroughly cleaned and the stables renovated as much as possible. Sulphur is a good thing to kill all sorts of germs and can be used with safety where ordinary precaution is had. Place it in an old iron kettle in which some live coals have been previously placed, set the kettle inside the stall and close the doors and windows up tight. Everything in the way of colored cloth that may be affected by the fumes must be removed from the stall beforehand. A half hour smudging with sulphur will kill everything that has life, even to the smallest germ. Sulphur candles, made especially for disinfecting buildings, can be purchased at the drug stores and are very handy to use. By taking a little pains and going to a little trouble it is possible to free a stable from the germs of any disease that may have afflicted former occupants.

All the American turfmen will find the following comment in regard to Keenan interesting. It is culled from our esteemed East Indian contemporary, "The Asian," of Calcutta, from the issue of October 18th. "The American-bred horse Keenan, writes a Poona correspondent, is again out of work and looks none the worse for his defeats at the big meeting. Imposter, or whatever the horse may be, I think he was ridden most unfortunately in the W. I. Stakes, for had Ebrahim only gone to the front from the start he must have cut down Veronica, who only beat him for speed during the last five furlongs, which appears to me exactly her distance, and I feel sure that every competent judge of racing, race courses and jockeys will agree with me that the owner H. H. Aga Khan, his trainer, E. Day, are to be sympathized with. If Keenan had only a European jockey on his back I feel pretty certain he would have run a different horse, at the same time we are bound to acknowledge the masterly riding always displayed by Ebrahim on Arabs and ponies, for who could have ridden a better race than he did on Yaldiz on both occasions he won. I believe that Keenan will run a much better horse that he did here at your Calcutta meeting, and may I be there to see." Keenan is evidently still at his old tricks. We Americans, and the English in their turn, were always expecting Keenan to "run a much better horse," but both of us finally learned that Keenan is an arrant rogue in whom no faith at all can be placed, and the sooner "The Asian" arrives at the conclusion the better for the pockets of its speculatively inclined readers.

How He Rides.

In a recently published interview Tod Sloan is alleged to have given the following explanation of his own theories and methods of riding: "Referring again to the way in which I ride my winners, it has been said that I get down well to my work. This is quite true, and by this means I cut or escape the breeze which must naturally arise as one rushes through the air.

"It is said I grip my horse tightly with my knees, and that I place my hands within a short distance of the horse's mouth, all of which is quite untrue. Then it has been stated that just before starting I take a double turn with the reins around my hands, which enables me to excercise considerable leverage on the head of my mount. Again I say this is not true. I never did this in my life. Further, that I do not depend upon any sudden jerking, but that I exercise a steady pressure in any direction I want, and that assisting my horse in his striding by including my body either to the right-hand side or left-hand side, I get through as soon as I find an opening. Again, it is quite untrue. It has also been said that I sit my horse where he has most power to carry me and where it is best calculated he will feel my weight the least. Yes, this is so; and that, practically, is all there is to be said.

"As I have remarked before, it is the result of long study and has resulted in my winning so many races; but, after all a great deal depends on the horse, but if the jockey has good material he should know how to make the best of it. That is all I do. If I have a mount I take him to be a winner, and I endeavor for all I am worth to get him to the post first."—Daily Racing Form.

Equalizing the Weights.

The new rule of the Jockey Club reducing the weight for age six pounds at two and three miles for all except three-year-olds, should remove an objection raised by owners against long-distance races, the contention having been that the weights as formerly existing gave the three-year-olds too much advantage and deterred other horses from entering. The former weights for three-year-olds at two miles were 106 pounds in March and April, and ranging through the other months up to 117 pounds in October and November, and at three miles beginning with 99 pounds and running up to 111 in October and November. At two miles the weight for a four-year-old was 130 the year round, and at three miles 126, for five year-olds and upward the weight began at 136 at two and three miles and was scaled down to 130 for the former and 129 for the latter distance for the months of October and November. It will be observed that under the former regime there was a difference of 18 pounds at two miles between the three-year-olds and four-year-olds and upward, and at a season of the year when a three-year-old is practically as good as a four-year-old. According to the new rule reducing the weights six pounds, there will only be a difference of seven pounds. At three miles the respective weights were 111, 126 and 129 for the late Fall, and there is a difference of fifteen and eighteen pounds, notwithstanding the increase of the distance. The Jockey Club has made a good move toward the encouragement of long distance races, and the new change should be popular with horsemen, and it is to be hoped that with one common objection removed long-distance races will increase in number proportionate to their popularity.—N. Y. Times.

Jockey worship has the past racing season been unusually conspicuous, and, strange as it may seem, certain jockeys almost invariably make favorites, regardless, in some cases, of the quality of the horses which they ride. That a good jockey is an incalculable assistance to a horse in winning a race is undeniable, yet the best jockey on earth cannot win unless he has some horse under him, and to make the jockey the favorite instead of the horse is a false estimate of chances and in direct antagonism to all practical rules of probability. The public is of course the maker of jockey worship, but in doing so possibly does not fully realize that it is opening an avenue to fraud and collusion between unscrupulous jockeys, owners and bookmakers. Knowing the prevalent idea that the jockey makes the favorite, what would be easier than for a combination to pay a leading jockey a good fee to ride a poor horse, the bookmaker profit by his defeat and the public be the losers by a precedent which it has itself established. The jockey need not necessarily be cognizant of the job, for when confronted with a tempting fee it is his privilege and his duty to accept any amount which is offered him, provided, of course, there is no patent objection to his accept, ance. So that it is plain that a high-class jockey of spotless integrity could innocently be accessory to a very serious fraud. On the other hand, the supposition that all good jockeys are not saints morally is not an unreasonable one, and should a black sheep of the profession, for his skill in the saddle be taken into the confederacy, the robbery would be all the more certain and far-reaching. It is, of course, natural and inevitable that the skill of a jockey shall be taken into account in estimating the chances of a horse to win, but too much consideration is given the jockey to the exclusion of the quality of his mount, and this will no doubt account for the Waterloo of many strong favorites during the past season. In some cases they may have been premeditated while in others the defeats were no doubt legitimate and bona fide. The form-players should first figure out the chances of the horse as compared with the other starters, and then take the jockey into consideration. By this system when the horse figures badly in his field, yet his mount is a crack jockey, the player can don his studying cap and may sometimes keep out of a deadfall. The tricks of all trades are many, and very small straws will show how the wind blows.—Turf, Field and Farm.

The yearling sister to Jean Beraud, which is in E. Yeaks' string in the East, has more length and shows more quality and finish than her famous brother. She is a beautifully actioned filly and one that, barring accidents, is almost certain to prove high-class.

Starting at the Local Tracks.

The main feature of an afternoon's racing, and the one on which the enjoyment of the day hinges, is the starting Without the knowledge that he can obtain at least an even break for his money, the race track frequenter is exceedingly shy about wagering his money, and in cases where confidence in the starter has been lost, the betting becomes very light. Without heavy betting, the bookmakers are unable to pay the stiff bonus exacted for the privilege of booking and consequently their numbers are decreased. As the booking privilege is the principal source of revenue of the racing associations, any shortcoming in this direction causes the purses offered to be reduced and thus affects the horse owners. So it will be readily seen that the vital point of successful racing is good starting.

Since the commencement of the present winter's racing on local tracks, the utmost dissatisfaction has been felt and expressed about the starting at both Ingleside and Oakland, and much harsh language has been used both verbally and in the public print about the starters engaged by both Associations.

While, doubtless, much that has been said or written about these gentlemen is undeserved, still, it is evident to every frequenter of the tracks that some radical reform must be instituted which will prevent the daily occurence of horses being left at the post; or on the other hand the chances of a field of well-behaved animals being ruined in the effort to dispatch some crazy brute whose entry should never have been accepted.

When the Grey starting machine was first experimented with on local tracks some three years ago, it was hailed with delight as solving the problem of how to dispatch a field of horses on even terms; and certainly no better device has ever been invented for that purpose, if it is used as it was intended to be. But with all due deference to Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Caldwell, notwithstanding their three years experince in its use, it is evident that they have not as yet mastered the theory of how to employ it. The gentleman who first operated it in California had no experience in starting horses and yet he was able through an intelligent use of the machine to get a field of horses away on perfectly even terms, without delay and with none left standing at the post. The reason of this was that the field was made to line up and break from a standing start. Everyone was supposed to be willing to accept an even break and no pet jockeys were allowed to break from behind and come running at the webbing. The methods which are now in use are diametrically opposed to the theories of the inventor of the machine At Ingleside the field is taken back a short distance, and as in the days of the red flag, they come down to the webbing on a run often breaking through and causing unnecessary delay while the gate is undergoing repairs. If a horse is a slow beginner or his jockey not quick enough in breaking away he is nearly certain, under the circumstances, to be left at the post. At Oakland the senseless recall flag is in use, that is sometimes in use and sometimes not, and thus opportunity is given to the jockeys to pull up their horses if they think they are not getting the best of it, The recall flag in certainly the worst feature of the whole bad business as it opens the way for all sorts of things to happen. No rule has been promulgated as to when it should be in use and when not, and the uncertainty felt by the backer of horses while anxiously awaiting what is going to happen at the post, should furnish all the excitement to be desired by the most exacting.

There are enough elements of chance which enter into the racing game without adding this one of unreliable starting; the remedy lies in the hands of the management of the Racing Associations and they should look to it that the evil is abolished at once. In the first place the starter should be given absolute control of the boys with power to inflict such punishment for infraction of his rules as may seem adequate to him; his decision should be final and no appeal to, or interference from a Board of Stewards or power behind the throne should be tolerated. Thus the onus of the whole business would lie where it belongs, on the starter; then if his work should continue to be unsatisfactory he should be promptly replaced by a more competent man than himself.

This article is not intended for "a roast" of any one nor is any accusation of dishonesty hinted at, as has been the case in other remarks made upon this subject; but as a plain statement of facts its truth cannot be denied, and the sooner the starting evil is remedied, the better it will be for all who are connected with racing either as spectators or in any official capacity.

A GOOD deal has been said and written about the intelligence of the horse and a Columbiana horse showed remarkable intelligence recently. Jerry Groner has a gray horse named Dave, which he has had for a number of years. One day last week the old horse broke out of the pasture on the Leetonia road, in which he was feeding, came up the street and walked into Kurt & Harrold's blacksmith shop. Mr. Harrold said, "Hello, Dave, what's the matter?" Dave began to paw with his forward feet, and upon examination Mr. Harrold found a screw imbedded in Dave's foot about an inch deep. Upon the screw being removed, old Dave appeared very grateful, and no doubt felt relieved.—Columbiana (O.) Ledger.

STEEPLECHASING IN NEW YORK.

A Vast Improvement Reported in the Sport as Now Managed.

No class of sport has shown more improvement during the past season than steeplechasing. The horses that are running to-day are better schooled, better bred and as a rule sound young horses, consequently the sport in every way is being more appreciated. It was only a few years ago that steeplechasing had sunk to such a low ebb that any horse unable to win on the flat was thought good enough for 'cross country purposes, says the Commercial Advertiser. The chances are that he would start in a race a few days after the conclusion was arrived at, and not being properly schooled would not be able to get over the course. Result—bad fall, jockey injured, public disgusted.

Happily all that is changed now, and many steeplechases run over the metropolitan tracks resulted in close finishes and excellent races throughout. Shillalah is perhaps one of the best steeplechasers ever seen in the country, and he proved on his first and second attempts what good schooling will do for a horse. With men interested in steeplechasing like W. C. Whitney, Sydney Paget, J. W. Colt, "Mr. Chamblet," F. D. Beard, F. Gebhard, F. R. and T. Hitchcock, F. C. O'Reilly, Ralph Black, Goughacres Stables and W. C. Hayes, the sport is sure to go on improving, and races just as important as the Liverpool Grand National may be looked for.

What is most needed, though, is a natural country. The made courses on the inside of a race track will always be tame affairs compared to the other. There never was a more perfect site for a steeplechase course than on the hills at Wheatly' where the Meadowbrook Steeplechase Association held its one-day meeting a couple of weeks ago. The jumps could be stiffened up a bit and it would not be hard to find a natural brook somewhere near which could be altered to resemble Beecher's, and then the gentlemen riders in America would have a course to their liking.

The horses are here now, and all that is needed in this country. Perhaps Mr. Whitney will allow his farm to be used for the purpose, as it is so perfectly adapted, and at some future date a three days' meeting could be held which would rival Aintree and place steeplechasing on a par with the sport in England.

Mr. Colt's stable next season will be a strong one, as Dr. Catlett and Rinaldo are some of his recent purchases to be schooled at his Genesee Valley establishment, which is one of the most perfect in the country.

It is a well known fact that the stiffer the course the fewer the accidents, and this is accounted for by jockeys taking more care when riding and not attempting to rush their horses at their fences. When a course is easy, galloping wins the race, but when it is stiff the best jumper will always come out ahead.

The more steeplechasing we have the better the sport will be in every way. There would naturally be more jockeys, and good ones are sadly needed. It is hardly worth a man's while to go in for being a steeplechase jockey now. He can only ride on an average one race a week during the season, and other things would pay him better. With more jumping races the best men would get retaining fees, and that would be the golden bait to encourage others to perfect themselves. Opportunity is all the need, and next season promises to be a banner one for the 'cross country brigade.

Saddle Notes.

HUGH JONES received a telegram Wednesday announcing the death of his father.

THE Spreckels yearlings will be sold next Tuesday evening. They are a grand lot.

OLD Rearguard has once more broken down and will be retired to the stud, this time permanently.

A FRESNO county man wants a thoroughbred stallion to breed on shares. See the advertisement.

ONE of the recent rules of the Jockey Club is that a jockey under suspension shall not be permitted to ride for anyone.

WM. C. WHITNEY has purchased of Col. Jack Chinn the horse Lissak, seven years old, by Loyalist. The price was $7,000.

DR. E. S. CARR and Capt. J. B. Malone have purchased from J. J. McCafferty, Gotham, by Iroquois—Trede Wind, by Great Tom:

PRESIDENT THOS. H. WILLIAMS of the California Jockey Club was at the Bennings races last Monday as a guest of President Howland.

DIGGS seems to be of some account still. He finished second to that good sprinter, Ahuse, in the Inaugural Handicap at New Orleans Thursday.

GRAY should take a rest until he fully recovers from his accident. His riding during the past few days is certainly far below what he is capable of.

CROMWELL ran a wonderfully good race Saturday, in strong contrast to his last previous effort, when it took his life to finish fourth in a haud of dogs.

J. F. CLARK, racing judge at Newmarket, England, died on October 16th in his 83rd year. He had been many years a racing official of the English Jockey Club.

"VIRGINIA" CARROLL has sickened of what to him has been a losing game, and leaves Saturday for New Orleans. Good luck this cut in may change his mind.

THE Wheeling Jockey Club has announced that it will begin an outlaw meeting at Wheeling, W. Va., beginning next Saturday, and to continue throughout the winter.

JUDGE CARTER'S place in the stand at Oakland is being temporarily filled by Mr. Price. It is probable that Mr. Williams will appoint a new man on his return from the East.

THE Nashville meeting closed last Saturday. It was run at a financial loss, but the encouragement was sufficient to induce Messrs. Parmer, etc., to announce a meeting for next fall.

HARRY LOWDEN compiled the catalogue of the Spreckels yearlings, and did a good piece of work. All the information necessary is given and the tabulations are complete and correct.

THE Cambridge Stable seems to be winning its fair share of races of late. Trainer Murray has his charges in the pink of condition and gets money every time he sends one of them to the post.

BERNARDILLO has now exhausted about every excuse for being beaten; his latest exploit was to be overcome by an attack of blind staggers, which caused his rider to pull him up after running in the lead for half a mile.

CALIFORNIA is not the only place where thoroughbreds are selling at low prices. In Kentucky last week eighty-four head of broodmares, many of them royally bred, were sold for $8,000, an average of less than $100 per head.

COL. DAN, that good looking counterfeit of the Burns & Waterhouse string, is about as bad a horse as a person could find in many days' journey. It is a peculiar thing about the get of Salvator that the sorrels are no account, but the bays are generally fair.

THOS. M. CROFT has been appointed racing secretary to the Brighton Beach Racing Association. In the days of Monmouth Park Mr. Croft was very well known, and as he thoroughly understands the duties of a secretary his selection is a most happy one.

POWELL'S ride on Lady Brittenic will gain him no laurels if the boy was trying to win he should be set down for incompetency; but from the grand stand it certainly looked as if Powell willfully pulled his mount both in the backstretch and going round the turn.

O'CONNELL, the old sprinter, seems to have gained his old time form; in his six last starts at Chicago he was five times first and once second. While he has dickey legs, he is just now about as good as he ever was.

DEL SHERLAND, the jockey killed by a racing accident at Nashville Wednesday of last week, claimed Crown Point, Ind., as his home. He was quite a promising lightweight rider and had been engaged for next year by the Canadian turfmen. J. E. Seagram.

WHOEVER bestowed the name of "Cheated" on the two-year-old which started in the last race on Saturday must have possessed of a keen sense of humor; the mere mention of the colt's name sufficing to remind the owner of what occurred when he acquired possession of the animal.

SQUEAK ALLMARK is in trouble at Bennings on account of a bad ride on Baby Bill in a steeplechase won by White Garters. The stewards suspended him for the meeting, refused the entries of the horse, and referred the case to the National Hunt and Steeplechase Association.

JOCKEY O'LEARY, who recently met with a serious accident at Bennings, is up and about again and will make his appearance in the saddle at the New Orleans meeting in a couple of weeks. He is under contract to George Bennet and will do all the Memphis turfman's riding next season.

THE management of the Crescent City Jockey Club at New Orleans, have adopted a rule that badges will not be good on days when stakes are to be run for, and everybody will be required to pay 50 cents admission. The rule was in vogue during the last years's meeting, and is said to have worked satisfactorily.

N. TURNER took no chance with Hugh Penny, but pulled his hat a few yards from the wire and rode him out. If some of the other jockeys would follow his example in this respect the public would be duly grateful. Several races have been thrown away during the past few days through over-confidence of the jockey.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A local turf writer says: "Father Bill Daly talks of sending a section of his stable to New Orleans. The season has been rather a rough one for him, and a chance to win out the winter's expenses cannot be passed by. Moreover, it means a chance to develop some of the riders who are attached to the stable.

THE winning sire list on the English turf reads: Galopin, £21,958; Bona Vista, £15,554; Gallinule, £15,354; Ayrshire, £14,827; St. Simon, £14,683; Donovan, £13,046; St. Serf, £10,680; Janissary, £10,311; Common, £10,053; Enthusiast. £9,372; Martagon, £8,710; Amphion, £8,641; Hampton (dead), £8,317; Crowherry, £8,316; Sheen, £7,951; Bend Or, £7,108.

MR. EDWIN F. SMITH, the new presiding judge at Ingleside, is to be highly commended for the able and efficient manner in which the duties of his position have been administered during the past two weeks. Everything has moved along without the slightest friction, and his decisions, which in some cases have required a wonderfully quick eye, have in no case been questioned

AT the second day's racing of the Derby November meeting today Colonel Paget's four-year-old bay filly, Waterhen, won the Derby Cup. Mr. Fairle's Enthusiastic was second and Golden Bridge third. This race is of 2,000 sovereigns (200 sovereigns in plate and the remainder in specie); a handicap for three-year-olds and upward. Twenty horses ran over the straight mile.

THE colt Leiter that won at Ingleside last Thursday is the first of Piccolo's get to win. Piccolo was a highly bred imported horse that a few years back ran many good races over the Chicago tracks. Hayden & Walters brought him to California and won over the old Bay District track in 1894. By Petrarch—Lady Grace, he might prove a valuable sire if given a fair chance.

WE have called the Association's attention several times to the touting evil, but it still goes merrily on. If a stranger appears on the track you can see the pests circle around him like buzzards around carrion. As a rule they work in pairs and in the most barefaced manner, seemingly in no fear of punishment. The tribe is being constantly increased and unless the two jockey clubs do something to remedy the evil the sport will suffer no one can say how much.

MR. A. D. PAYNE, of the Annita Stud Farm, Charlottesville, Va., has recently made the following sales of thoroughbreds to "Curly" Brown, the well known starter and owner: Merry Day, ch c, 3, by Eolus, out of Mermaid, by imp. S. Blaise; Annie Payne, ch f, 2, by imp. The Jacobite or Jim Gray, out of Vigilette, dam of Artillery, by Eolus; Chat of Me, ch f, 3, by imp. Charaxus, dam Ninone, by Eolus, and Jack Gay, ch c, 2, full brother to Chet of Me.

THE sale of the stallion, imp. Lord Esterling, and broodmares, the property of Mr. E. S. Carr and Col. S. D. Bruce, was announced for Saturday last at G. D. Wilson's stable, in Lexington. Col. John Walsh was the auctioneer. The stock was owned in partnership by Messrs. Bruce & Carr, and hence each was at liberty to bid. A few of the broodmares were offered, but as they sold for very low prices their sale was stopped, the partners agreeing to divide the mares, each taking one alternately. The stallion was then offered. He was bought by Colonel Bruce for $1,200, Mr. O. H. Chenault, acting for Mr. Carr, being the only other bidder.

JOCKEY SIMMS is in the hottest sort of hot water at Bennings, says a special to the Globe-Democrat. Thursday he was fined $200, suspended for the balance of the meeting, his badge taken up and the case reported to the jockey club for further action; all because he knocked down Mr. Menges, the proprietor of the Sensation Stable. Simms says Mr. Menges put him on Tremargo when the horse was lame and unfit to race, and to make matters worse said he (Simms) had pulled the horse. When he heard this Simms could not control his temper and took the law into his own hands. It is quite possible the jockey club may withhold his license next year.

THE selling price of yearlings put up at auction in California seems to be steadily on the decrease. It is pretty hard to sell colts and fillies at an average of one hundred dollars a head. Now when a breeder of thoroughbreds comes to figure up he finds, selling at that price, that he is breeding and caring for the animals at a loss. Mr. Haggin of the Rancho del Paso taking the bull by the horns forwarded a consignment of fillies to England which brought splendid prices, and emboldened by the success of his first venture intends to send over one hundred and fifty more, the cream of the ranch. There is no other breeding establishment in the United States that sends as many winners annually to the post as the Haggin's Ranch, and if he sends his yearlings over the pond it will be a distinct loss to the American Turf.

TOM COLLINS is one of the most consistent and useful racing machines of the present season. A good two-year-old last year, he won several races, including a dash of five-eighths in 1:00¾, the record at Harlem, from a field of the the best two-year-olds in the West. This year he started twenty-seven times. He was returned a winner of thirteen races and has only been four times outside the money and three times third, including three stakes, in a campaign that began at Nashville and extended around the circuit to Chicago, East and back to Latonia, and at present still remains in the pink of racing form. It is interesting to note that Tom Collins is the first foal of his dam, Malada, a young mare by imp. Glenelg that has already scored such a success as a sire of valuable broodmares. Malada is a full sister to Manola (dam of Protection, winner of the Junior Champion, etc.), and is in foal to the great Hanover.—Whip & Spur.

IN reference to the close of racing at Roby, Ind., the Chicago Inter-Ocean says aptly: "There are some horsemen who will not be able to get anywhere. They will stay at Roby in company with the limited number who remain from choice. It is unfortunate that there are a number of men with horses which have not earned enough to enable them to ship, and whose credit is exhausted. In some instances luck has been against the men, but in the majority of cases their misfortunes are of their own making, and the sooner they are starved out of the racing business the better it will be for them. Each year they find a discarded horse on which they are able to get badges, and they manage to beg, borrow or steal enough to live on, ending the season as they began it. Every race track has just such characters, and the sooner the associations find some means of barring this class from their grounds the better it will be for all concerned. Most of these men could get work as rubbers and stable men, but they consider such work beneath them."

THE sensation which Mr. Tod Sloan made in England led naturally to an interest in his early life. Information on that subject was freely supplied by some humorist, who has skillfully studied the methods of Charles Bancroft Dillingham. He gave more picturesque information about American celebrities to the London press than any person who preceded him. But the facts of Tod Sloan's earlier career came from some genius who will make it necessary for Mr. Dillingham to look to his reputation. This account was to one of the London daily papers: "On a bright spring morning in 1875, a Mrs. Blouser of Kokomo, U. S. A., heard a scratching at her kitchen door. Thinking it was her dog, she opened it, and there, perched on the doorstep and playing with a large black cat, she espied a tiny atom of a boy. He was clothed in rags and appeared cold and hungry, and Mrs. Blouser took him into the house. When she asked him where his mother was, Mrs. Blouser says, his eyes filled with tears, and said, 'Out there'." Mrs. Blouser of Kokomo, U. S. A. disappears from the narrative early, but there are many touches worthy of the hand that invented her. That Sloan's income is $10,000 a year in this country, that he pays $50 a day for his rooms at a London hotel, travels with thirty-eight trunks, a valet, a private secretary and two other men who look after his business interests and pave out weekly $700 in tips and salaries are other interesting facts about his life which are revealed.—N. Y. Sun.

THE opening gun of the racing season of 1899 has been fired by the Brooklyn Jockey Club, which publishes in the issue of the Racing Calendar of Nov. 17th the entries to a number of important two-year-old stakes for 1899, including the Great American, the Tremont, the Expectation, the Hudson, the Criterion, and the Junior Champion. The showing is a most excellent one in the matter of numbers and in the comparative new-comers who have made nominations. The last is one of the most important two-year-old events on the calendar, and will be run the first day of the Autumn meeting, 1899. It has received 170 nominations, 33 more than were received for the Great American Stakes. Richard Croker is represented by two colts by Dobbins, and W. H. Clerk nominates an even half dozen, each by a different sire. J. R. & F. P. Keene are represented by five—four by Domino and one by Tournament. H. E. Leigh, who intends racing extensively in the East next season, nominates five—two by Kingston and one by Irondale. Charles Fleischmann's Sons have the largest number of entries—nine. W. C. Eustis is represented by four, C. T. Patterson by four, E. O. Pepper by six, J. E. Madden by eight, and Sydney Paget by eight. August Belmont, P. J. Dwyer and W. C. Eustis have all their entries named, and so have several others who have only one or two entries. The first are more noticeable as their entries are more numerous, showing that they have lost no time in claiming names.

Prof. Bowhill as an Author.

All the readers of the Breeder and Sportsman will remember Prof. Thos. Bowhill, who formerly resided in this city, and whose contributions to the columns of this paper on veterinary matters were during the time not only frequent, but highly instructive to all interested in the breeding or care of live stock. Prof. Bowhill resigned the professorship of Bacteriology in the Veterinary Department of the California State University to return to his former home in Scotland, since which time he has completed a work that has attracted the attention of the scientific world. Through the kindness of Mr. John H. McKerron, of this city, we are enabled to copy the following notice of Dr. Bowhill's work from The North British Agriculturist:

Manual of Bacteriological Technique and Special Bacteriology. By Thomas Bowhill, F. R. C. V. S., F. R. P. S., Edinburgh, late Professor of Becteriology, Veterinary Department, University of California. With 100 original illustrations. Edinburgh: Oliver & Boyd; London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co.—This work is remarkable, if not absolutely unique, alike in regard to the mass of information it contains and the super-excellence of the original illustrations with which it is embellished. The author has long made a special study of bacteriological science, and as early as 1891 he proved the identity of the germs of swine fever in the United Kingdom with the bacteria of hog cholera in the United States of America. He has worked in the laboratory of Dr. Gunther, who is incontestably the most eminent bacteriologist of the present day. The illustrations with which the book is embellished are most admirably executed in colotype from photomicrographs executed by the author by means of the Zeiss apparatus, are works of art such as are rarely produced out of Germany. Alike in regard to the letterpress and the illustrations, the book is a monument to the transcendent ability of the author. As Mr. Bowhill is not only a bacteriologist of outstanding ability, but a veterinary expert as well, he has naturally given prominence to the subject of bacteria which cause disease in human beings and farm live stock, but the bacteria of soil and milk have also received due attention at his hands. The interest which these bacteriological researches have for stock owners may be estimated by the fact that the bacteria dealt with include those found in inflammation and suppuration, and those which give rise to such diseases as anthrax, tetanus (lockjaw), glanders, tuberculosis, influenza, pleuro, foot and mouth disease, &c. The Bacillus Acidi Lactici which Scottish Cheddar-makers are now using pure cultures of in their regular dairy operations, are fully dealt with, as also dozens of other bacilli found in milk, some of which bacilli cause "ropiness," others cause "sleepy cream," others cause bloody color, and so on. The soil bacteria—Nitroso Bacteria, Nitro Bacteria, Bacillus Tuberigenus, Rhizobium Legumenosarom, Bacillus Radicicola, &c.—have their appearance and functions described, together with directions as to how the agriculturist may best assist these co-workers of his in the discharge of their functions. Altogether this is a most remarkable work, and to the bacteriologist, the medical man, the aspirant for the degree in Public Health, and the veterinarian, it should be not only useful in the highest degree, but absolutely indispensable.

Finally Won by Salisbury.

It will be remembered that some years ago H. S. Henry, owner then of the Penn Valley Farm, Morrisville, New York, sued Monroe Salisbury for the money he had paid for the mare May Day, alleging that she was twenty-two years old, when bought, instead of eighteen, as stated in the catalogue. The case was tried and resulted in a victory of Mr. Henry, the Supreme Court of New York, Justice Giegerich on the bench, giving him a verdict for the amount claimed. The case was then carried to the appellate branch of that court and has of late been decided in favor of Mr. Salisbury, the decision of Justice Giegerich being reversed. This decision, we believe, rested on the condition of sale imposed by the holders of the auction at which the mare changed hands. That condition read: "Ages and heights of horses are approximated by owners and are believed to be correct, but are not guaranteed." The statement was made in the catalogue that May Day was foaled in 1874, but Mr. Henry alleged, as his cause of action, that she was foaled in 1870, which as the sale was held in 1892, made her twenty-two instead of eighteen. The price at which Mr. Henry bid in the old mare was $4,000, for which he gave Mr. Salisbury his note. He secured possession of the note on payment of $3,000 and sued Mr. Salisbury for that amount, plus interest and other charges, for which Justice Giegerich gave him a verdict. It seems that the sum of $3,000 was paid after the entering of a suit to enforce collection of the note, in the Court of Common Pleas in Philadelphia, but that the suit never came to trial. Altogether the facts in the case seem to be a good deal mixed, the only thing clear being that Mr. Salisbury finally won out and the ground for his victory was the condition quoted above.—Chicago Horseman.

James Butler, of New York, who purchased Klatawah, will drive him some on the Speedway this winter. With Klatawah and Directum Kelly both in good shape next year, he will be able to pull down his share of the purses on the grand circuit.

About $300,000 was paid for harness horses at W. B. Easig's big sale in New York, which closed this week. This is one of the greatest sales ever held and the average amount received per head was large.

Blue Grass Notes.

[American Stock Farm.]

Major H. C. McDowell's great two-year-old filly Ecstasy, 2:10½, by Baron Wilkes, out of the dam of Impetuous, 2:13, has not only proved that she is a pacer of the highest class, but is also now showing that she is somewhat of a trotter as well. After taking the world's record for two-year-old pacers at the fall meeting of the K. T. H. B. A., Mr Marvin took her to Ashland Park Stock Farm and concluded that he would try and convert her to the trot. She seems to take to the diagonal trot nicely, and he has been working her at that way of going ever since. A few days ago he concluded to speed her to the half, and she forthwith showed the veteran record-maker that she was very speedy by trotting the half-mile in 1:07 flat. It is said that she is a beautifully gaited trotter, and with the speed she possesses her very fast pacing record will surely prove no handicap to her as a race horse in future.

Mr. R. P. Fox, Jr., of Richmond, has the most precocious young trotters that we have yet heard of and is the best and fastest one that has yet appeared at that famous nursery of colt trotters. It is a bay colt, six months old, by Dr. Hooker, 2:23¾, dam by Sentinel Wilkes; second dam by Wilkes Boy, 2:24½; third dam (dam of Patchen Lass), by Grey Eagle. This colt has only been led seven times, and a few days ago Mr. Fox led him an eighth in 0:18. A number of good judges witnessed the performance and pronounced the colt the best and fastest ever bred or trained in Madison county.

Congressman J. W. Bailey's good stallion Electric Bel, son of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells, that Charles Marvin has been handling since the stud season was over, will be wintered at Ashland Park Stock Farm and looked after by Mr. Marvin. Electric Bel has two new standard performers to his credit this year in the black stallion Belay, a handsome fellow owned by Miller & Sibley, that took his record at the Lexington track this summer, and the pacer Sib, 2:20. Electric Bel had a good season in the stud, and served a number of very high-class mares.

The cold, rainy weather that began here on Monday night will, in all probability, mark the closing of the Lexington track to trainers for the winter. For the past few weeks there has been scarcely any work done over it, save by a few young things that the boys have been educating, as all of the season's campaigners have been sent to their homes or retired from active training.

The sale of thoroughbreds owned by Messrs. Bruce & Carr, of New York City, that was begun at Horseman's Headquarters, in this city, last Saturday afternoon, was discontinued after a few sales had been made, owing to the small crowd of buyers in attendance and the low prices realized. The gentlemen divided the horses equally between themselves.

Answers to Correspondents.

Subscriber, Napa, Cal.—Will you have the kindness to inform me through your answers to correspondents how much the turns of a track ought to be thrown up when the stretches are 660 feet long, 40 feet wide and 25 feet apart from the inside rail, making a track of a little over three eights of a mile. What would be the length of such a track and how far are race tracks measured from the inside rail? I live among the hills and this is the best I can do. One stretch will be downhill slightly and the other up, but I will have straight stretches of an eight of a mile. Will not this be sufficient to train a two-year-old on? Answer—There is a rule governing the throwing up of the turns of any track. It depends upon the curve of the track, and the speed which it is desired to make; the greater the speed the more throwing up will be needed. A rise of one foot in ten at the center of the curve will be about right. Tracks are usually measured three feet from the inside rail. The only way to get the exact length of your track is to measure it. An eighth of a mile stretch will be long enough to send your colt at speed at first. The best trainers believe in short brushes for two-year-olds.

Veterinarians Know Its Use.

Pomona, Cal., June 7, 1897.

Since I have practiced my profession (Veterinary Surgeon) in this place I have had occasion to prescribe your "Gombault's Caustic Balsam," contrary to my usual method of practice, which is to avoid the use or recommendation of any proprietary medicine, but experience has shown me its value. When I came here in '93 the remedy was unknown. I think if I can make some arrangement with you for an exclusive agency for this community I can push the sale of the same in a way that will be highly satisfactory to you and profitable to myself. If you will come to some understanding with me, please advise me of the terms you are willing to give.

Chardon, O.

Gentlemen:—I have used your Continental Ointment with very gratifying results. As a convenient and effective remedy for healing of wounds or sores, for softening feet and growing hair, I think it has no equal.

The American Steel & Wire Co. have recently opened an immense warehouse at 225 Fremont street. Mr. Geo. H. Ismon, the agent in charge, is one of the progressive men of the age, and has made a close study of the wants of the local market. This is particularly so in regard to the matter of such fencing as is adapted to the wants of fine stock ranges. He recommends as a suitable fence the "Elwood All Steel Woven Wire Fence." This fence is in every way practical, easy of construction, not dangerous, durable and cheap. See the advertisement of the "Elwood" in this paper.

Young Willie Applegate is again in New York. Applegate is the young man whose rather sudden departure for Europe a few months ago was noted in the various newspapers at the time. He had not done anything that called for an outburst of indignation on the part of the newspapers, but his actions were commented upon rather freely. The particular point in connection with young Applegate's departure for Europe, which was regarded as being irregular, was the fact that he left a few markers with certain bookmakers. But Willie has made good, and that is more than can be said of some gentleman who are now making daily attempts to 'shoo in' horses by virtue of a bluff in the betting ring. Young Applegate overplayed himself without intending to do so, but when he left Paris he lost no time in cabling the exact situation to his father, who owns a few racetracks and distilleries in Kentucky. The old gentleman didn't have to settle all of Willie's markers, however for the young man came back with a bunch of money of his own.—N. Y. Telegraph.

James Smith, who owns Homestake, ran Rey del Tierra up five hundred and the action aroused the ire of Bill Murry, the portly trainer of Cambridge Stable. He made a pass at Smith, but before he could do any damage he was taken in hand by some of his friends and very willingly allowed himself to be walked to the paddock to cool out. The judge fined Murry $200 for his fun.

The tract of land known as the Muir place has been added to Mr. J. B. Haggin's Elmendorf farm. The addition to Elmendorf is the track of land immediately in front and across the pike from it, and embraces 614 acres. This makes the Elmendorf estate comprise something over a thousand acres. There are no buildings on the Muir place, and the price paid is understood to be $100 an acre.

HENRY HELLMAN, who for the past two years has had charge of the Hollister track, hes given np his lease end moved his stahle of horses to San Jose.

STAR POINTER, 1:59¼, sold for $15,000 insteed of $19,000 as the telegraph reported last week. Mr. Murphy paid $16,-500 for the chempion when he bonght him.

METEOR, 2:17½, by Commodore Belmont, who took his record last year at the age of eighteen, stepped in 2:20 in a rece over e helf-mile track the pest season in Oregon.

THE registration fee for horses over two years of age is now $4. People who have stock nnder two yeers eligible to registery should enter them hefore January 1st and seve 50 per cent.

HENRY SANDERS, of Cleveland, hes leased the racing qualities of Ronzano, by Charles Derhy, dam hy Steinway, second dem, the dam of Derby Princess, 2:08½, end will campeign her next year. This seeson as a three-year-old she showed a mile in 2:16.

L. C. WELTER, of Alemeda connty, has a three-yeer-old colt hy Direct that gives evidence of heing another candidete for his sire's 2:20 list. He is only jnst hroken hnt shows speed already.

MYRON MCHENRY is expected to arrive in Pleasenton hefore long to begin work in conjnnction with T. E. Keating on a string of good ones to he cemgaigned over the eestern circnits in 1899.

WM. MURRAY and Richard Ables of Pleesanton visited Oekwood Park Farm lest week and report having seeo some wonderfnl exhibitions of speed by the green colts jnst being broken to herness.

MARCUS DALY has nurchesed some grandly bred mares et the fall seles for his farm in Montana. His latest nurchase is the donble-gaited mere Addie De, with a trotting record of 2:25¾ and a pecing record of 2:10½. She is hy Nntwood and will he hred to Prodigel.

C. E. NEWMAN drove his roen mare Maud, by Anteeo, Jr., a mile ont over the speed track in the park one day last week on a wager for "two small bottles" with a friend to beat 2:20. The mile wss made in 2:18 flat, the last half in 1:08 and the last querter in 0:31½. Maud pulled a four-wheeled "bike" huggy on this occesion, which makes the performance an extra good one for a roadster.

A RACE meeting ceme off et the little town of Sebastopol in Sonoma connty one day last week. "Slattery's Pacer" and "Pat Carroll's Dewey" are credited hy the local paper with winning the herness events.

JAMES SULLIVAN will probably trein Col. Perk Henshaw's string of harness horses at Pleasenton. He will not get to work with them nntil after the holideys, however. The horses are now running ont at Chico.

THE Overland Trotting and Running Associetion, Denver, Col , will give a hig meeting et the opening of next season, when even greater racing then was witnessed this yeer will he provided for the sport-loving public.

AMONG the new edditions to the string owned by Messrs. Keeting & Crellin, of Pleasenton, are two green yonngsters by Chas. Derhy, thet were recently nurchesed from Oekwood Perk Farm. They ere said to be very promising.

CARVALLO, a three-yeer-old hey gelding by Dexter Prince ont of Carrie C., by Electioneer, sold for $975 et the Fasig sale lest week. This gelding was sold as e two-yeer-old hy Palo Alto Stock Farm at Fesig's Clevelend sele last yeer for $425.

BARON WILKES end Brown Hel are the only stellions that heve sired two pacers with records of 2:05 or better. The first named sired Bnmps, 2:04½, and Rnbenstein 2:05, while the Hal horse has sired Star Pointer, 1:59¼ and Hal Dillard, 2:04¾.

NZERETTA, 2:16½, es e three-veer-old is the only one of the get of Neernnt 2:12½, that has ever been treined. Neernnt is bnt seven yeers old end no yonng sire in California has more promise of being e great speed producer. He is owned by Geo. W. Ford of Sante Ana.

SIDANE, bay mere, by Sidney, ont of Addie S., by Steinway, took a record of 2:23¾, this year over a helf mile treck in New York State this year. Sidene was bred to Simmocolon in 1891 and prodnced Meridan, 2:12¾. She was never hred again and was sold East.

A DEATH previonsly nnreported was thet of Byerly Abdallah, the well-known son of Mambrino Patchen and Lady Ayres, which occnrred al Mecnon, Ill., last summer at the age of twenty-four. He sired ten standard performers, headed by Jerome Turner, 2:15½.

CAPT. E. N. CHESTER died in New York, November 16th, et the ege of 52 years. He wes well-known as a catelogne compiler for W. B. Fesig & Company and as e writer on turf subjects. He was e brother to W. T. Chester, well known es Griffin, of the Turf, Field end Ferm.

B. O. VAN BOKKELEN returned from his Eastern trip last week. He sent Wayland W., 2:12½, to Enreka from here by steamer, consigned to his owner, Alex. Connick. Weyland W. was teken sick soon efter leaving Californie on the trip East and was unable to start dnring the whole season.

ACCORDING to a recent dispetch from Carson City, Nev., Miss Bsgwill, the femele jockey, has received en offer from en Eastern horseman to ride for him next season. She rides under the name of Emma Archer, end is seid to hold driver's license No. 4,294 in the National Trotting Associetion.

JOHN R. GENTRY (2:00½), elways known as the "hendsome horse," won the blne ribbon at the National horse show. While Star Pointer can outrace Gentry, he does not compere with him as a show horse, end James Murphy evidently nnderstood this, for he would not parede Pointer et the gerden.

SULPHIDE, 2:09½, as a three year-old, died et Denver last week while nndergoing an operation for perelysis of the larynx. He was bred by Du Bois Bros. of Denver end sired by Snperior. His dem was the trotting mare Meggie H, 2:28½, the dam of the pecer Cerbonate, 2:09 Sulphide was five years old.

CONSIDERING the limited herness recing held in California this yeer there was a very large proportion of new 2:30 ner formers developed in the State dnring the seeson, and with the resnmption of the regnlar circnit in 1899, there will he a greeter nnmber of new ones in the list et the close of the season then ever before.

BRAD H. DU BOIS, Denver, Col. asked the district conrt a few days ago for an order compelling the Northwestern Association of Trotting and Pacing Horse Breeders, which snit him on a debt for entering horses in the East, to separate its canses of action. This was denied, and Du Bois was given fifteen days to pleed.

E. H. HARRIMAN, the owner of Stamboul, nurchased at the Fasig sale the bay mare Mabel Medium, by Happy Medium. This mere cost A. H. Moore $2,500 a few years ago. She is bred very mnch like the dam of Stam B , 2:11, and Mr. Herriman will breed her to Stemboul, hoping to get another as good as Stam B.

SAM GAMBLE arrived in New York with Directnm November 28th, and the chempion stallion was exhibited et Madison Square Garden that evening at the beginning of the sale of the consignment from Spiers Stock Farm, where he will be loceted. The greet horse attrected lots of attention, and was in snperb condition.

THE anctioneer who knocked down Star Pointer for $15,000 week before last in New York may have worked his jaws considerably to get the $15,000 he sold for, bnt a large portion of the pnblic has worked its jaws to enable the new owner of the horse to pay thet price. J. W. White, who nurchased the horse, is the mannfacturer of a popnlar brand of chewing gnm.

DEL NORTE, 2:04¾, the gnidless pacer, has a race record of 2:08. When he wes campaigned on the California circnit he often showed two-minnte speed for a qnarter end went halves in his work in 1:00. There are many who thought he wonld have been e two minnte horse in the hands of e first-class trainer. Ed Moshier who is now handling him is doing better by the horse then eny of his previous trainers.

THE noted hackney stallion Royal Standard, that created a sensation at the Chicago Horse Show last year, has been sold hy his owners, Graham Brothers, of Claremont, Ont., to A. and W. Montgomery, of Scotland. The price qnoted is $7,000. Royal Standard wes hred in Ireland, and imported to Canada three years ago. The Grahams have honght the hackney stallion Lord Roseberry hy Lord Derby, ont of a mere by Denmark.

MONROE SALISBURY was at the Sntherlend farm neer Pleasanton e few days ego looking at the youngsters working there. He was particnlerly interested in the colts hy Direct, 2:05½, and donbtless longed for the good old times to come back egain when he was ready to metch the little bleck rascal ageinst any horse in the world. Mr. Sntherland is working some extre fine colts at his farm, by Direct, Dieblo, James Medison end other well-known sires.

OSITO, 2:14½, by McKinney, is as neer perfection in form end trotting action as any trotter ever foaled. He is bnt 14.3 hands high, hnt is a model in form end style. He was reised in the monntains were the feed was not of the best, which accounts for his lack of size. Bnt he is all horse. Chas A. Dorfee, who owns his sire, says Osito is the gemest horse he ever pulled a line over, end believes he can defeat eny horse in the world twenty miles ont. Osito is Spenish for cnb or little hear.

WHEN esked if he wonld rece Bingen egein this yeer Henry Titer seid: "I know as little ehont it es enyone, Mr. Forbes will make eny decision he wents to, hnt I sincerely hope he will return him to the training department. I firmly believe thet if Bingen is kept ont of the stnd, and no accident befalls him, thet he will surely hold all trotting records in 1899—thet is, if a new horse does not heet him. He ie sonnd es the dey he was foeled, end he will make e grand trotter next year."

A PRIZE of $300 wes offered for pacers of the 2:06 cless by the New York Horse Show, the horses to he judged by their pedigrees, individnelity and racing qnalities as shown hy performence, to he shown to wegon, winner to take ell. The entries were John R. Gentry, with Billy Andrews np; Direct, with John R. Kelly in the wagon, end Klataweh, shown hy W. H. Soyder. The three stallions were hitched to the latest style Caffrey speed wagons, end they mede a pleasing end ettractive appeerence. Gentry wes ewarded the first prize, while Direct secnred a red end Klatawah e yellow ribhon.

THE week point ehont ell rnles which attempt to prevent leying np of heats is that the hest trotting horse expert in America cannot for the life of him tell in e field of e dozen trotters or pacers which horses ere heing driven to lose. Of conrse there ere some horses so well known thet those who ere ecqnainted with their speed and gait know to e second or two ehont where they will trot, hnt en ertistic driver cen fool the hest judge thet ever stood over e wire. If heet betting is eholished there will he no further controversy over the question of "laying np," and trotting will have teken a long step forwerd.

THERE ie a probebility thet the old dispnte ebont the nse of hopples in harness rscing is to he revived again, for since the Netionel Trotting Association decided last yeer to do ewey with the nse of the hopple efter a stated time, a number of owners who will be hnrt hy the loss of this aid to a mixed gaited horse heve been busy in en endeavor to work np sympathy in fevor of the device. The impression seems to be gaining grnnd thet the rnle against the nse of hopples shonld not he mandatory, bnt left to the discretion of the association over whose track the horse who needs hopples is to rnn.—N. Y. Times.

CRESCEUS, 2:09¾, the stellion thet sold for $14,000 et the Fasig sale in New York is a magnificent specimen of the American trotting horse—a big, rangy chestnnt, with e heed and neck thet cansed nniversal admiretion from horsemen. He is by that sterling sire, Robert McGregor, who died a few weeks ago, and dnring his racing career he has improved steadily, winning last year the Champion Stakes, beeting the best horses on the trrf. Mike Bowermen sterted the bidding at $5,000, end Frank Gorton, the Chicego horseman, raised the hid to $8,000. By degrees the price was raised to $13,500, bid hy Frank Gorton, and an additional $500 secnred the champion for a representative of the Kelemezoo Stock Ferm of Kalemezoo, Mich.

THE stallion Prince Airlie, hy Gny Wilkes, thet Mr. Gardner F. Williams of Kimberley nnrchased at the dispersel sele of the San Mateo Stock Farm last spring, was shipped to Sonth Africa last month. It will he remembered that Mr. Williams tried to nnrchase a matched team while here in San Francisco, hut failed to find one thet snited him. A friend fonnd them in New York, however. They were black mares by a son of Jay Goold and ont of mares hy a grandson of Patrick Henry. They look so mnch alike that it is hard to tell one from the other. Prince Airlie onght to do mnch for the improvement of the blood of South African horses, es he is e well bred member of the great Wilkes family.

A. B. RODMAN is down from Woodland for a few days. Mr Rodmen called at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN one day this week, and when the fact that Myron McHenry was coming to California was mentioned, said he would be mighty glad to see him as he was an old time acqnaintance of the well known driver. "Years ago, said he, when McHenry was younger than he is now, I saw him drive a race against Peter V. Johnson, the veteran driver. Johnston won and McHenry remarked as he alighted from the sulky, 'Johnston heat me elthongh he had the slowest horse. His snperior driving did it.' McHenry was a pretty fair driver himself then, hnt he wes ready to acknowledge another superiority and to profit by the lesson it taught.

San Francisco, Saturday, December 3, 1898.

THE BREEDING SEASON OF 1899 is fast approaching. Within the next two months owners must decide what mares they will breed and to what stallions they will be mated. If there is any one thing that the past few years of hard times and low prices in the harness horse market has thoroughly demonstrated, it is the fact that indiscriminate breeding does not pay. Every man who has taken any interest whatever in horse breeding knows that it was the breeding of every mare that had a trotting or pacing cross in her pedigree, without regard to size, color, style or condition, that filled the market with a lot of horses fit for nothing, but offered as "trotting stock," and this helped to make the hard times still harder with horse breeders. The American trotter has weathered the hard times, however, and is again resuming his old position as the popular horse of this country. Prices are looking up and advancing, but buyers now demand value received for their money. Any old thing tracing to a trotting or pacing stallion or mare will not do. The buyer demands a horse first, a pedigree afterwards. This being the condition of affairs, breeders should take warning by the past and breed with discretion next season. Mares that have been mated with good horses and failed to produce saleable foals should not be bred again, unless to a jack or a draught stallion. Stallions that fail to get size, style or speed, and whose colts are not in demand at any price, should not be patronized by those who are aiming to breed race or road horses. The only safe rule is to breed the best to the best, and not to forget that this is the plan that pays the biggest profits. If you are breeding for speed, mate mares that have speed, or have produced speed, or are from speed families, to stallions having the same qualifications. Never patronize any horse simply because his services can be had at a low price. This plan never did and never will pay. Pick out the very best individuals you have and breed for size and style and good looks, as well as speed. Don't imagine for a minute that the boom in trotters is going to sell at a big price everything you can raise. The horses that are selling for big prices are the best, and if you will stop to think a moment, you will recollect that this class never went begging for buyers. The woods are full of inferior horses and no matter how scarce high-class horses may get, there will never be a time when the farmer can make any money raising the other kind.

CONSTANT AGITATION by the horse and other live stock breeders of California is necessary to make the agricultural fairs of 1899 successes from every point of view. It is an unfortunate fact that there are some very lethargic directors in a few of the agricultural districts of this State and that they need a great deal of "prodding," and "stirring up" to get them around to that spirit of energy which amounts to enthusiasm and is absolutely necessary to make a district fair a complete success. In view of this state of things, it might be well for live stock breeders, fruit growers and agriculturists to organize in their districts and start the fair ball rolling by agreeing to make exhibits, at the same time offering suggestions to the fair directors in regard to the premiums to be offered and classes provided. Those who raise stock to sell can well afford to do this, and all who are striving to improve the live stock or any of the agricultural or horticultural products of the State, will find that a good exhibit will be a money maker as well as an instructor for all concerned. There is no doubt but the appropriations will be made for these exhibits and it remains with those most vitally interested to say whether they shall be given in a proper manner or not. Every district in the State should be at work now preparing for the fair of 1899. Boards of Trade, Business Men's Organizations, Merchants' Associations and all kindred bodies organized for the advancement of communities will find a splendid field for effective work in aiding and booming their district fairs. Let the good work begin at once.

IN OUR ISSUE of last week an item referring to a case in a Sonoma county court in which the ownership of the mare Roblet was an issue, stated that the executor of the estate of the late Isaac De Turk claimed that no sale of the mare had ever been made to the late John Rogers. This was an error. Mr. Lumsden, the executor of the De Turk estate made no such claim. He sold the mare to Mr. Rogers and held a chattled mortgage on the animal. The Public Administrator of the county applied for letters of administration on Mr. Roger's estate and the Court last Monday refused the application as no evidence was introduced to show that Mr. Rogers did not have a last will and testament, which must be shown before letters can be issued.

VOLUME VII. of the American Stud Book has reached this office through the courtesy of its publisher, The Jockey Club. The new volume has been anxiously looked for for some time, and since its arrival has been on the shelf but a few minutes at a time. The Stud Book is an absolute necessity on every thoroughbred breeding farm. The seventh volume is published just as it was compiled by Col. Bruce, that being one of the conditions of its sale to the Jockey Club by that gentleman. Volume VIII. is being prepared for publication and breeders are particularly requested to examine previous volumes carefully for any errors or omissions that the new volume may be as free from errors as possible Volume VII. has the records of the produce of all registered mares up to and including the year 1897.

The shiftless man is invariably a worthless man. There is no profit in any kind of business that is managed by a shiftless man, for a man of that kind always expects business to take care of itself, consequently both business and the man are found short on money in a short time. It is safe to say that the average person who breeds and raises horses is a shiftless one. Over seventy-five per cent. of horses raised do not bring cost price, all due to shiftlessness in breeding and raising them. Horses cannot mature well that are raised on snow and under poor shelter in bad weather. The live wide-awake up-to-date man has his stock always in marketable condition and ready for the buyer when he comes along. His horses look sleek and fat, are well broken and prepared for city trade, consequently gets a good price for his horses, while his neighbor, who is shiftless, always has on hand a lot of odds and ends for which there is no market simply because the horses' manes and tails are full of burrs, are in poor condition and unbroken. Anything almost can be sold if in a marketable fix. Somebody wants it if it looks good and in shape for use.

It is rumored that the Messrs. Morris will campaign a string of horses on the Western circuit next season, headed by their recent purchases, Kentucky Colonel and Manuel. These two youngsters are heavily engaged in next season's Western three year-old stakes. If the Messrs. Morris send them West, Brewer Schorr will not have things so easy. The Memphis turfmen expect to win several of the big Western Derbies with W. Overton and Sea Lion. He also has a "sleeper" under cover in the shape of a highly tried Order colt, said to be a youngster with sensational speed.

The Barrister, The Kentuckian, Heliobas, Miss Marion, Spirituelle and Espionage were the best two-year-olds shown in the West this season, barring the Pepper stars. The Kentuckian and The Barrister will probably be "preped" for the Derbies next spring. Heliobas is the colt that Bromley & Co. gave $10,000 for last spring. He showed stake form in the spring, but was taken sick shortly after being sold to Bromley & Co., and never rounded to. The Fleischman crack Alpen, winner of the Stallion Stakes at Chicago, is a good colt. Pat Dunne's filly, Jenks, is another good youngster that may shine as a three-year-old star.—St. Louis Republic.

The American trotter, if not such already, will some day be the equine favorite of the universe. Even the city dailies, which a few years ago could recognize "society merit" only in the foreign breeds, are now growing enthusiastic over the American trotter, the New York Sun lately having broken out in this style: "The park horse, or high stepper, is this year more than ever before to be the star of the show. When the Horse Show was young, society's pets were the hunters and jumpers. Then came the imported English hackneys, with their fuss and feathers and unrivaled capacity for clawing the air without getting over the ground. But the hackneys had to take a back seat when the American trotting horse, with his tail cut off and his mane pulled, learned to ape his English cousin at the high stepping game. He could go high and go fast, he could pull the weight of a heavy trap with seeming ease, and displayed more style and beauty and breeding than any other harness horse in the world. Ever since the hackneyized trotter broke into the game at the Garden, he has carried off about everything worth having in the way of ribbons and money in the heavy harness end of the Show."

High Steppers at New York.

The Horse Show just closed at New York outclassed all of the past fourteen shows held there. It has been a brilliant success. The correspondent of the Western Horseman thus describes the competition in the class for high steppers: "The field was perhaps the largest ever exhibited at the Horse Show, fifty-one aspirants for the honors crowding about the entrance to the ring before the gates were opened. Prescott Lawrence, Francis T. Underhill and H. E. Bloodgood, the judges, called the horses into the ring in three divisions, weeding out the deadwood in one lot before another was admitted. Only thirteen remained. Sam Huxter, who drove Miss Amalia Kussner's Ivanhoe, was fairly dezed when the judges sent the champion of the Morristown show out of the ring with the rest. Geo. R. Read's sporty little gray gelding Old Times, a winner at White Plains, was another blue ribbon stepper that got lost in the shuffle. After nearly an hour's work the competitors were reduced to seven, those left being Thos. W. Lawson's chestnut mare Gloriana and bay gelding Glorious, John S. Bratton's brown gelding Sampson, George B. Hulme's chestnut gelding Narragansett, W. O. Blanding's bay gelding Adonis, Albert C. Bostwick's bay mare Lady Ursula and C. F. Bates' brown gelding Coxey. At last the contest for first honors narrowed down to four or five of the best ones, and the handicapping grew more spirited as they sped around and around the tanbark, each one doing his prettiest to pull down the ribbon. Coxey, the champion of 1896, and one of the stars of last year's show, was driven by Charley Bates, who had laid up a couple of heats on his rivals, never calling for the best that Coxey could do until the final brush. John Bratton's Sampson got the blue ribbon in the end. The Kansas City horseman fairly beamed with joy as he sent his winner spinning over the tanbark after the blue rosette had been tied on him. The winner is a Western horse that has carried off about as many honors in his section as Coxey has in the East. His owner says the horse has a record of 2:19¼, made two or three years ago under the name of Winkle W. His sire was Winkle Dick, a son of Maxey Cobb, 2:13¾, the champion trotting stallion of ten years ago. Coxey was placed second, Gloriana third and Lady Ursula fourth. Gloriana is the trotting-bred mare that was sold at the American Horse Exchange a few weeks ago under the name of Best Get. She is beautifully turned, but rather lacking in substance, and her docked tail is almost devoid of hair.

W. C. Whitney as a Turfman.

Will W. C. Whitney, leader in the exclusive social set in New York City, multi-millionaire and man of affairs, openly identify himself with thoroughbred racing and take an active part in the conduct of the sport? This question is a leading one with sportsmen who are anxious to see men of national prominence give their moral and financial support to racing, and there are indications which justify the belief that next year Mr. Whitney will openly support August Belmont in his support for honest racing.

Mr. Whitney for a year has been conspicuous in connection with the sport, but under the mask of Sidney Paget, his partner and friend. Thousands of dollers of the firm's money has been invested in racing meterial and breeding stock, and it is understood that before the winter is past the firm will have purchased a bluegrass farm in Kentucky and begun the breeding and developing of thoroughbreds on a large scale.

Up to the present, however, Mr. Whitney's name has never appeared in the transactions, although there has never been a denial of the reports that Mr. Paget was simply a representative of the former Secretary of the Navy.

There are now reasons for believing that he will come out into the open. In fact, he has taken the first step in this direction. At the last regular monthly meeting of the officers of the Jockey Club Mr. Whitney was present and took part in the deliberation of the body. This gives ground for the rumor that when the time comes for appointing a new racing commission he will at least openly support August Belmont, the guiding spirit of the existing commission.

Mr. Belmont has long borne the brunt of the fight for clean racing in the East simply because of his love for the sport. That he would gladly share his labors and honors with some other man is well known, and Mr. Whitney's appearance at the meeting has been taken as proof that he will be an active co-laborer with Mr. Belmont in the Jockey Club hereafter.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

Ventura—Quail, any variety, Oct. 1, to Nov. 1.

Big Slaughter of Jays.

The three days' jay and hawk hunt of the Petaluma Sportsmen's Club was concluded on last Sunday evening, and although quite a number of the hunters failed to bring in their returns the count at Steiger's store showed 820 bluejays, 51 hawks of various kinds, one owl, one crow and many quail. Only the jays and hawks counted in the contest, says the Petaluma Courier.

The bluejay has an unenviable record as a destroyer of the eggs of all varieties of birds frequenting the hills and valleys of this State. He is not averse to making a meal on young birds in the nest or of wantonly killing them and destroying the nest. This sortie against the marauders of the field is believed by the club members to be an effective effort in the direction of quail protection for one thing, as the bluejays in particular have proved themselves most destructive to the young and eggs of the quail. As to the hawks, the Cooper hawk is the one who is most destructive to quail, killing full grown birds whenever opportunity offers.

The prizes were awarded as follows: M. Vonsen, first prize; W. G. Jones, second prize; Hehe Nay, third prize; George Studdert, fourth prize; C. D. Ward, fifth prize; George Ortmen, club members' prize, $5. The Petaluma Club is planning as its next move a "varmint" hunt on improved plans.

At the Trap.

Five members of the Pelican Gun Club completed their season's scores at live birds on Thanksgiving Day. Out of eighty birds shot at during the season Ed Nicholaus scored 68 L. S. Upson 65, F. Ruhstaller Jr. 63, Fred Gotched 60 and Fred Yoerk 54.

The scores at twenty birds each were as follows:

E. Nicholaus	1*121211110111*1121—17
F. Ruhstaller Jr.	022?*21121*12011*100—13
F. Ruhstaller Sr.	11*1*0*01121111121001—13
Charles Schwilk	0*11*1*1110121121201—12
Judge Gotched	00*101021*2*0*0110— 7

* Dead out of bounds.

Ruhstaller pere et Ruhstaller fils shot a match at four birds, which "the old man" won by a score of 3 to 2.

Live Birds and Blue Rooks.

While the people of the Middle and Eastern States were housed up Thanksgiving Day on account of a raging blizzard of snow and mud the Anaconda Gun Club were enjoying the afternoon with a blue-rock and live-bird shoot at their grounds east of the city.

The score at blue Rocks, unknown angles, was: Nell, 22; Lewis, 14; Mahon, 13; Bartlett, 20; Tolan, 21; Roy, 4; Steacken, 13; Rockfeller, 24; Tuttla, 24.

Another shoot at blue-rocks—Tuttle, 21; Nell, 12; Bertlett, 21, and Mahon, 17.

In the live-bird shoot Rockefaller scored 13, Tuttle 16, Bartlett 14, Mahon 14, Lewis 5 and Tolan 3.

Quail From the South.

The local market price for quail has had a heavy slump recently. The suspension of the ordinance prohibiting the shipment of game from San Diego county enabled the sending to this city of quail in extraordinary numbers last week one consignment of sixteen hundred was received by a commission house, per Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express, and on Monday last one hundred dozen arrived from the South. The birds were shipped by Martines Chick of San Diego. Chick and two or three others who assist him in slaughtering quail are shooting for the market this season. Most of the birds, it is claimed, are shot in Lower California, just over the boundary line, where they are found in countless thousands. A San Diego paper stated just prior to the opening of the season that Chick and another had leased the shooting privileges over the O'Neil ranch and other territory adjacent, comprising many thousand acres and heretofore regarded as good quail hunting ground. The season has been a dry one down there, which possibly caused the hunters to seek shooting fields across the border. Though in the case of Tulare market hunter one dry season, instead of shifting to another shooting district, he merely adopted the expedient of staying around the water holes for a couple of days, meanwhile keeping the birds away; when the thirsty quail found the coast clear they flocked en masse to water only to be ruthlessly mowed down by the concealed hunter who was lying in wait for them. Mr. Chick is an expert trap-shot and well known to the sportsmen of the Pacific Coast.

The San Diego Union of October 8th commented rather severely on the action of the Board of Supervisors in suspending the ordinance prohibiting the shipping of game from the county. Sportsmen of that section were unanimous in upholding the views expressed by the Union.

Opinions of a Gunmaker.

Bulges in gun barrels most frequently encircle the barrel when the result of faulty boring, but when the result of faulty metal they may cover a small or a large circumscribed area at any part of the barrel, top, bottom or sides. The metal for gun barrels should be elastic and tough. Sometimes hard spots remain by accident after the metal is worked into barrels. When completed the spots are not easily noticed, and the gun is turned out with one or several hard spots in the barrel. A charge is fired, and as the powder forces the load forward great pressure is exerted on the barrels just behind the projectile. The barrel expands and vibrates naturally while the load is in the act of passing, and immediately contracts when the load is past. In a good gun this expansion and contraction takes place evenly and smoothly, but imagine one spot large as an acorn of hard metal that will not give a particle as the load presses past it. The force of almost the entire load is directed against this spot, and the adjacent metal, meeting with increased and prolonged pressure, expands forcibly on all sides and causes bulging, the metal not being elastic enough to regain its former position after such an unusual strain. If the spot's edges diminish gradually in their harshness and become elastic like the other parts, a bulge is all that results. If all the barrel is of hard metal of even strength and firmness no bulge will result, but the gun will kick severely. When the hard spot is of clearly defined edges, ending abruptly, there is a risk of its being blown out of the barrel like a bullet, leaving a hole of a comparatively circumscribed though ragged edge. The effect of hard spots upon the shooting is great, even when not hard enough to cause bulging. The barrel with a hard spot on the left side will be bent slightly to the left while being discharged, but seldom permanently unless the spot is greatly harder than the surrounding metal. When slight, the barrel regains its original position after the usual vibration the discharge causes is over.

I have in mind a suspected gun being sent several times to the gunmaker's to be strengthened and finally to be rebored, but the result of each shot fired with the gun seemed to indicate that the barrels were bent. At last the gun was taken to an expert, who pointed out the difficulty, and as it could not be remedied the gun was returned to a factory and a new one was returned in its place, gratis, express charges and all. Faults in the metal very seldom occur, but when they do appear they are rectified by all manufacturers of high grade guns.

Whether the great heat that rapid firing subjects a gun to is sufficiently injurious to cause hard spots or not, is yet a disputed question. It is well known, however, that guns become hot enough to permit the choke to be shot entirely out of the barrel when rapid and continued shooting is much indulged in. Slight expansion may take place in an overheated barrel in sections, or along the entire length. This makes the gun shoot poorly with the identical load that once gave the most successful results. Sometimes when the owner of such a gun is of an experimental turn of mind he tries a wad a size larger—by accident, perhaps—and is delighted to find his favorite arm shoote as well as ever. It is good practice for a sportsman to try different size wads and watch the results. The experimenting sportsmen will, in time, have a decided advantage over a less observing shooter. Much that is curious and interesting will be learned through experimenting with different powders and loads —Leland Clarke in the American Field.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

E. Rumpf bagged ten sprig and teel last Sunday at Seare Point.

Novato hunting district enebled F. Staples to bag six ducks last Sunday.

C. Carlson had a bag of twenty-five ducks on Sunday last Alvaredo was the shooting place.

Lee Larzalere and J. Miles brought down a dozen and a half ducks from Tomales bay on Sundey.

Near Machin station, on the Empire preserve, five or six of the members had only fair luck last Sunday.

The members of the various clubs whose arks are located on the Suisun marshes have been getting plenty of duck shooting lately.

W. E Murdock returned from Reclamation last Sunday evening with a string of nineteen cans, sprig and teal. His best shoot took place Saturday.

John Barfeind was at the Spooney Gun Club grounds on Sunday. His bag was only fair; ducks were somewhat scarce on the eastern bay shore last Sunday.

Three prominent sportsmen of this city, Will Golcher, C. A. Haight and Ed. Bosqui, enjoyed a quail shoot near Point Reyes last Sunday. Fair bags were made by each shooter.

The Alameda Gun club members are enjoying good shooting at their preserve on Petaluma creek. The Mira Montes, located nearer to the bay, have not been idle with their guns lately.

C. J. Legros and his hunting partner report ducks to be very plentiful in and around Grizzly Flat at the head of Suisun bay. They have been very successful so far this season.

Some of the Olympic Gun Club members had pretty fair sport near Reclamation on Sunday last. Fred Surrhyne had a good sized bag of ducks, most of them, however, shot in the open water.

Last week L. Barre caught the flight from the bay near Belmont as the birds were flying over the hills to the Spring Valley Water Company's lakes. He bagged thirty-two sprig and eight geese.

Carl Jaekle, George Wilson, August Muller and John Farrell, of Napa, spent Sunday last hunting ducks with some Vallejo sportsmen, at the arks near Napa Junction. The party bagged about 120 birds.

At Fairville last Sunday a number of hunters had medium luck, among them were Ben Baum and Edg. Forster, they had to be content with fourteen quail between them. F. Costello and a friend bagged one dozen ducks, the assortment was made up of a variety of birds.

Last Sunday was not a day one would choose for good sport on the Petaluma marshes. The weather was very foggy, the ducks kept out on the bay, not daring to take flight for fear of losing their bearings.

John Lemmer, C. L. Dietz, "Shermen," B Wyman, Fred Johnson and Wm. Swain bagged over sixty ducks, mostly widgeon, on the Black Jack swamp at Sherman island last Sunday. Swain's gun made the high score for the day.

J. B. Campbell, a prominent cattle man of King City, who was in Salinas several days recently, asserts that this year has been so dry down south that squirrels could not exist, and are now a thing of the past. He stated that in a trip from Chualar to San Luis Obispo he did not see a single squirrel.

Several of the hunters from this city who shoot near Alvarado and show up Sundays with nice bags of ducks are openly accused, by those that know them, of shooting the birds by moonlight. A certain "square-head" is known to sluice ducks in this manner, notwithstanding his frequent denials; he poses as a full-fledged sportsman, too.

Stockton Sportsmen who fancy quail hunting have about given up trying to bag those birds for they are very scarce this season and it requires no end of exertion to get a half dozen. The dry winter last year and the lack of rains at this particular time keeps the birds in the brush and it is impossible to get them out or make the fly.

Jim Maynard and Dr. E. N. Ayers were at the "island" above Stockton on Sunday; they begged fourteen ducks and seventeen English snipe. These two devotees of the shotgun and Clarence Haight, another genial frequenter of upland and marsh, will proceed to Antioch this evening where they will meet Ellie Johnson, who will convey them in a launch to River island. The sport offered at this place promises to be very good. Ducks, snipe, quail and geese will probably make up the combined bag.

Bert Wyman is rapidly becoming, under Secretary Markland's tuition, one of the crack experts of the Black Jack Club. The secretary has recently applied for a patent on a device for making flock shots. The invention looks like a churn. A powerful spring inside the flock-gun hurtles a large net through the air a long distance and with immense velocity. The net, as it leaves the catapult, opens automatically and whirls around centrifugally, a series of duck-calls arranged about the margin are set to work calling; this will cause a flock of ducks to fly right into the net which then collapses and by means of a cunningly devised electric apparatus returns loaded with ducks to the exact spot from which it started.

Game Warden Helms of Sacramento took a trip recently to the southern end of Sacramento county on a still hunt for quail trappers. Quails are quite numerous in that section and trapping has been actively engaged in. He states that while on this trip he found and destroyed more quail traps than he had before encountered since he took up his duties of Game Warden. While he did not detect anyone in the act of trapping quails, he got so close on their heels that he is confident they will quit the business.

Warden Helms has already driven all the 4-bore and 8-bore gunmen out of the county, and now the ducks and geese have only to take their chances against guns of ordinary caliber. The cannoneers are operating in adjoing counties, but they dare not try it in Sacramento

Quail trapping at present, we are informed is quite an extensive and probably lucrative industry near Pleasanton. On the Hearst and Chadbourne properties a large number of traps have been set recently.

The rainbow trout are thriving remarkably well in many English, Scotch and Irish waters.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

A chance for the sale of two greyhound bitches is offered this week in our advertising columns.

The smooth coat St. Bernard Lord Hualpa (Alton—Keepsake) died this week. He was owned by Miss M. McGanney.

The Boston terrier is making himself known in San Francisco. A number of fine specimens have come here from the East recently.

The Verona Kennels have a number of choice puppies by Ch. Old Hall Admiral and Ch. St. Claire Leddie that promise to make their mark in collie circles.

The Eastern St. Bernard fancy are interested in the recent importations of the smooth coat Atlas, who weighs 211 pounds, and Lady Tennyson, an Edinburgh and Newcastle winner. Atlas has taken first and champion at Edinburg and Belfast and was first prize winner at Crystal Palace.

The Great Dane bitch Queen R., who has a bench record of four first prizes, Stockton, Los Angeles and San Francisco, 1897, and San Francisco, 1898, has recently been sold by Mrs. Roncoveri to Chas. Dresser, the well known breeder of this city. Queen R. has been bred to Blinker Murphy who was first in the winners class at the last S. F. K. C. show.

A painting by the well-known artist, Fred Butler, has attracted a great deal of attention during this week, on exhibition in Clabrough, Golcher & Co.'s window. The artist has given a life-like appearance to the two noted collies Ch. Old Hall Admiral and Heather Mint owned by the Verona Kennels. The beautiful picture must be seen to be fully appreciated.

Swedish Elkhounds, says the English Kennel Gazetta are a very useful, interesting and intelligent variety of sporting dogs. Their uses are infinite, and range from "treeing" capercailzie to bringing bears to bay—It is probable that this breed may become a fancy in England, though their work would of course be different from that performed on their native grounds.

Plain Sam, the winner of the All-Age stake at the recent inaugural field trials of the Ohio Field Trials Association, is well known as a high class pointer, both as a winner and a sire. He is owned by Dr. J. R. Daniels of Cleveland, and is by Hal Pointer out of Kent's Star. Sam's Lad, also owned by Dr. Daniels, one of Plain Sam's sons by Eve, was the Derby winner. This great pointer has several well known representatives on the Coast, Same Bow, owned by Mr. W. S. Tevis, and Plain Sam's Son, a half brother to Sam's Bow, owned by Mr. J. E. De Ruyter, are favorably known to the pointer fancy.

The forty-third exhibition of the English Kennel Club at Crystal Palace, Sydenham (near London) is said to be one of the best exhibitions of sporting and other dogs ever held. The entries numbered 1,489, the quality being exceptionally good all round. The judges, thirty in number, kindly gave their services to the club as did about the same number of gentlemen who acted as ring stewards. The classes numbered three hundred and eighty-eight. The list of specials was a large one. Fox Terriers, Collies, Dachshunds, Bulldogs, Setters, Retrievers, Deerhounds and Irish Terriers seemed to principally engage public interest.

They do things after this manner in England: The new Dogs' Home, which was opened at Heckbridge, Surrey, on the 29th of October, by the Duke and Duchess of Portland, is in reality a country branch of the Home for Lost and Starving Dogs at Battersea, and has been built with every modern appliance for the purpose of receiving healthy dogs that are too good to be destroyed in the lethal chamber. In this connection Sir George Needham, the chairman of the committee of the Dog's Home, stated that during the last twelve years 280,937 lost and starving dogs had been received in the home, and that not more than 10 per cent. of them had been claimed by their owners, and purchasers found for 10 per cent. so that 80 per cent. of this large number had been destroyed. It was hoped that with this new home, with nice glass surroundings, the lives of many more dogs for the future would be saved. The cost of the home at Heckbridge up to the present time was £6,171, and he was assured that the establishment of this new branch was one of the most beneficent schemes ever inaugurated for the benefit of dogs. Sir Howard Vincent, who was present on the occasion of the opening ceremony, presented the Duchess of Portland with a wire-haired terrier, which she had admired when passing through the home.

Pacific Coast Trials.

Entries for the All-aged Stake in the Pacific Coast Field Trials will close Thursday, December 15, 1898.

The beautiful trophies offered for these trials are now on exhibition in the windows of a Market street jewelry firm. The Champion Stake cup has been offered by Mr. W. S. Tevis, the All-aged Stake cup is given by Western Sports, three other elegant cups are given by the Verona Kennels, Frank Maskey and Geo. W. Richards respectively, and will be awarded to the three winners. If Geo. W. Richards can find suitable grounds near Bakersfield to work the dogs it is very probable that the Verona Kennels will have some entries in the trials.

Collie Club Notes.

The date of closing for entries in the Oakland Show has been postponed until Wednesday, November 30th.

Mr. McCormick's imported collie, Victor of Aberdeen, will make his debut at Oakland as will also several youngsters by the world famous Collie Ormskirk Emereld.

We hear that something particularly fine in the Cocker line is now journeying westwards and will have an initial appearance across the bay. Plumeria Cocker Kennels have offered a silver medal for the best cocker stud dog to be judged by two of his get.

Loss of Two Famous Setters.

Two of the most famous English setters on the Coast recently died in Los Angeles. Valiente (Eugene T.—Meiden Mine), three years old, third in the Derby, 1897, a full brother to Ch. Count Gladstone IV., and Rowena (Herold—Enid), first in the Derby and third in the All-Aged Stake, 1896, are a loss to the setter breeding interests on the Pacific Coast that will be very hard to replace. Valiente was a great sire; he was one of the probable starters in the All-Aged Stake at Bakersfield next January. A number of promising youngsters by Valiente—Rowena are entered in the Derby.

CH. COUNT GLADSTONE IV.

Both of these fine dogs were owned by John Schumacher, of Los Angeles, a genial sportsman, who has the sympathy of a legion of fellow sportsmen in a loss, to him, that is felt keenly. Fever carried off Valiente, his kennel mate Rowena dying a few days latter. Mr. Schumacher states that in her case there was not a sign of disease; he is of the opinion, judging from the circumstences, that she died of grief caused by the death of her kennal mate.

Fanciers thoroughly appreciate the value of Dr. H. Clay Glover's Imperial remedies. There is nothing deleterious in their composition and they can be easily administered with equal confidence to the old dog whose energies are flagging or to the youngest puppy whose life and strength depend upon the future. The vermifuge is particularly efficacious for young puppies when areca nut and other violent remedies must not be thought of.

Pacific Kennel League, etc.

JOHANNESBURG, Cal., Nov. 20, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Most of your readers are well aware that the writer has for eight years past, advocated the formation of an organization to govern kennel matters west of the Rockey mountains. It is unnecessery to detail the reasons why the A. K. C. is not adequate to the situation, the mere matter of the distance between New York and San Francisco is sufficient of itself to give an excellent excuse for the existence of a "rival" organization. I confess that I am not fully in accord with the recently organized Pacific Kennel League mainly because of its inception at a time when the A. K. C. seemed to be doing its best to retain its post and because of the excellent personnel of the recently appointed Pacific Advisory Board pro tem.

In your issue of November 12th you quote a prominent fancier as stating that the League is not a "rival" organization or words to that effect; that there has been no "secession" and "It is they who will start the row if there is one, and though we do not seek it, yet being forced to defend ourselves, we may be obliged to fight." I beg to differ, the clubs that have joined the League that are members of the A. K. C. know full well that they are seceding. As individuals they can show where they please but as clubs they can only hold shows under A. K. C. rules when they joined the League they seceded in every sense of the word. The A. K. C. has the right, the power and the inclination to discipline these clubs and will undoubtedly do so. As to fighting, the League is organized as a rival club with no other object in view than that of driving the A. K. C. from the Coast. It may not win its fight, but if properly conducted on liberal lines with good men handling the reins it should succeed and if its leaders prove good, broad-minded fighters I believe it will.

I note the rules governing shows. Many of them are excellent, some are great strides in the right direction, but as the League is an existing fact and must be dealt with as such, I would much prefer to see it nearer perfection. I see no reason why the new club cannot begin where the old left off; why the new club cannot profit by the old one's failures and fail to see any reason why it should begin ten years back and make the same mistakes over again.

Rule 3, of the rules governing shows, reads as follows: "The breeder of the dog is the person owning the bitch at the time of her whelping" I would change that to owning or breeding. The owner of a bitch leased to another fancier is not always the breeder by any manner of means. It is quite a common practice to lease dogs or bitches. A bitch may be leased to a man for two years. Its owner may be thousands of miles away and not know what dog she is bred to or ever see the progeny. Is he in any sense, the breeder of said pups?

Rule 11 provides for a puppy class for puppies over four and under twelve months of age. It would have been a thousand times more to the interest of exhibitors and show committees if the class is totally abolished. The greatest and almost only objection to showing a dog is the danger of catching distemper—the bane of the fancier. For even the ten months pup, the draught, excitement, change of food and surroundings almost inverably results in some physical ailment. A pup may develop distemper after it has been benched a couple of days and as every breeder knows the younger the pup the more apt it is to contract this disease. Personally I never did and never will exhibit a young puppy, but those with less experience should be protected for themselves or the show clubs and the fanciers will be the losers. The exhibiting of bitches with litters has been abolished by the A. K. C. Litters are unquestionably attractive, but experience has taught Eastern fanciers, that of those exhibited ninety per cent die. The excitement sours the milk and starts the puppy going down hill. The innocent purchaser is the victim.

Rule 18 is the best rule ever adopted, there never was a greater farce perpetrated than judging for the best dog in the show.

Portions of Rule 21 are good but I fail to see the advantage gained in reducing the forfeit from $5 to $2. It will tend to introduce more frivolous charges, harass overworked committees with unnecessary work and create unfriendly feeling between exhibitors. A capable bench show committee is just as well and probably better equipped for deciding such questions at the time, than any League committee can at a late date. Denying the right of appeal is certainly a move in the right direction.

The Kennel Gazetta states: "The League will have no meeting place, but will meet at the different shows held and those unable to attend may send proxies." I am loath to believe Secretay Vredenburgh rightly informed. I trust if true, that the League will speedily effect a permanent organization, secure a place of meeting, meet regularly, appoint committees to take charge of the various branches of the work and first of all put the club on a strong financial basis. It is a poor member that will not back up his ideas with coin. Charge the club a small sum for membership fees; tax the members individually; create a life membership or any other way that seems advisable, to raise sufficient revenue to pay for the time and labor of the clerical work, stationery, printing, etc. Next, bar all proxies, once for forever, the curse of the Coast for years has been "axe grinding," the new club should start with a clean record. It will be hard to find a better plan than that of representation by duly elected delegates.

I note in your columns the statement that the Oakland Specialty Show will be judged by scoring and the claim that this will be the first time the score card was ever used. This is a mistake. It has been tried many times and given up on account of its being so slow. I remember well a cartoon of H. W. Lacy, printed by him in the Turf, Field and Farm sometime in the '80's, of a certain judge in the show ring at New York (I think). He was represented as judging a class of beagles, but most of the handlers were either asleep in the corners or absent from the ring side with placards on their dogs bearing such legends as "Will return in four hours," "Will be back in the morning," etc. Judging by comparison is much preferable. The score card is too slow a method and not as satisfactory after it is accomplished. After the judge is through, you simply have his opinion of the comparative value of the dogs adjudged. He keeps in his mind's eye an ideal dog and no two judges were ever known to score alike, either with dogs or poultry. A. RUSSELL CROWELL,

Eastern Field Trials.

Sportsmen on the Pacific Coast are keenly interested in the results of the circuit of field trials now rapidly following each other in the East. Local prids has pegged up several notches over the performances of some of the progeny of Ch. Count Gladstone IV. The Derby of the Eastern Field Trial Club placed Count Danstone (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Dan's Lady) and Halherd (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Iza) first and second Third winner in the All-Aged Stake, Uncle B. (Harwick—Dan'e Lady), is a grandson of Gladstone and Pin Money, second (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Daisy Craft) Pin Money was also the winner of the Subscription Stake, beating the dog who unplaced her last year.

The following summaries of the different trials and events are taken from the American Field:

NEWTON, N. C., November 14, 1898.—Eastern Field Trial Club's Derby—For all setter and pointer puppies, whelped on or after January 1, 1897. Three purses: First prize, $300; second, $200; third, $100. Sixteen starters.

THE FARM.

Inoculating Cattle for Fever.

Mr. C. J. Pound, the government bacteriologist of Queensland, has furnished the Victorian government with an interesting report on the steps being taken in the northern colony to combat the tick pest. It is stated that several centers have been established for the distribution of blood taken from animals which have recovered from tick fever, and that a large number of herds in Southern and Central Queensland have been inoculated several months ago, and sent to Inkerman, have remained quite free from the disease, and are being sold as fats. The bulls sent to the same run became grossly tick infested, but remained quite free from fever. Many bulls inoculated in the south and sent to northern tick infested districts, proved to be quite immune, although traveled through tick infestad country and placed on tick infested runs. Several severe tests have been made, in sending inoculated cattle into infested country, accompanied by uninoculated beasts. In every instance the inoculated cattle proved immune, while those that had not been so treated either succumbed or suffered severely from tick fever. Dr Hunt, the government pathologist, is engaged in a series of experiments, testing various medicants, in order to discover whether a reliable dip can be found which shall not only destroy ticks, but prevent the reinfection of cattle for a sufficient time to admit of their being taken on to clean country without risk of spreading the ticks. By a series of carefully conducted experiments Dr. Hunt proved that inoculation to be effective must be resorted to before the cattle become infected, otherwise, if they become infected while suffering from the artificially induced disease, many will die. Dipping did not prevent the fever running its course, and quinine neither prevented nor mitigated the attack.

Dr. Hunt's statement that inoculation to be effective must be resorted to before the cattle become infected, should be noted. This fact makes it important to inoculate the cattle as soon after they are received as their condition justifies and it would be a wise prudence to secure the advice of a competent veterinarian when practicable.

It is gratifying to know that this subject has been receiving the attention of the best veterinary talent of the country, not only of the veterinarians of the bureau of animal industry at Washington and of those at the experiment stations in southern States, but some of the ablest of those engaged in private practice have been engaged in its investigation.

Starting a Flock.

The farmer who engages in raising sheep cannot be too careful in the selection of the foundation of his stock. The ewes ought to be good and strongly and uniformly marked with the characteristics of the breed to which they belong. Robert Jameson, in the Prairie Farmer, advises that the foundation stock of ewes be pure-bred, registered animals. This is not good advice unless the farmer has had previous experience that qualifies him for the management needed by such a flock, says an exchange. It is unfortunate, but it is true, that too many registered animals are lacking in strength of constitution and need particular care. But even if this were not the case, the average farmer will make some mistakes, and he don't want to lose any registered ewes while learning how to take care of a flock. A flock of good grades, brought up from hardy, native sheep, can soon be bred up to a standard so high as to be worth, in their production of wool or mutton, very nearly as much as the pure bred, and are likely to be hardier in constitution and more vigorous than the registered ewes.

It is different as to the ram. He is to make the future flock, to stamp it with the characteristics and qualities which are to make the industry profitable or unprofitable He ought to be not only a registered animal, but to be of the best family of his breed that the purchaser can find, a family that has achieved distinction by the number of really high class animals it has in its record. And he should possess in himself all the valuable qualities of his breed and of his particular family, as well as constitution and vigor.

With such a flock as a foundation and with the care and attention which common sense will dictate sheep can be made profitable on almost any farm.

Start, however, with only a few. They will be given better care and more can be learned while the number is so small that individuals are noticed than with a large flock. The increase will come fast enough.

An Advantage in Small Farms.

I have noticed in the townships where the farms are small in area the people are happier and the children better bred. Smaller farms increase the density of the population. This gives them better school facilities. The children feel the encouragement of numbers and are excited to greater efforts by the competition. Besides, their parents can afford to hire a better teacher and build for their use a better school house. Then, too, in a thickly settled region the roads are kept in better condition, for the land is of greater value and will stand taxing to improve the highways. The people are brought close together and have more of social advantages And social advantages are a great thing. Give a farmer's wife suitable company in the way of good neighbors and she will forget half of her troubles in talking with her neighbors. I believe there would be fewer disheartened women if they could have some chance to enjoy social life I pity the woman on the big farms, each a mile square, where the nearest neighbor is a mile away, and perhaps incongenial. When neighbors are so few and so far away one cannot choose one's company as one would if the farms were smaller and neighbors plentiful —Mrs. J. S., in Farmer's Review.

No. 1 Wheat.

I have often wondered what became of all the No. 1 wheat that is grown in this country practically no mention being made of it in market reports. In the current number of the Cosmopolitan magazine Mr. Joseph Leiter has an article upon "Wheat and its Distribution" that throws light upon the subject. No. 2 wheat is the ordinary contract grade, and the warehousemen use all the high grade wheat they can get in bringing up the grade of poor stuff by mixing. The great elevators are really mixing concerns, turning out an article that will barely pass inspection a due proportion of good wheat and poor stuff being used in the mixture to produce this result. Mr. Leiter says: "This business resulted in large profits to people who had the machinery with which to conduct it, but served rather to lower the grade of the cereals in the different markets where it was allowed, in that there was not delivered any grain which would more than pass for contract. There was no premium extended to the farmer for improving the quality of his product, as the extra price which he could get for a heavier and finer article was the lowest price which the proprietor of the mixing house could afford to allow him without having his grain go to the proprietor of some other mixing house." —Cor. Stockman and Farmer.

Remedy for Fleas.

I notice some one asks how to rid a barn of fleas. Is seems to be not generally known that salt will kill them. When I was a boy, father's place became infested with fleas from pigs sleeping at the barn, and they nearly drove me crazy. I heard in some way that salt would kill them. I suppose I used a peck of salt, scattering it freely about the barn and house, and at the expiration of a week we could not tell that a flea had ever been on the place. All gone. Since then I have cleared our home of them several times. One application always does the work. I have also recommended it to others who have used it with equal success. Salt scattered over a carpet and swept off before it melts will clean it of both fleas and dirt. I am never bothered with fleas unless I get them away from home. I know there are many people who would willingly spend the price of a barrel of salt to be rid of the pests, and salt is never failing.—J. W. Trisler, M. D., in Practical Farmer.

Profit in Poultry.

Mrs. J. Covey kept a careful account of the number of eggs obtained from her hens from November 1, 1897, to November 1, 1898 From fifty hens she obtained 9,670 eggs This would be 181 eggs per hen, or fifteen dozen each for the year. At the average price of 25 cents per dozen this would amount to $2.75 per hen, or $187.50.

We do not know the price the eggs were sold for, but during a considerable portion of the year eggs brought 25 cents per dozen.—Oroville Register.

Of Interest to Stockmen.

The Solano Republican says: "The following order issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, modifying regulations concerning cattle transportation, will prove of interest to cattlemen, and the article was handed to us for publication by E. Okell, Secretary of the Stockmen's Protective Association recently organized in Solano county:

"It is hereby ordered that the cattle originating in the district described in the order of December 15, 1897, and amendments thereto, which district is known as the quarantine district, may, after having been properly dipped, under the supervision of an inspector of this department, in a solution of eighty-six pounds flowers of sulphur to each 1,000 gallons of extra dynamo oil, be shipped without further restriction; provided that application be first made to this department, and permission granted to establish the dipping stations, and that after being dipped the cattle are certified by an inspector of the U. S. bureau of animal industry, and that the cattle, when dipped within the quarantined district, be shipped in clean cars, without unloading within that district."

Here is a sheep story that equals some of the almost fabulous stories of a California '49er about the gold mining and proves that a flock of sheep is as good as a gold mine any day: James Donber living in Aurore county, South Dakota, was presented with a pet ewe lamb in the year 1891. A few days ago he sold the flock of sheep accumulating from this small beginning for $150 and in addition sold about $200 worth of wool from the resultant flock during the seven years. In order to do this seeming impossible thing, however, Mr. Dunbar every year traded the wether lambs for ewes. Anyone by little figuring can soon ascertain the answer to this little problem in progression by multiplying each year's number of sheep by two thus: First year one, second year two, third year four, etc., through the seven years and it will be ascertained that, if there is no loss, at the end of seven years the flock would number 127 sheep.

The price of wool is still several cents below the importing price, and of course no wool will be imported until the prices get nearer together. Only the large stocks in the hands of manufactorers prevent an immediate advance to normal prices. How long the manufacturers' stocks will hold out is difficult to ascertain, and the estimates that have found publication vary so widely as to justify the conclusions that they are mere guesses. According to some the manufacturers have fully two years' supply, while others state they have only enough to last them one year. It known that they have fully 60,000,000 pounds in bond, and the price is not enough to permit its withdrawal without loss. It would seem that the situation is one that fully justifies the owner of wool in waiting for the advance that must come.

I do not assert that the Shorthorns are the only breed that have a place in this country but I do affirm that they have a place that cannot be filled by any other breed. By the general farmer we do not mean the gardener or dairyman living near a large city, neither do we refer to the ranchmen, but the man with 100 acres of land, situated several miles from market. He does not make a specialty of any one thing, but feeds his lands by a rotation of crops. He keeps just such stock as will consume his own productions of hay, fodder and grain.—C. C. Shaw in National Stockmen.

The Directors of the Woodland Creamery Association held a meeting Thursday afternoon and declared a dividend of 8 per cent payable to the stockholders on December 15th The regular monthly payments amounting to $34,000, were also ordered distributed among its patrons. The Woodland creamery is one of the leading enterprises of this city and has distributed thousands of dollars among the people during the three years of its existence. —Woodland Democrat.

A ram of the mutton breads is matured at two years old and a Shropshire should weigh in good flesh at least 200 pounds. A Cotswold ram at that age should weigh 275 or 300 pounds. The Merino is of slower growth ordinarily and may not mature until it is three years old when it should weigh 180 pounds.

Homes for Millions.

Farmers who live in States favored by abundant moisture are slow to realize the benefits of irrigation for their less favored brethren in dry States, while the city dwellers give it only a passing thought.

The United States has been blessed in the past with a seemingly inexhaustible quantity of the finest agricultural land on earth. The government has been prodigal in parceling out this territory, giving it to railroads and individuals in areas measured by hundreds of square miles. Only in the last few years have the people discovered that tillable land is growing scarce, that is, tillable ground that has only to be scratched and sown to seed in order to grow bountiful harvests.

But when all the favored lands are owned by the individuals there remains an enormous tarritory which needs only water to grow the finest crop in the Union. The trackless deserts of Nevada, Wyoming, Arizona, Oregon, New Mexico, the arid plains of States nearer the Mississippi river, can be made to furnish homes for millions of people if the government earnestly pushes the work of saving the water supplies. The State of Washington has shown what can be done by an irrigation system, although the records of the western and eastern borders for rainfall would lead one to believe irrigation is the last thing to be desired. Nowhere are finer cereals and fruits raised than in the Yakima valley, and the crops never fail. Yet the Yakima valley is an insignificant portion of the vast area which can be reclaimed in this State by irrigation.

The National Irrigation Congress thoroughly understands the benefits to accrue from distribution of the water supply, but has difficulty in enlisting the United States Congress in the work. Delegates to the Irrigation Congress are not dismayed, however, by disappointments. They hammer away at the national legislature this year, reiterating the resolutions of previous years and appointing committees to again labor with Senators and Representatives. The schemes contemplated are so stupendous that it is only proper that the government should conduct them. The irrigation enthusiasts are constantly at work in that direction, and some day their efforts will meet with success. When the irrigation system is properly conducted west of the Mississippi river the center of population will move hundreds of miles toward the setting sun.—Spokane, Wash., Review.

The Nicaragua Canal.

We quote the following brief paragraph from the London Statist, showing the importance of the proposed Nicaragua canal from the British standpoint:

It will afford a ready outlet in the Pacific for cotton, livestock, wheat and other foodstuffs of the Mississippi states, and for the coal iron and machinery of the Southern States of North America. The mouths of the Mississippi, the Hudson and the Amazon are within a few days' sail of where the canal will be cut. A narrow isthmus at present shuts off the producing states of the Atlantic seaboard from a consuming area which contains three-fourths of the population of the world. Remove the barrier, and, as Meury graphically puts it, "this country (America) is placed midway between Europe and Asia, and the Carribaen sea becomes the center of the world and the focus of the world's commerce."

This is substantially the argument which Americans themselves have been making, but they insist that the canal shall be the exclusive property of the government, in order that complications may be avoided. For strategic as well as for commercial reasons they insist that the canal ought to be built, and there is little reason to doubt that it will be built within the next few years.

CONDUCTED BY
WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C.V.C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

J. O. C.—In reply to your questions:

1 My horse is about eleven years old.

2. His heels are narrow and a little contracted.

3. There are no rings on the hoofs.

4. He leans back a little when I turn him round.

5. He goes lamer on hard ground.

6. He rests one of his front feet when he stands.

7. I can't see any corns or anything else on his feet.

8. He goes lamer down hill.

9. I don't see any blemish on his legs.

Answer—Your horse shows decided symptoms of navicular disease This is disease of the navicular bone (which is a small bone situated in the foot, towards the posterior or back part, between the heels). It acts as a pulley for the perforens tendon to play over, as that tendon passes down the back of the leg, over this (navicular) bone, and is inserted or fastened to the underneath part of the coffin bone. From concussion, caused by fast driving on hard roads, an inflammation is set up in this part and as a result of this inflammation the bone becomes diseased. Navicular disease, when far advanced, is considered incurable. Soaking the horse's feet daily in warm water softens the hoof and reduces the inflammation and pain, and in that way gives some relief. Leather soles with tar oakum, also assists by lessening concussion and keeping the sole of the foot soft and springy. Frog pressure assists in expanding the heels. A blister around the coronet may remove the soreness temporarily, but it appears again with hard work. Nerving the horse removes the lameness, but does not cure the disease. This operation should be performed by a qualified veterinary surgeon.

Subscriber.—I have a colt that drags his left hind foot going down hill; i. e., the toe of the foot touches the ground in stepping forward. The left ankle seems to be larger than the right one, especially on the inside of it. He does not go lame in trotting or walking on the level, but in standing favors this foot more than the other by resting on the tip of the toe. The ankle is somewhat feverish. Is resting the hind feet so, first one and then the other, an indication of unsoundness? Age one and one-half years. P. S. I also notice that colt passes a pale thin worm about two inches long in dung. Should anything be given for this? If so, what?

Answer—Your colt being so young, this is probably due to weakness and he will grow out of it if taken care of.

However, if he continues to trip and knuckle over on that joint, he may strain the ligaments and leave a permanent weakness.

Enlargement on the inside of the joint points to interfering. If he interferes you should have him booted.

For weakness in the joint, give the joint a rubbing with some extract of hamammelis daily and bandage; and you may, with benefit, have an elastic stocking on him when driving.

Resting the hind legs alternately is not an indication of unsoundness, but should a horse continually rest the same hind leg, it would indicate a weakness in that limb.

The worms that you refer to are probably thread worms, which usually reside in the rectum. They do not generally interfere with the horse's health, but may cause an irritation about the tail, and cause him to rub it.

Give half a drachm of sulphate of iron in his food daily for about three weeks.

Give an enema of warm water and clean out the rectum, followed by an enema of three or four ounces of oil of turpentine in a pint of linseed oil.

Don't repeat this for some time, as it is irritating to the bowel.

Salt given in the food daily, or rock salt left in the manger, so that the horse may lick it, is a good preventative against worms.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. Men whose success in whatever they engage depends on perfect physical condition, will be interested in the claims made for The Niagara Vapor Bath Cabinet.

A hunter, John C. Bayler, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I began to feel as though my happy hunting days were over. I thought I was getting old, my joints were getting stiff, and a day's outing after game always needed another day to rest up in. Since I am using The Niagara Vapor Bath, I feel like a new man. It keeps me limbered up and in good shape for work or sport."

The Niagara Vapor Bath, if used regularly, keeps a man in the most perfect physical condition, keeps his system aglow, his weight normal, his head free and clear, his muscles pliant and elastic, and not only prevents, but also cures, some of the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout and completely eradicates all the ailments arising from over-indulgence in liquor or food.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

THREE DOLLARS A YEAR

THE STARTER'S LOT.

Charley Trevathan Showe that it is Anytihng but a Happy One.

None of the turf writers who wrote their first accounts of racing matters for California papers wields a readier pen than Chas. E. Trevathan, who is now living in New York and contributing articles on racing and other affairs to the daily papers of that city. The following from his pen on the subject of starters will be especially interesting at this time, when the flag wielder is being discussed by everybody, from ex-Secretaries of the Navy to race track touts:

Every year about the time that chill December comes around and the real race horses of the year are munching hay in box stalls, and the turf followers are telling hard luck and others stories about the fire, the starting question bobs up. It is a sort of ante-Christmas growl. It begins with the fault finding of the season's losers and spreads like an epidemic to the more reasonable utterances of owners, trainers and supporters of the turf.

During the past fifteen years it has been my fortune to see all or nearly all the starters of America, from "Prince' Caldwell down to "Curly Brown," and I have envied no one of them. One hundred dollars a day is a tempting bait, and men have bitten at it often. Some of them have n ver been the same since the nibble. Others are still struggling along under the load of personal abuse, intense hatreds and public execration which has fallen to their part. Starters are just plain human folk, but nobody seems to think so, and it is just as legitimate to insult a red flag man with any innuendo or epithet as it is to kick a yellow dog. Owners, trainers, jockeys, bookmakers, stable boys, casual track visitors, fellow track officials, all take a crack at the starter, and there is sympathy for him nowhere on this sad earth He earns that hundred.

Ever since the Roman charioteer jockeyed in front of Emperors people have heen trying to find a way to start horses so that every contender in a field might have an equal chance with his fellows. Not one arrangement, mental or mechanical, has been a complete success, and the absolutely perfect method may never come. It is just about as good now as it ever will be.

Back in the years that are gone there were quarter races upon which great amounts of money were wagered. Nearly all those races were matches, and the starter was dispensed with entirely. The two riders tossed for the "word." The winner had the right to give the signal, which was the word "go." The two horses would stand with their heads the wrong way and slowly turn. The loser of the toss would ask, "Are you ready?" The other lad had the privilege of saying "go" or keeping his mouth shut. In case he said nothing there was another turn of the pair and the old question was repeated.

In quarter races a head at the break was considered of vital importance. I have seen a pair break with their noses on a line, and again I have seen two horses turn all through an afternoon, take another night's sleep and turn again, getting away for a quarter of a mile run after fifteen hours actual time at the post. Still, quarter horse men thought they had a good system, and it was not so bad. At least there was no starter to be maligned

And quarter horse men did one thing which the Jockey Club should compel every trainer to do. They trained their horses to break. That was just as much a part of the horse's education as galloping. It was a picture to delight the eye when a quarter horse would go to the post, turn the wrong way on his own accord, take a deep breath and begin to creep around. With his legs bunched close under him and every muscle drawn taut, he waited.

At the signal he leaped like a deer and was at the top of his speed in half a dozen strides. The old timers may teach to-day's trainers the value of good breakers. We think our horses go away fast now, but a quarter horse would make then look like hearse hacks. The quarter method of training is respectfully suggested to the powers.

Still another thing was demonstrated by these old trainers. It is not necessary in a false break to go a quarter of a mile before pulling up. A quarter horse could be stopped in thirty yards. His strength was husbanded. He was going just as fast and as hard as a thoroughbred, but he had been trained to stop when a featherweight boy asked him, and he did stop. If the trainers really want to get good starts they will teach their horses more and talk less about the starters.

The boys need a little teaching themselves, and the starter is the man to do it. And that brings the matter down to the starter as an individual. It is my personal opinion that the starter is related to the poet, in fact that he is born to the business. There are certain qualifications which he must possess by birthright. If you should ask any flag man now extant what things he needed most in his business he would probly say firmness. He would mean hy that firmness in dealing with the boys at the post, and the same thing in dealing with owners and trainers after he gets back from the post.

The failures have heen men who could not say no and stick to it when owners and others have come to ask the mitigation or removal of a sentence. That is the greatest of all the evils which attend upon a starter. When he does anything to a boy it must stay done or the usefulness of the man is gone. That is one of the failings which have come to Fitzgerald, but he is not alone in it.

If Mr. Whitney will take a day out of his busy life and think over this starting matter he will probably arrive at a conclusion that the right man in the right place (unhampered hy official interference, given the power to inflict penalties, and placed outside influences which make those penalties inactive) will start horses well and satisfy the American public as well as it is satisfied with anything nowadays.

Wherever the owners and officials of a race course have given the starter absolute control of his part of the work, and that starter was the right man for the work, there has been good starting. And I have noticed that the man who started well was a very poor talker. Flag men are too much given to the tongue. They howl too much, instruct too much, threaten too much that never comes true. The boys get tired of the noise and cease to regard it.

I once saw a man start horses perfectly, if there is such a thing. The man was "Jimmie" Rowe. He was the Jockey Club starter then, and he was not doing particularly well on the New York tracks. He went to San Francisco for the California Jockey Club. He had hig fields of mediocre horses, worse than mediocre hoys and a narrow track among his difficulties. He conquered all of them.

In the first place the Club told him that at the post he was supreme, and that there was no court of appeal above him. That gave him confidence. At the post he looked the hoys over and told them in a few words to get in line. He set down one or two to begin with, and they did not ride any more, solicitous owners to the contrary notwithstanding. The boys got in line and the horses were started with a fairness and promptness which was surprising and pleasing. Rowe knew no official or personal influence, he said never an unnecessary word to the hoys, he punished severely and relented not at all, and he never hroke his word when he told a boy to go back and wait.

It seemed to me then as it seems now, that Rowe had solved the problem. The conditions permitted him to do it. And yet he came back to New York, made an absolute failure and quit in disgust. The Jockey Club and personal influence hampered him and killed him as a starter. Rowe's California experience is full of meaty suggestions, and the Jockey Club may regard it with profit.

The Market for Speed Horese.

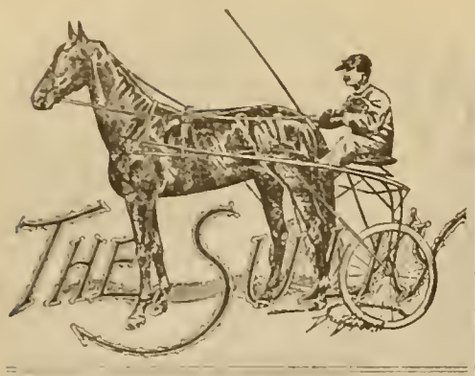
The Fasig & Co. sale in New York has given us a fair idea of the market for road and speed horses. The market is slightly better than one year ago, and this sale has demonstrated an active demand for speed horses of quality and style. For this kind the advance in price over a year ago is quite marked. For outclassed race horses that are not good for the road, and for broodmares and colts prices ruled about the same as last year.

Doubtless there are just as many persons who love speed horses and would like to possess them, as ever, but the number who are able to own them is somewhat less. Twenty-five years ago a road driver was equipped with respectability with a good-looking 2:40 trotter; now a 2:20 trotter, on any fashionable driveway of any of our larger cities is without either admiration or recognition. It has been remarked that Robert Bonner paid a fair price for Praytell, 2:09¼, $5,100; but how many Praytells are there in the United States? Not over a dozen, and as for behavior, temper and road qualities there are not over five of his extreme speed. And how many road drivers are there now in this blissful land of multi-millionaires who would love to possess a road horse like Praytel ? Probably five hundred.

W. H. Clark, who is building a new trotting track near New York, says the Association will be run on lines of the Coney Island Jockey Club, the affairs to be conducted by a small board, while members will supply pay for the privilege of the club house and to witness the races.

Split Silk, 2:09¼, instead of being bought by Ed. Mills, of Boston, was purchased hy C. W. Marks, of Chicago, owner of Joe Patchen. Ed. Tipton went to $2,600 on the mare for Marcus Daly.

The high s epper, Blucher, that won three hlne rih bons at the Cleveland Horse Show, has heen hought by T. W. Lawson of New York City, for $2 800.



TWO IN THREE IS WANTED.

Eastern Trotting Men Generally Favor Adopting This System.

Reports from the East are to the effect that trotting horse owners on the other side of the big river are pretty generally expressing themselves as favoring the two in three heat system, and that an effort is to be made to induce the National Trotting Association to take action in the matter and call a special meeting at which the subject can be carefully considered of changing from the old three in five rule.

What appeals strongest to owners and trainers is the fact that their horses under the two in three plan are not pumped out but are able to start in two races a week without injury to themselves. We do not doubt but that our friend Samuel Gamble, who is now in the East and who saw and took part in the Santa Rosa meeting this year, where the two in three plan prevailed, will give the Eastern horsemen some pointers as to how the system worked out here. There is no question but the three in five plan is getting to be disliked by those who sit in the enlkies as well as those who sit in the grand stands.

Another change in the management of meetings will be inaugurated on some eastern tracks this year. The program will begin and the first race be called promptly at 2 P M. i - stead of at 1 o'clock. The day's program will not be long—three races, all two in three, will be on the c rd— and an effort will be made to dispatch them as quickly as possible.

The light harness horse has become so popular in the East that road riding is again the vogue with all who can afford it, and the price of a good horse is rising every day. There are splendid tracks being built in many eastern cities where road driving has not been heretofore indulged in to any great extent, while the associations all over the country are already claiming dates for their meetings of 1898. It looks as though the light harness horse will outrival the runner in popnlarity next year.

Sirss of 2:10 Trotters.

Chimes, 3:30¾, son of Electioneer, has now supplanted his sire as the foremost progenitor of 2:10 trotters. With Fantasy, 2:06 at four years; The Monk, 2:08¼ at four years, The Abbot, 2:08 at five years, he has now a reputation in the trotting 2:10 circle that places him high above the others. Following him is his sire, with Arion, 2:07¾; Sunol, 2:08¼, and Palo Alto, 2:08¼, and they two stand head and shoulders above all other sires of trotters in the most select circle. Chimes' three trotters have an average record of better than 2:08 quite a bit, while the average mark of Arion, Sunol and Palo Alto is exactly 2:08¼. In Chimes' list are two world's records, that for four-year-old trotting fillies, and that for geldings of the same age and gait, while The Abbot, if not a "world beater," has shown speed enough already to warrant the prediction that next year, if he has no bad luck between now and the opening of next season, he will set a new worlds championship mark, at least for his kind. The Abbott made a glorious campaign during the past season and, altogether, Chimes' three representatives in the 2:10 list are of very high class. This year the Electioneers have done much honor to the dead hero of Palo Alto. Bingen trotted the fastest mile of the year, equaled the five-year-old stallion record, trotting, and generally proved himself in the first class. When Nico entered the 2:10 list, Arion stepped into the unique position of being the only trotting sire in the 2:10 list to be represented therein by one of his get. An unfortunate accident, due to the negligence of a groom, caused Nico to be laid off for a brief space, and the way the gelding stepped when only partially recovered proved that had he but had better luck he would have gone a much faster mile. There are several stallions with marks of 2:10 or better, pacing and trotting, that now figure as sires of pacing performers in that circle. Lookheart, 2:08¾, with La Belle, 2:09; Direct, 2:05¼, with Directly, 2:03¼; Gazette, 2:07¼, with Aileen, 2:07¼, etc.; and Arion, 2:07¾ trotting, with Nico, 2:08¼, same gait, stands alone. It would be a hard task to pick out all the great performers of the past season that carry the Electioneer blood—Annie Lee, 2:07¼; Bellwood A, 2:07½; Klatawah, 2:05½; Lady of the Manor, 2:07¾; Bingen, 2:06¾; Nico, 2:08¼, etc , etc , all having a liberal infusion thereof. This, without going more deeply in particulars, is enough to establish Electioneer fairly at the head of the list, the names of such as Tommy Britton, 2:09¾; Jasper Ayres, 2:09½; Dione, 2:09¼, etc., only serving to emphasize this fact—Chicago Horseman.

Sam Gamble's Consignmsnt.

NEW YORK, December 2, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: —It might be of interest to far west readers of tbings horsey were I to pen a few lines anent to the Fasig sale as pertains to California stock. Mr. Gamble's horses were the best shipped lot ever put in the roomy basement boxes; all smooth, fatter than when carred at Oakland the 21st of November, not a sick one, and created a sensation in the ring whenever stepped, because schooled for the public eye.

The prices averaged well and considering there were some youngsters not entered in stakes, they sold surprisingly. McKinney's little shaver of a son El Milagro stepped the miniature track like ready money, and he was a $700 colt when the "all in, I sell him" was sounded. Silver Ring, 2:14½, is now a Saratoga belle and will certeinly clean out all the trotters there. She showed a terrific clip and was always on a trot. How could they do otherwise than bid her up to $1,500? It was her best race this year from an owner's standpoint, winning the big end of the day's money in the Madison Square Garden.

We sold Margaret Worth, 2:15, and Mr. Havermeyer landed her at $1,000. How she did step! She is the kind for speedway use and attracted a whole lot of attention. Pretty, clear-gaited, toppy mares like her are the kind and there are yet customers for that sort. Our youngsters did well—$1,000 for Mnta Wilkes' two-year-old brother—is a sample. He didn't have to show, for his new owner Senator McCarthy owns Fred S. Moody, 2:14, and purchased as a mere matter of sentiment. He will be a trotter by and by for the family is a low-teen one all the way down.

King Directum, 2:05¼, stood the long shipment like a major, despite the fact we only shifted "Burton's" at Chicago and not a lay down from Ogden. His new owner was busy receiving congratulations and booking mares all week. Stallion owners in California should not grow over-enthusiastic all at once. The 2:05¼ sort may sell at $20,000, but it is not easy to get over a couple thousand dollars for the ordinary sort. Mr. Spier tells me every horse in California has been offered him and listed the prices Why, it is ridiculous what values were there expressed as "the bottom dollar," and then, too, the gentleman is not desirous of purchasing any more stallions, having at The Suburban Farm already: Directum, 2:05¼; Keeler, 2:13¾; Jefferson Wilkes, 2:14¼; Adbell, 2:23; quite a quartette one would think.

Of late he has been a very liberal buyer, but as he has at Glen Falls some 160 head he must thin out rather than reinforce his stud and it will be no surprise to read of a clearing sale this spring.

One word to your California breeders and I am done: Enter in eastern stakes, then if the youngsters show well here, it is money returned ten-fold when Mr. Gamble gets them in the ring at Madison Square Garden.

Yours, etc., EVERETT L. SMITH,
"Percy."

California Stallions Sold East.

The New York Spirit of the Times had the following to say of the arrival of Directum at Madison Square Garden, New York. Our readers will note the advice given wealthy Californians in the last paragraph:

"The famous champion trotting stallion Directum was shown in the sales ring at Madison Sqnare Garden on Wednesday night, and he has filled out wonderfully since he made his marvelous mile at Fleetwood Park, when he went down to the half-mile pole in 1:00½. He is now a decidedly handsome horse and reminds one of the fact that California has lost the last and greatest of its equine champions. There was a time when California bought high-class stock from the East, but for some years the tide has been all the other way. Here are a few of the great ones who have come East during the past decade: Arion, 2:10¾, as a two-year-old, bought for $125,000; Stamboul, 2:07½, bought for $41,000; Anteeo, 2:16¼, bought for $25,000, and later on sold for $50,000; Guy Wilkes, 2:15½; Sable Wilkes, Freedom, Director, 2:17; Direct, 2.05¼; Directly, 2;03¼; Bell Boy, Conductor, St. Bel, and a host of others, the very pick and flower of the stock farms of the Pacific slope, so that it looks as if the time is not far distant when California will cease to be one of the great trotting horse breeding States. This is to be deplored, and it is to be hoped that some wealthy Californians will go again into the business and replace the State in its former high position. California by virtue of its climate can raise horses to advantage and no horse has paid it better than the American trotter."

There are quite a number of high-class stallions left in Californoia and many good broodmares. All that is needed to keep California in the front renk is the intelligent mating of these animals and the training of the produce.

THE two year-old filly Ecstasy, 2:10½, by Baron Wilkes, out of the dam of Impetuous, 2:13, hes not only proved that she is a pacer of the highest class, but is also now showing that she is somewhat of a trotter as well. After giving her the world's record for two-year old pacers, Mr. Marvin took her to Ashland Park Stock Farm and concluded that he would try and convert her to the trot, She seems to take to the diagonal gait nicely, and he has been working her at that way of going ever since. A few days ago he concluded to speed her to the half, and she forthwith showed the veteran record-maker that she was very fast at her new way of going by trotting the half-mile in 1:07 flat.

THE FIVE HEAVIEST WINNERS.

Pa Hamlin Leads This Year With Thos. Keating a Good Second.

It is not an extraordinary thing on the running turf for a stable to win $100,000 in stakes and purses in a season, and there are instances where a single horse has earned that much money in a season. But on the trotting turf such a thing is impossible, for the system of racing on trotting tracks precludes such a possibility, and the purse money is more evenly and more widely divided. The most successful stable of the year, that of the Hamlin's of Village Farm, Buffalo, earned $36,580. The Hamlins—C. J. and Harry—are wealthy men, and with few exceptions breed all the horses they campaign. The stable is managed by E. F. Geers, who drives most of their campaigners.

The last season their horses won twenty-eight races and were placed in twenty-seven others. This work was done by eight trotters and two pacers, all home-bred but the outsider Tommy Britton. The leading winner of the string was the four-year-old pacing filly, Lady of the Manor, 2:07¾, who was first ten times in the thirteen starts and won $11,600. The Abbot, 2:08, leads the trotters with seven races won out of ten starts and $8,300. With its good luck this stable had also much misfortune, as several of its most promising horses went wrong early in the year, notably The Monk and American Belle, who won heavily in 1897, while one, Milan Chimes, dropped dead in his first race at Hertford, Conn., in July.

Next the Hamlin stable ranks that of Thomas Keating of Pleasanton, Cal., which was composed of five horses, the property of various owners. Owing to Keating's ill-health, however, most of the races were driven by M. E McHenry. For its size this stable did wonders, as one horse, William Harold, started but twice, winning only $425 out of the $30,050 credited to the stable. The other four were the pacers Searchlight, 2:03½, winner of nine races and $10,750; Aosconds, 2:04½, winner of nine races and $8,625, and Klatawah, 2:05½, winner of seven races and $5,500, and the trotter Dione, 2:09¼, winner of four races and $4 750

Scott Hudson of Kentucky is third, but there is a big gap between his stable and Keating's, as his winnings footed up to but $19,925 His was also a public stable, which shifted in its make-up quite a bit during the year. His heaviest winner was the pacing mare Annie Lee, 2:07½, who captured $6,200, and his best trotter Eagle Flanagan, 2:07¼, who won $5,850. He drove fifteen winning races during the season.

George West, the popolar Chicago trainer, is a very close fourth with his Gretna Farm stable, the property of various, and principally Chicago, owners, His horses won fifteen races and $19,425, and his largest winner was the pacing mare Redinda, 2:07¼, with $4 975. Almost all his horses were pacers. Maggie Lass, 2:14¼, was his best winning trotter, with $1,725 to her credit.

Fifth on the list is the East View Farm stable of the New York millionaire grocer, James Butler, managed and driven by "Directum" John Kelly, who with only four horses won $18,925. The star of the stable was its trainer's namesake, Directum Kelly, 2:08¾, who won eight races without a single defeat.

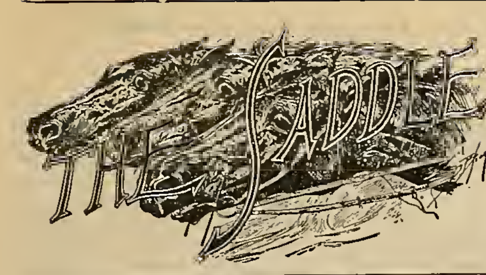
The Care of Harness.

Good management has saved many men from bankruptcy. There ere so meny ways around a stable where economy may practiced, a little prudent care exercised, which all means money sayed. The care of harness is a very important factor. Mr. L. O. Fallo of Minnesote gives the results of his own experience, and they are worthy of consideration. He advises that the harness he given a good oiliog at least once a year. Take it apart so that every portion can be cleaned and well oiled. If the harness is badly soiled, wash before oiling. Soak in soapsuds made by dissolving a small quantity of hard soap in enough water to cover the harness perfectly. Soak, then use a stiff brush and carefully remove every particle of dirt, then rinse thoroughly in lukewarm water. Always dry the harness in a shady place so that the leather will not become stiff and hard. After the water has dried off perfectly, but while the leather is still soft, apply some good harness oil. After a couple of hours, if there be any superfluous oil left that did not penetrate the leather wipe it off or it will become sticky and accumulate dust which will not come off except by scraping.

See that every part of the harness is made strong enongh for the heaviest pulling. If any part is weak have it repaired immediately. Be very particular to have good strong lines supplied with strong snaps which work well. Have the collar well fitted to the horse before commencing heavy work. The shoulders of the horse may have changed since last fall, especially if it be a young horse. In order to have a collar fit well, each horse must have its own separate collar, which should not be worn by any other horse. See that the collar is always kept clean and properly fitted and with the use of a little common sense the horse will not be likely to have sore shoulders.

If caught in a rain and the harness becomes wet, it should not be removed immediately. Cover the horse with a light blanket after being put into the barn and let the harness remain on for a couple of hours. This will prevent it becoming stiff and hard. The treatment may seem cruel to the horse, but it is far more cruel to put on the stiff, unyielding harness in the morning and make the horse work in it. When the weather is very warm in summer it will not be neceessary or even desirable to blanket the horse, but simply leave the harness on him until the water has dried off.

The harness should never be kept in a damp place, as the bits, buckles, etc., will become rusty, while the leather will mold and rot. As an example of what good care of the harness will do, I will state that I have used a pair of harness for fifteen years, and they are still good for several seasons. I have also used one pair of leather fly nets for sixteen seasons.



NAPA STOCK FARM YEARLINGS.

Fair Prices Obtained for the Youngsters Bred by A. B. Spreckels.

There was no lack of attendance at the Killip & Co.'s saleyard Tuesday night, and had there not been a scarcity of money with a majority of those present, the prices obtained for the colts and fillies sold would have been away up, as nearly every man present expressed a desire to own one or more of the grand looking youngsters. As it was, the bidding was lively and the entire consignment was sold during the evening. The twenty-six head brought $5,270, an average of $202.50. The highest bid of the sale was $425 and this was made twice, once by Mr. H. T. Oxnerd for the bay colt Bamboulia by Puryear D., out of Lista Hock, by imp. Loyalist, and again by J. O'Neill for the bay filly Zanoni by Lew Weir, out of Cattle Kate, by imp. Kingston. The prices obtained and the purchasers were as follows:

Leo Meyer May Become an Outlaw.

It is possible that an outlaw race track may be opened at Batavia, says the Chicago Times-Herald. Leo Meyer and several others have been seriously considering the advisability of the move ever since the racing season closed. Just who is interested in the matter with Meyer it is impossible to learn.

There is a man here from New York by the name of Spaulding, and he has had several conferences with the bookmaker relative to the matter. When seen concerning it yesterday Meyer admitted that he was seriously considering opening an outlaw track.

"There is a good half mile track to be had at Batavia," said he, "and this is the one I have my eye on. There is money in such a venture, and I am satisfied that I could make $75,000 this winter. There are many good outlaw horses, and their owners would be only too glad to take them to Batavia for the winter."

Of course it would be the last of Mr. Meyer's connection with legitimate tracks if he carries out his plan, and his friends say that they do not believe that he will engage in outlaw racing.

John Mathews, who has won a reputation as a good jockey, mostly on the Cincinnati tracks, has been engaged by Green B. Morris for 1899. His contract is said to be on the basis of $350 per month with $100 additional for winning mounts in stake races and $25 for winning mounts in purse races. This year Mathews has 117 wins to his credit out of 420 mounts.

A FIRST-CLASS FILLY

La Goleta About the Best of California Three-Year-Olds of 1898.

La Goleta, the chestnut daughter of Amigo and Rosebud, is undoubtedly the best three-year-old in training in these parts; she has been running most constantly of late, winning all of her starts and turning the track handily in 1:40 flat on several occasions. As a two-year-old she was in the front rank also; out of seventeen starts she was returned winner six times and she was inside the money on five other occasions. A glance at the tabulated pedigree here given will show this filly to be bred on the stoutest as well as the speediest blood lines. She is rich in the blood of Lexington and Glencoe tracing four times to each of these noted sires, while on the sire's side she traces back through Prince Charlie to Stockwell and Touchstone two of the most fashionable lines in the English Stud Book. The filly has shown herself to be of unusually high class as a race mare and on her retirement from the turf should prove invaluable as a stud matron. Her pedigree is as follows:

LA GOLETA—Ch. filly, foaled 1895

Judge Carter's Remains Found.

On Tuesday of this week, workmen engaged in clearing away the ruins of the Baldwin Hotel discovered the remains of the late Judge J. J. Carter, who lost his life during the fire which destroyed that hostelry November 23d. The remains were burned almost beyond recognition, but were identified by Manager Lake of the hotel, and others who knew the deceased in his lifetime.

Judge J. J. Carter was born in Nashville, Tenn., fifty years ago, and he came naturally by his love of the thoroughbred, for his father, "Sandy" Carter, was a patron of the turf and an ardent devotee of racing. Judge Carter graduated at Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Va., and soon after his return to Nashville became identified with the turf and he continued this connection almost continuously until his death. For a short time he was engaged in the newspaper business in Nashville, having started and managed an evening paper in the Rock City.

Along in the eighties he owned some high-class race horses. Among them were Aretino and Kerson, both stake winners. Karson was afterward named Blue Jeans and raced creditably at the Latonia meeting in 1888.

He was presiding judge at the old Nashville track and he filled a similar position at the East St. Louis, and later at Covington, Ky. For the past two years he has been on the Canadian circuit with the Palmer-Hendrie syndicate and presided at Fort Erie, Highland Park Windsor and Nashville during the past season. At the time of his death he was associate judge at the California Jockey Club's track at Oakland.

A Nashville friend thus speaks of Judge Carter: "John Carter was a clean man, an honest and upright man in every walk of life. If integrity could be a fault in a man that fault would have been John Carter's. He was never engaged in anything in which he did not distinguish himself. He was a great baseball player, could beat anybody playing marbles, was a brilliant billiard player, a fine shot and a versatile writer, who could handle any subject with the touch of an artist. He could tell you the sire and dam of any race horse in the country. At one time he owed debts of honor to the amount of $32,000, for his word was good anywhere for any amount, and he paid every cent of this money. How few men would have done this! One winter at New Orleans Reuben S. Payne gave Carter $150 and laughingly said: 'You take this and put in an equal amount and we'll form the betting firm of Payne & Carter.' John took the money and put in an equal amount and played the races at New Orleans that winter. He did not see Mr. Payne any more until next fall at Saratoga, when Payne laughingly remarked: 'By the way, what did you ever do with our $300? You never rendered me a statement.' Carter said: 'I am ready to render you a statement now.' He pulled out a paper showing just how he had bet the money and then pulled out his pocketbook and gave Payne $1,600—his part of what had been won. How many men would have done that? John Carter was one man in ten thousand, and few like him have ever been born of women."

A Post-Election Dinner.

Ex-Corporation Counsel, W. H. Clark, of New York, and Col. Wm. L. Brown, of the same city, made a little wager of $5,000 a side on the recent election and the Colonel lost as his money was on Van Wyck. Mr. Clark gave an elaborate dinner with his winnings and the Colonel acted as toastmaster. The Turf, Field and Farm states that the tables were set in the elegant stable of Mr. Clark. The carriages were taken up stairs and the floor of the great hall were richly carpeted and three sides of the room were hung with tapestries. Paintings and engravings of scenes in which the horse is a prominent figure adorned the fourth side. The tables were arranged in horseshoe form, and the lights of candelabras fell upon great banks of flowers. A medallion horse head in gold, with crimson border, was hung by means of a broad white satin ribbon, around the neck of each guest, giving to him a knightly appearance. There were forty guests. After the dinner the heavy curtains hanging on one side of the room were drawn aside, and Mr. Clark walked in leading a large and well-groomed horse. The glare of lights, the shouts and handclappings, quickly followed by an outburst from the string band, dazed the powerful animal at first, but he soon collected his wits and behaved like a gentleman. He walked the entire length of the tables and entered the hollow square, where he was permitted to browse on one of the huge banks of flowers and to drink champagne from a bowl. The climax was reached when a well-known stock broker leaped upon the back of the horse and posed in effective style. It was a thrilling scene and the exquisite glass and chineware was not damaged. Four Shetland ponies followed the horse into the hollow square, but their reception was tame as compared with that given to the big fellow.

Fifty Horses on the Stage.

Fifty blooded horses are used in the presentation of "Shenandoah" at McVicker's theater, Chicago. No stage production in the world has ever called for so many animals on the stage at one time. These horses are so well trained that they know their cues like veteran actors. The special pride of the "hunch," as Mr. Helsey terms his herd of sleek pets, is Jack, the horse which is supposed to belong to Gertrude Ellingham, and is ridden by General Sheridan in his dash across the stage. Jack is a thoroughbred, of well known racing stock, and was seen on many tracks before he took to a theatrical life. He is a fine animal standing sixteen hands high and black in color. He knows his cues better than the man who tends him, and one night last week saved a stage wait by walking up to the window in the first act to be fed sugar plums without his groom, who was busy talking in some other part of the stage, oblivious to his duties.

"I selected the horses from a great many offered, choosing those with broad, intelligent heads tapering down to slender muzzles, because I have invariably found that this characteristic bespeaks intelligence in a horse," says Mr. Helsey. "Of course size and conformation had to be considered, but I looked for the other quality first. Then I rode them around the stage in the dark and then with the lights full on. First I cantered them, then galloped them as hard as they would go. Now there is not a horse in the bunch that will not double around the back drop like a jack rabbit at full speed. It is the most difficult thing they have to do, as it is done at full speed, and a fall means a pilling up of men and horses that would be disastrous.

Then I took them out in an open field and let off some crackers. It took some time to get them used to the firing of guns and flashing of lights, but they do not mind it now and do not flinch when the big cannon goes off right under their noses. Patience and good temper are the secrets of success; I pet them a great deal. I have never struck them or used them harshly, and I do not allow my men to do so, as it is possible to handle fifty men properly, and so far we The consequence is that we handle fifty horses in as little room have not had an accident. One of the horses has a scar on his shoulder, but this was done in unloading from the stock car at the station the other day. The platform leading from the car to the ground was not properly secured and it slipped and fell. The horse fell with it and hurt himself pretty badly, but he is healing up now, and that scar adds a touch of realism to the battle scene, they tell me.

It is a great treat to have the horses with the company. I am very fond of riding and have plenty of it now, for the horses have to be exercised, and I generally have a good spin on Jack every day. Miss Hampton and Mr. Barrymore also ride a great deal, and there is scarcely a day that they do not offer to exercise a couple of the horses, and the boys who have the work of taking them out are not sorry to have help. Miss Hampton always likes to ride Jack and Mr. Barrymore likes the chestnut which Miss Hampton rides on the stage when she is brought in a captive of war. He is a fine jumper and Mr. Brarymore loves a run across country with a few stiff obstacles in the way. He is an Englishman, you know, and a great cross-country rider."

Australian News

The last mail from Australia brought news of the annual meeting of the Victoria Jockey Club.

Boadhil, the sensational colt by Bill of Portland, although a 1-to-3 favorite, went down to defeat in the Victoria Derby, which was won in a terrific drive by Cocos, a son of Abercorn, Carbine's great rival on the Australian turf. The Melbourne Stake at one mile and a quarter was decided on the opening day, Battalion beating The Grafter by a short neck. Both horses carried 125 pounds. Amberite finished third. Pluto, by Goz, captured the Hotham Handicap. Scorn, a brown colt by Bill of Portland, proved an easy winner in the Marchynong, and he promises to be a winner favorite for next year's Derby. Sailor Boy, by Goz, annexed the Coburg Stake for Oxenham, the lavisthan bookmaker. Symmetry, by Trenton, defeated a field of thirty in the Railway Handicap at six furlongs. Revenue, also a son of Trenton, won the Nursery Handicap for two year-olds.

The Melbourne Cup, a handicap at two miles of $125 each, with $15,000 added by the Association, had twenty-four starters, and was won after a grand struggle by The Grafter, who beat Wait a Bit half a neck, while the gallant colt Cocos was third. It was the impression of good judges that Wait a Bit should have won, but he got blocked between The Grafter and Cocos at the finish. Clarion was made favorite for the race at the last moment, going to the post at 5 to 1, while Maseniesa and The Grafter were 6 and 7 to 1 respectively. War God, a 50 to 1 chance, finished fourth, and next in order came The Chief, Plutus, Thunder Queen and Amberite. The Grafter carried the solid impost of 126 pounds, and his victory was a very popular one, as he was heavily backed by the public. The gate receipts on Cup Day were $10,000 more than in 1897.

The Grafter followed up his Cup win by capturing the Flying Stake at seven furlongs, beating the 1-to-4 favorite, Boadhil. Symmetry, by Trenton, captured the Oaks Stake for three-year-old fillies. On the fourth day of the meeting Cocos again defeated Boadhil for the Spring Stake at one mile and a quarter. The Grafter secured the C. B. Fisher Plate at two miles, beating Battalion and Amberite. Elusive by Trenton, won the final handicap at one mile and a quarter in the wonderfully fast time of 2:07¾ for an Australian track.

Tirant d'Ean, boasting a strain of Musket blood, recently captured the New Zealand Cup.

Directum's New Home.

Glens Falls, New York, is close to the foot of the Adirondacks and is a city of 35,000 inhabitants. It is a horse loving town, says Turf, Field and Farm, and when the snow falls carnival begins. There is a mile stretch without cross streets, and here many rivalries are settled. The bells jingle merrily and the trotters and pacers, entering into the spirit of the occasion, do their best to head the procession. The Suburban Stock Farm is three miles from the center of the city, and it is one of the great breeding and training establishments of the country. Mr. W. E. Spier is a man of pluck and discrimination, and he has bought what he considered the best, without regard to price. His residence is one of the handsomest in the city, and near it is a commodious stable in which some of his equine jewels find shelter. Robert McGregor, who died a few days ago, was for quite a while at the head of the Suburban Farm, and many of his descendants are owned there.

The stallion cost Mr. Spier $35,000, and he proved a good investment. He paid for him in stud fees. Directum 2:05¼ who holds the stallion record, made in his four-year-old form, now occupies the box built for Robert McGreggor, and the people of Glen Falls are proud of this fact. A horse with the commanding reputation of Directum cannot do otherwise than widely advertise the place in which he is owned The son of Director and Stem Winder cost Mr. Spier $20,000 and the indications are that he will return good interest on the money. The desire to send choice mares to him is quite general. Adhal, who holds the yearling record, 2:23, is also at this farm. Did you ever think what a great effort is required for a yearling a mere baby, to draw a sulky and a man weighing 150 lbs. a mile in 2:23? If not put on your study cap the next time you attempt to drive your mature roadster a mile in 2:30. Adhell is a brown horse, five years old, by Advertiser, 2:15½ (son of Electioneer and Lulu Wilkes, by George Wilkes), dam Beautiful Bells, 2d dam Minnehaha. It is not necessary to elaborate the pedigree.

There is a grand collection of brood mares, selected from the leading money winning and fast record families of America. Mr. Spier is one of the gentlemen who have stiffened the backbone of the trotting horse breeding industry, and it will be gratifying to record his success. His stable should win some of the valuable prizes for 1899, and at Suburban Stock Farm he should produce horses of speed with constitutions sufficiently rugged to stand the training ordeal.

Sir Modred and Artillery Yearlings.

Referring to the sales of the Haggin yearling fillies the "Special Commissioner" of the London Sportsman wrote:—"The whole sale was a really remarkable success, all things considered, but breeders in this country need be under no apprehension that the market will in future be swamped by American yearlings. The forty-two sold today were a picked lot, and I know of my own experience that you do not readily find such fillies in America. If, as a consequence of their first success, American breeders should send moderate stock across for sale here—well, buyers will soon interpose their veto. Mr. Haggin, we may take it, will send us a lot each year now, but they will only be such as he thinks sufficiently good to do him credit here. The average of 173 guineas for 42 lots must be quite a remunerative one, for the cost of rearing them at the Rancho del Paso Stud must be vastly less than in England, and then there are no such things as high stud fees, though, of course, Mr. Haggin has given good prices for his stallions, of which he has about thirty.

The Sir Modred and Artillery youngsters sold as follows:

F by Artillery—Beryl, by Sir Modred; Mr. E. Cassell	$2,300
F by Artillery—Brazilia, by Ben Ali; Mr. T. Weldon	530
F by Artillery—Emotion, by Falsetto; Capt. Laing	850

W. H. B—I have a well-bred two-year-old brought in from pasture; it was mouth-sore and afraid of its mouth. In trying to back it from stall it turned its head very quickly and caught eye on a sharp corner of shelf. Bloody water came from pupil of eye and it is swollen badly. Can anything be done to save eye; what is the best to use on it?

Answer—I am afraid that the eyeball is burst, and that the aqueous humor, or fluid in the interior chamber of the eye, has escaped. For the pain and inflammation bathe the eyelids and surrounding parts for fifteen or twenty minutes, morning and evening with a decoction of poppy heads, in luke-warm water, two poppy heads, to about a quart of warm water. To this decoction about ten minims of carbolic acid, as an antiseptic. Make a pad of soft cloth, or lint, about eight inches square, and a quarter of an inch in thickness, to place over the eye as a protection against further injury, which may be caused by the horse rubbing his head against the stall, etc. Smear the eyelids and the inside of this protecting pad with the following ointment:

Boracic acid, a dram and a half.
Hydrochlorate of cocaine, 20 grains.
Sulphate of atropine, 10 grains.
Carbolic acid, 5 grains.
Vaseline, 4 ounces.

Back the horse into the stall and tie him on each side to the stall posts to prevent him rubbing his eye against anything.

"VIRGINIA" CARROLL left Tuesday for New Orleens. He did not like the game here.

JACK o' LANTERN broke down in his race and will be shipped heck to the Hohart ranch tomorrow.

THERE will he no running meeting at Detroit next year unless a favorable hill can he put through the Legislature.

THE Oakland track authorities will hereefter require owners to pay jockeys hafore sending their horses to the post

THE inside track at New Orleans on which the horses receive their work in wet weather, has a coating uf crushed cinders and is never muddy.

THE price leid against La Goleta in her last two starts hes certainly heen liberal. It looks as though nothing around these parts can heat her going a mile.

DAN HONIG was one of those who thought that Frohmen was a good thing and placed his checks accordingly. As Dan is not piking any mora he must have made a nice winning.

QUITE an improvement was noticed in the starting at Oakland on Saturday. Mr. Ferguson got his fields away in very good ehape, notwithstanding the fact they were unusually large unes.

IN the two-yeer old race Wednesday Hennessey and Beauchamp crowded Thorpe into the rail and neerly caused a serious accident. Thorpe was hadly hrnised and unahle to ride the other mounts for which he had heen engaged.

IMP. CINDERELLA, the dem of Plaudit, Hastings, Ferries Handsome and Glenheim, had her first filly foal this year—a chestnut, hy Spendthrift (conseqnantly full sister to Hastings). Tnis famous producer is now in foal to Hindoo.

THERE arrived at the Beaumont Stud a few days ago that famous and favorita racehorse Sir Walter. It is not likely he will he seen on a race course again, thongh when he went to Kentucky last winter it was reported then he would he permanently retired.

JUDGE CHARLES F. PRICE leaves Saturday night for a flying trip to Kentucky. He will return when the Oakland racos hegin again. Mr. Price will take with him the remains of the late Jodge John J. Carter, who was hurned to death in the Baldwin fire.

IT is now given out that the sale of Buck Massie at the Woodward & Shanklin auction did not go. He was hid in for hie owner, J. M. Murphy, and, it is reported, has since heen sold privataly to E. H. Potter, said to ha of Chicago. Horse sales, like horse races, are sometimes "mighty unsartain."

JESSE MATTHEWS, who has won a reputation as a good jockey, mostly on the Cincinnati tracks, has heen engaged hy Green B. Morris for 1899. His contract is said to he on the hasis of $350 per month, with $100 additional for winning mounts in stake races and $25 for winning mounts in purse races. This year Matthews has 117 wins to his credit out uf 420 mounts.

MARSH REDON and Johnny O'Neil hung out their ehingles in the ring yesterday for the first time this seeson. They will prove a welcome addition to the ring, as several hooks have withdrawn during the past few days. The past two weeks at Oakland has financially embarrassed several of the gentlemen of the chalk, but the larger hooks will stick it out and trust to hetter times to come.

THE following are the conditions of an extra race to he run at Ingleside, on Monday, Decemher 12th, the entries to which will close to-morrow at noon. Selling, Purse $400, uf which $50 to second, and $25 to third horse. For all ages that have not won two races this year. The winner to he sold at auction for $300. Two-year-olds to carry 100 lhs., three-year-olds 110 lhs., and four-year-olds and upward 115 lhs. One mile.

AN English cahle announces the sale of the six-year-old horse, the Rush, to an American sportsman. The Rush is one of the hest hred and stoutest hearted thoroughhreds raced in the past threa years, hy Barcaldine, out of Whirlpool, she hy Seesaw. The Rnsh comes from two great turf families, and will he a valuable addition to our ever increasing list of imposted sires. In the Chester cup of 1897, The Rush carried 117 pounds, and ran the distance tha raca calls for, two and one quarter miles, in record time, winning qnita cleverly. In the Cesarewitch last year Tha Rush was asked to concede twelve pounds and a heating to Merman and only failed to do so hy a neck. The present season Tha Rnsh captured the Qneen's Gold vase at the Ascot meeting, and finished second for the $50,000 Jockey Clnh cup.

PRESIDENT T. H. WILLIAMS, JR., of the California Jockey Club, returned from his flying trip to the East Friday. He spent a week at Washington and was at Bennings for two days. He did not go East for the purpose of eecuring horses, as was reported. While there he was questioned hy several owners regarding tha axpenses, etc., uf hringing a string to this Coast, and he expecte a number of naw arrivals during the coming month.

O. H. CHENAULT, Lexington, Ky., has purchased of J. N. Camden, Jr., the latter's interest in the etallion Spendthrift, and the horse has heen moved from the Hartland Stud to Mr. Chenault's farm near Lexington Spendthrift is hy imp. Australian, dam Aerolite, hy Lexington, and is now twenty-two years old, having heen foaled in 1876. Ha is one of tha most fashionahla sires in the country, is in good health and vigorous condition, and has a prospec. of several years of useful service.

S. C. HILDRETH, who has been installed at Wheatley for the past six weeks, has a string of thirty horses, including fourteen yearlings. Of tha latter hut little is known of their running ahilities, as until qnite recently they had heen doing only trotting and cantering exercisee. There are, however, some vary likely lookers in the lot, and in the hands of a trainer of Hildreth's ahility they will not suffar in the matter of careful handling, as there are hut few men in the husinese that can give him points in the conditioning of a string of race horses and in placing them where they helong.

IN a corral at Fairlawn, Lexington, Ky., the Breeders' Mutual Protective Association now have a number of old thoroughhred mares purchased at the Lexington sales. The idantity of thesa old mares is forever gone. As soon as they are purchased the sale ring tags and numhars ara taken from them and they are hunched together to await the coming of a sufficient number to make up a consignment to some Southern city, whera they will he sold for farm purposes. The money thus realized will revert to the fund and he used to purchase more mares considered hy the Association's egents unfit for further hreeding purposes.

IN the course of the last week the principal subject of discussion among horsemen and racing men generally has heen tha Hon. W. C. Whitney's views in regard to tha starting problem and the most conservative are of the opinion that some stern measures must he adopted to save the sport from hecoming utterly damoralized. There is, however, much general satisfaction at Mr. Whitney's active interest in the sport, and as a prominent trotting horse man remarked, it is well for the turf that a gentleman of Mr. Whitney's caliher was taking such an active interest, and that he only wished that such interest lay in the trotting end of the game.—New York Telegraph.

JOCKEY GOUIN has heen suspended for his ride on May W. the other day. The stewards hava the matter under investigation, and their judgment will he announced in a few days. Without anticipating it, thare is little that can ha said in Gonin's favor. He is an inveterate gamhler. When he can he plays as high as anyhody, hut when he can't nothing is too cheap for him. I have seen him maka tha circle of a keno game, hegging somehody to stake him to a ten-cent card. Whether he is honest or not I do not care about saying, although I have my own notion regarding it. One thing is certain, however, ha is a mighty had jockey and he will not he missed. If the judges and stewards, while they are about it, would incapacitate Holmes, Gray, Snider, Ward, and a few more of that sort from riding, they would ha doing something racegoers would appreciate.—Daily Racing News.

KOKOMO, Ind., Decemher 3.—Jockey Tod Sloan, who last week arrived in New York from Europe, is expected hare in a few days to visit his adopted parents, he having writtan that he will ha in Kokomo to make an (for him) extended visit with tha kind of people who took him ont of the gutter fifteen years ago and gave him a home. His benefactors, D. G. and Mrs. Blouser, have hardly had a glimpse of him sinca he hegan ridiog, and the famous jockey will be warmly welcomed on his return home, not only hy the proud foster parents, hut hy the citizens generally. Though his visits home have been few and short, Tod has each year forwarded his regards in tha form of valuahle presents, including checks of considerahle amount. The Blousers ara in moderate circumstances and the remittances were highly appreciated. Tod says he will spend the winter in America, returning to England in April to ride for the Beresford and Prince of Wales stables. He expects to remain two years ahroad, and will accept no American engegements. During his brief trip abroad he won 45 out of 100 mounts.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—It is prohahla racing at Hawthorne will next season ha carried on under entirely different auspices from those which hava controlled it sinca its inception. Owing to his quarrel with Brenock, Mr. Corrigan and his friends, who held the controlling interest, sold the property to E. A. Fitzgerald, of the Stock Yards, who himself held a faw shares in tha racing association. It was claimed at the time that this was not a hona-fide transaction, hut later events have proved that it was.

A. S. Trude, the wall known lawyer of this city, held a mortgage on the property for eome $100,000, for money loaned to keep tha association going. Since Mr. Fitzgerald, secured the property he has heen industriously paying off his debt. One check for $30,000 and two each for $20,000 proved that $70,000 has heen paid off, and Monday another $20,000 on tha Drovers' National Bank certified, will he handed to Mr. Trnde. It would hava heen given him yester day, hut Mr. Trude was not at his office.

If a racing hill can he ohtained it is the intention of tha owners of the track to try to leasa it to some prominent Southern breeders who hava racing thoroughly at heart. Thare will be no syndicata hookmaking, and the interests of the hreeders, owners and general public will he considered. Of course, this will depend on the passage of a racing hill, for without it neither the Southern gentlemen who are taking an interest, nor the proprietors, will move a hand.

THE prices ohtained for tha Spreckels yearlings at the sale Tuesday evening were most absurdly low. Tha youngsters were royally hred and from producing dams and sires hesides heing far above tha average as individuals. Such prices as were received for the lot were not calculated to encourage hreeders, as it does not speak highly for the horse sense of the horsemen here who failed to take advantage of an unusual opportunity to secnre high class material for winning race horsee.

GALOPIN heads the list of winning sires in England this season, though the exact emount of the winnings of his produce cannot he stated as yet. Up to November 19th, eleven of his get had won eighteen races, placing a total of $108,490. Bona Vista, Ayrshire, Gallinule and St, Simon ceme next in the order named. Galopin is in his twenty-seventh year and Vidette's greatest son is a genuina patriarch That he should t such a great ega head tha list of winning sires is so fer as we know an unprecedented feat.

ACCORDING to the following, which was clipped from a Kentucky paper, Col. Jack Chinn, who is well known in these parts, appears to he in hot water over the sale of Lissak to the Hon. W. C. Whitney. "An attachment suit was filed i the Fryette Circuit conrt this afternoon against Colonel. Jack Chinn to satisfy a judgment against him for $4,250, given in favor of Bettie L. Crawford in 1894. In her petition she says the sharifi reported ha could find no property helonging to Chinn, and tha judgment wes never satisfied Morgen Chinn, Kit Chinn, W. T. Woodard, Elliott Shanklin, Sidney Paget, E. M. Norwood, F. D. Knight, Richardson Gibson, W. F. Dickerson, and W. H. Forsythe are made partiee to the suit, the ohject of the plaintiff heing to secure a settlement of her claims out of the proceeds of the sale uf the Leonatus stud of thoroughhreds sold at Woodard & Shenklin's sale. Sidney Paget and several of tha other gentlemen named were purchasers at the sale, and they were made parties to the snit, as it is understood that all of the money has not yet heen peid for Lissak and othei horses sold hy the Messrs. Chinn."

SPEAKING of tha long distance rece run last week at Bennings, Black and Blue, of the New York Mail and Express, says: The gentlemen of the Washingtun Jockey Club deserve the hroadest congratulations upon the success of the Washington Cup Not in several years has there heen a rece so closely contested over a distance of ground. Tha head-and-head finish among three horses at the end of two miles and a quarter reminded many racegoers of the femous finish many years ego at Monmouth Park, when Laggard, Firenzi and Hanover went past the judges haads together in one of the most noted long distance races of the generation. All competant judges agree that Maher, who won on Jeffarson, could have won either on Maurice or on Warrenton, the two which fought ont the finish with him. Maher, after passing the mila and a quarter post, let out a link on Jefferson and cleverly stole three lengths hefora tha other hoys realized the young jockey's generalship. Then for the last mile there wae a steady drive, with Maurice and Warrenton gaining hy inches at every jump; hut Jefferson stayed long enough to win by a narrow margin.

THE New Memphis Jockey Club's epring meeting of 1899 will he run from April 8th to 29th with many liheral improvements over last year's program. Eleven stekes will be opened, including the Tennessee Derby and Tennessee Oaks for 1900, entries to which close January 1, 1899 There will he four two-year-oid stakes, all of which have $1,000 added excepting a selling sweepstakes which has $1,000 guaranteed. The events for three-year-olds are the Tennessee Derby, $3,000 added; Luehrmann Hotel Stakee, $1,500 guaranteed, and Tennessee Oaks, $1,000 edded In addition there will ha three stakes for three-year olds and upward. viz.: Montgomery Handicap, $2,000 added; Peahody Hotel Handicap, $1,500 guaranteed, and Tennessee Brawing Company Stakes (selling), $1,000 added Thera will also ha the Cotton Steeplechase stakes, $750 added. The Tennessea Derby for 1899 closed last January with 119 nominations, of which twenty-one have declared. Second declarations are due January 1, and ninety-eight of the original entries are eligible. With only six starters, next yeer's Derby will he worth in excess of $7,000. The Tennessee Oaks of next year will he worth $2,700, as tha originel entry list embraced fifty-six nominations. Last year tha Montgomery Handicep, which wes won hy Salvable, netted $2,170 The added money was $1,200. This year the Montgomery Handicap has $2,000 added, which will make it worth to the winner about $3,000.

The Breedars' Mutual Benefit Association has sent the hreeders all over tha country tha following letter: "Realizing the necessity of destroying many of the cheap, worthless thoroughhred mares which have been eccumulating for years, and with which our sales have heen disgraced in the past, the hreeders of Kentucky assembled this day at the Kentucky Association course, and after organizing with Col. C. F. Clay in the chair, decided upon the following feasihle and practicahla plan: A committee of three was appointed, consisting of Col. Clay, Milton Young and Mr. O. H. Chenault, to raise a common fund of $3,000 or mora to ha used in the purchase of all hrood mares and maiden fillies which are sold at a sacrifice, either in the various sales or at private sale, and ship the sama in carload lots to tha Southern and Western markets, without description or pedigrea, thus destroying their identity in the hreeding ranks as well as in the American Stud Book for tha future. It is of coursa the purpose of the committee to hushand tha fund thus acquired from tha sale of such mares, and use it from year to year until the fund is exhausted or possibly increased to that proportion which will enahla the committee to refund to the subscribers. It is confidently helieved that this small fund will result in the destruction of a thousand or more cheap hrood mares within the next two or three years, as the committee have the matter seriously at heart and will have an agent at every sala ring in Kentucky, Tennessee and elsewhere to further the project herein stated. As a hreeder, you ara vitally interested in this matter, and if you will give us that assistanca and co-operation which the project deserves it will only be a few years until we will see thoroughhred mares fetch thousands, where they now go hegging for even a hid.

EUROPEAN TROTTING METHODS.

A California Horse Considered the Best Stallion Over There.

Geo. Bodimer, an American trainer, who has been driving on European tracks during the past year, furnished a very interesting interview to the Buffalo Express recently from which the following is taken. It will be noticed that in his opinion the trotting stallion, Althanlo, 2:10, by Junio, dam Athalie, by Harkaway, bred by George Warlow, of Fresno, California, is the greatest stallion in Europe. Mr. Bodimer gives also some very interesting facts in regard to European racing and the handicapping system in vogue there. He is quoted as follows:

"Col. Kuser has proved himself the greatest in long-distance races, the fact that he occasionally makes a skip which rests him, enabling him to maintain the clip for two miles, but I think Athenio the greatest of the three, and he won nearly as much money as Kuser. He stays on a trot all the time, and is a good game horse. If the races were mile heats, two in three, Que Allen could beat both, but he cannot maintain the clip for 2,800 meters, the usual distance or about 1¾ miles. I believe Kuser won something over $11,000, while Athenio follows close with over $10,000 to his credit.

"The largest money winner on Austrian tracks was the great four year-old filly Princess Nefta, by the American horse Prince Warwick. She won the trotting Derby, worth something like $4 000 to the first horse, and in all captured about $13,500. She is owned by Herr Woss, a liberal patron of the sport, and a liberal buyer of American trotters."

Bodimer's stable raced practically every week from March 25th to the latter part of October, and all the racing was done over two tracks, one at Vienna and the other at Baden, the fashionable resort some fifteen miles from Vienna. The horses were driven from one track to the other, and there were no large freight bills staring the owner in the face as he came to the track. Another great saving is in entrance fee. In Austria the charge is but 2 per cent. to start and 1 per cent. of this is refunded if the horse is drawn. The purses range from $500 to $5,000, and the winner gets about 65 per cent. of the purse, the balance being divided proportionately among the second, third and fourth horses, so that even the fourth horse is a money winner. This is in contrast to this country, where 5 per cent. additional from winners is charged thus giving the fourth horse but his entrance back.

The handicap system is used entirely for the American trotters, though in the case of Inlanders or Austrian-bred trotters, the horses start from the same mark. The Vienna track is 1,100 meters long, or about three-quarters of a mile, and every 20 meters is marked by a post. The horses take the position as allotted by the handicapper and turn for the word which is given by the starter when he believes the horses are lined up properly. As the starter drops his flag he presses a button which rings a bell on every post, starts an electric timing clock and rings a bell in the betting ring. The fields of horses are large and the handicapper has his business reduced to a science so that generally the finishes are close and exciting, despite the fact that the horses start from different marks. The betting is generally of the Paris mutual order, and, as everybody gambles, the percentage paid the club is sufficient to meet all expenses. The charge paid for admission to the track ranges from three cents, which admits to the infield, to $1.20, the latter including a seat in principal stand. The attendance is large, and as many as 20,000 turning out to see the sport, and the horses trot no matter what the weather may be or the condition of the track. Every driver is compelled to wear a uniform, consisting of white trousers, riding boots and a coat and cap of the stable colors.

To Prevent Shying.

L. Lodian, of Paris, France, sends the American Sportsman an essay on the cause of so many accidents to road drivers, with some valuable rules for the road. Mr. Lodian is a civil engineer as well as a true sportsman, and has traveled extensively on the continent, as well as in India. Shying is the cause of more accidents on the road than any other habit. On this dangerous habit Mr. Lodian writes:

Shying is one of the most frequent causes of carriage accidents, yet with a correct knowledge of why a horse shies, and the proper use of the reins, the shying may be partially cured, and accidents often averted. A horse shies from fear, and while keeping its eyes fixed on the cause of its terror moves away from it as much as he can. The common practice of drivers is to keep pulling the rein on the side he shies on. The consequence is he runs you into danger he does not see, perhaps into a ditch, up a bank, or against some obstacles that overthrows your vehicle. You blame the horse when you yourself have caused the accident by pulling his head towards the thing he shies at. A good driver always shies before the horse, that is by noticing the prick of the ears of the horse, or by some previous acquaintance about his falling. The driver gives light but continuous snatches to the rein opposite to the side at which it is expected to shy, the horse feels that he is being pulled away from the source of terror, and passes without shying in most cases. Learners of driving, and those who wish to correct a bad habit with their horses, have only to try once or twice to be assured of the soundness of this advice, the result of forty years' experience of town and country driving with young and restive animals."

Large strings of trotters are not as popular with trainers as in former years. A few good ones are more profitable than a big crowd that are only average.

Blue Grass Notes.

[American Stock Farm.]

A telegram from Columbia, Ky., under date of November 25, says: W. J. Owsley, Jr., of Burkesville, who was the owner of the two thoroughbred saddle stallions, Red Squirrel and Brilliant, has met with a serious loss, Red Squirrel killing Brilliant. The door of the stable in which Red Squirrel was kept was, by accident, left unfastened, and during the night he got out, went to Brilliant's door, and with his teeth unfastened it. A desperate fight ensued, resulting in the death of Brilliant, Red Squirrel choking him to death. Mr. Owsley is well known over the States as a dealer in fancy horses. He paid $2,500 for Red Squirrel in Fayette county, and $1,200 for Brilliant.

The black gelding, Sampson, seven years old, by Wilton, dam Rose Sprague, (dam of McKinney, 2:11¼), by Governor Sprague, that Mike Bowerman trained over the Lexington track last season and drove a trial mile in 2:14, was sold in the Fasig sale last Saturday to Samuel Nelson, of Norfolk, Va., for $750. Sampson was one of the best matinee horses at the Lexington track last summer, and Bowerman won a number of races with him. He is a good-looking gelding, very fast, and should make a good race horse.

Wilton, 2:19¼, will be returned to Kentucky, Mike Bowerman and Brook Curry having bought him last Saturday from the consignment of Messrs Lewis & Alhaugh to the Fasig sale in New York, paying $4,100 for the great son of George Wilkes and Alley. Ed Tipton, of this city, who represented a Montana neighbor of Marcus Daly, was the contending bidder and held out in the bidding until $4,000 was reached, when he retired and Brook Curry got him on an advance of $100.

The new barn that Messrs. Smiley & Co. are erecting on West Shore street, in this city, will be 346 feet, 52 feet wide, and will have a capacity of 125 horses. A good track for showing horses will be run the entire length of the barn. The Messrs. Smiley propose to hold two or three combination sales a year and Court Day sales the second Monday in each month. Their first big sale will take place early in February. The barn will be completed in about two weeks.

Mr. W. W. Estill last week bought of Lee Thomas, the well-known dealer of this city, a handsome black gelding, six years old, and fifteen hands, two and a half inches high. This gelding was purchased for the citizens of Huntsville, Ala., and is intended as a present for Gen. Joe Wheeler. The citizens of Huntsville also ordered, to go with the gelding, from Whitman, of New York, one of his best saddles, which, together with the bridle and blanket, will cost $200. The price paid for the gelding is a private one, but it is known to be a big one.

Prize Winner.

Daredevil, 2:09¾, the big black son of Mambrino King and Mercedes, by Chimes, gained the highest honors ever won by a five-year-old trotter at the Horse Show, carrying off both the racing stallion prize for campaigners and the champion prize for stock horses. This double victory in the two important trotting classes for the week served to remind Horse Show frequenters of the very different opinion of the stallion expressed by the judges only two or three years ago. It will be remembered that Daredevil was then shown against Conquest Star and other colts, and that the judges, after looking over the lot, sent them out of the ring with the extraordinary verdict: "Not worthy of any prize." George H. Ketcham's great four-year-old trotter Crescens, 2:09¾, by Robert J. McGregor, did not answer the bugler's call yesterday when the horses were called to compete for the racing prize, and Daredevil scored an easy win over George R. Dole's bay stallion Quarterstaff, 2:16½, by Quartermaster, and Mrs. Conrad Henri Kobsel's Burlingame, 2:18¼, by Guy Wilkes. It was the consensus of opinion among experts that the Hamlins have seldom shown a more splendid specimen of the trotting horse than Daredevil. He is 16 hands high and black as a crow. In show-ring form he carries enough flesh to make him look substantial, and his contour, style and quality are not very far below the standard of his sire, the superb Membrino King. In fact Daredevil resembles "the handsomest horse in the world" quite strongly at some points. He has the same beautiful top line, with a good crest, the croup carried out high and the tail set on in a way that is pretty near perfection. His neck is put on right side up, is clean and breedy looking at the throttle, and he carries his head with a good deal of style when stirred up and animated. His body is deep and full, with well-sprung ribs, and he stands on all of his legs, as if not one of them was ailing. Daredevil was shown to halter, further handicapped by a groom who was not a foot racer, and he could not begin to show his true trotting action in the ring. Quarterstaff was placed second in the class for campaigners and Burlingame was third.

How to Rate a Two-Minute Horse.

When Star Pointer's former owner, J. A. Murphy, was asked in New York the other day if he expected to see the stallion break his record, he replied:

"To a certainty, barring accidents and bad luck. I am glad that Mr. White made a deal with McClary, because Dave knows all about the horse, and he has handled him with wonderful success for me. Just think of it. Pointer never missed a feed or had so much as a cough trouble him except once while I owned him. He traveled 14,100 miles, and was ready to fill every engagement for two years. He is better today than he was a year ago, and I shall be more disappointed than his new owner will be if he doesn't beat 1:59¼ in 1899."

"How fast do you think he can go?"

"As fast as 1:58 and maybe faster. I made up my mind before he paced that half at Belmont in 0:57¾ that he could go two halves each in 0:59, but that Philadelphia performance sort of staggered me, and I don't know now just how fast he can go."

"How would you rate him to get out of him the best mile that is in him?"

"That reminds me of something that happened out at Terre Haute last October. We were going to start him to beat the wagon record, and McClary asked me how I thought he ought to be rated. I said, 'Dave, do you remember what Monroe Salisbury said to Andy McDowell when he was going to drive Alix against the record of Nancy Hanks right here on this track?' Andy asked him about the same thing that you're asking me, and Salisbury said to him, 'Andy, you get her down to the half as fast as she can go, and bring her home as fast as the Lord will let her come.' Now that's about the way I should rate Star Pointer for a mile in 1:58."

It Cures the Worst Cases.

Mr. A. W. Edwards, a prominent horseman at Bluff City, Tenn, writes Nov. 19th as follows: "Enclosed find post-office order for one package of Quinn's Ointment. I used one package and it cured the worst case of blood spavin I ever saw." This is the universal verdict of the leading breeders and horsemen throughout the United States. For curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all hunches, Quinn's Ointment has no equal. Price $1.50, smaller size 50 cents. If you cannot find it at your druggist, address W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y.

LYNETTE, hy Lynwood; dam hy Skenandoah, was hred hy C. F. Bnnch of San Jose. Sha mada her record at that place in 1891, and was afterwards sold East. Sha is now owned by W. E. Richmond of Bnffalo, New York, and is considered one of the handsomest roadsters in that city. Sha has recently taken to pacing and can step very fast.

ONE of tha most noted animals in Nova Scotia and perhaps the oldest horse in North America, died in Hectanooga, Dighy county, in October. It was William Cann's famons old mare, 45 years old, and until a few days prior to her death sha wes constantly at work, and ahla to do a fair hit of traveling on tha road as a five-year-old wonld. She was chloroformed.

CRESCEUS, 2:09¾, was on the auctioneer's hlock ten mintes and sold for $14,000. If he takes tha world's stallion record next year, as seems most likely, he will then sall—if put up—for twice that sum in half the tima. That wonld be pretty "qnick action" on the purchaser's money, and wonld be much better than spending an hour's time in hnying a cheap horsa at a low price that wonld always remain a cheap, low-priced horse.

WHAT a speedway will do for tha interests of tha harness horse can he readily seen by the results in Naw York. Sinca tha opening of the Speedway there, prices for harness horses sóitable for tha road have taken a hig jump, and wa find also that the harness horse is not patronized by the favored few alone, hut ha is the property of the man of moderata means as well as tha millionaire—indeed, the millionaire hasn't got a monopoly of speed, even on tha New York Speedway.

LITTLE BROWN JUG, the old pacing champion who wae pansioned and turned ont at Clehurne Farm last year, has enjoyed himself in his old Tennessee homa immensely, if appearances connt. Ha rnns on hlue grass in the day and is fed and stahled at night during winter. His appatita now is ahont tha best thing ahont him and ha is in snch good condition that ha hids fair to live ten years longer. Ha has naver had a hridle on him except when shown to visitors.

ED. TIPTON, who managed tha sala of Marcns Daly'e Montana trotters, was highly pleased with tha ramarkahla average of nearly $1,400 per head which was realized from the twenty animals in the collection. But Tipton said aftar the sale was over: "Some of those horses would have brought more than donhla the money hin Montana, whera they cama from. Thera is not much of a market for fast horses ont there, hut tha miners and merchants are alraady to pay $1,000 for a pair of good-looking, hig trottars that can etep along in three minotes.

THE New York Speedway hes been prodoctive of much good since it was opened. It is responsihle for tha hoom in the horse trade, which made it possihle for the Fasig sale of trotters and pacers to rnn for two weeks in Madison Squara Garden, and for the evsr-increasing demand for all good roadsters tha sales stahles can furnish. It has furnished a stimnlus to driving, and in the great interest it hes awekened there is a promise of a revival of the scenes of thirty years ego, when Commodore Vanderbilt headed the "fur-coat" hrigade on the road up to Gaha Case's and Jndge Smith's.

A PAOPERLY managed fair is of henefit to the people at larga end should receive support from the tax fund. New York end other Stetes hold that the fair is an educational institntion end each yeer a liberal sum is put in the supply hiil for it. The prizes offered for agricnlture, horticnltnre, mannfactures, dairy products, live stock growing and domestic arts stimnlata competition end elevate standerds. Enlightenment spreads and contrihntes to the wealth and happiness of the commnnity. People are lifted ont of old rnte end progress is as certain as the rising of the snn.—Torf, Field and Ferm.

THE death of Robert McGregor and the good prices his get hronght at the recent sales in New York, have alreedy caused inquiries to he made ahout Silver Bow 2:16, ona of his best sons. Silver Bow is owned hy Geo. H. Fox, Esq., of Mokelnmne Stock Farm, Clements, Cal., and mede the season of 1898 at that place. Silver Bow's dsm was by Hamhletonian 10, and his second dam was sired by a son of that great horse. His pedigree then goes into tha thoronghhred. Silver Bow is one of the handsomest etallions in California. Of the horses shipped East by Samuel Gamhle last month, Silver Bow's daughter, Silver Ring, 2:14½, hrought the top price, $1,500.

THE well known sterling judge and turf writer, Frank Smith, of Bnffalo, pnts np a good argument against the nse of hopples, as follows: "The fact thet it is almost impossihle to sell a trotter or pacer thet hes to wear hopples for a road horse, in any of tha large cities, will induce owners and drivers to discard them in tha future to a very large extent. A hoppled horse is dangerous on tha track and an evesore on the road. I know of half a dozen Bnffalonians who are on the lookont for fast horses for the winter carnival on tha snow. Approach them with a good horse, and the first qnestion asked is: "Does he wear hopples?" If the answer is yes, they invariahly shake their heads and walk away. It is the sama in New York, where they have tha greatest speedway in tha world. Throw the hopples away, trainers and drivers, or rnin yonr prospectiva campaigner for marketahla pnrposes."

AT no time can the skill and judgment of the trainer be employed to better advantaga than in dealing with tha hahy trotter. As the "hoy is father to the man" so this fellow is father to the aged campaigner, and in hoth cases it is eqnally trne thet "just as the twig is bent tha tree's inclined." Tha most snccessful colt trainers are those who treat the yonngsters in their charga with tha greatest degrea of kindness, though I hava seen trainers who relied almost entirely upon force and sometimes even upon cruel treatment. Patienca and gentleness ara much more efficacions, and cruelty to colts should never he permitted. A hot-headed, passionate driver will have hot-headsd, passionate horses, whila a calm, even-tempered, kind driver nsually has calm, even-tempered, kind horses. Great trainers are almost nniversally good-tempered, patient men. If natnrally high tempered they learn how to control themselves. It is almost eqnally important to have good-tempered grooms, and soma owners will have no other kind.—Iconodest.

H. S. HOGABOOM, the well known horseman, dropped into tha BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office one day this week. He has jost returned from his eastern trip and is hatter looking than he used to he. He sold all tha horses he took east at fair prices, in fact he got a littla more for them than he expected. Humholdt Maid, the greatest littla trotter in the country, did not reduca her record of 2:13¾ hut won a race and several second moneys and Mr. Hogaboom drove her a trial in 2:09, and then sold her to a gentleman hy the nama of Benson in Joliet, Ill., for $1500. Mr. Hogaboom left this week for Enreka, Humholdt county, whera his stallion Waldstein has been located during his absence in the east. Ha will probahly hriog tha good son of Director down to Sacramento and make tha season of 1899 with him thera. He has a number of very promising yonngsters by his horse that he will train in tha spring and get them ready for the snmmer campaign. He was delighted with his trip East and says the trotter is the fashionahla horsa in nearly all the states east of tha Rocky Mountains, and that a good harness meeting never fails to draw tha crowds.

BLOOD will tell, and that of the old thoronghhred mare Eagless is "telling" though some of the best trotters and pacers of California. It helped the three-year-old, Who Is It to gat a record of 2:12, this year, and the pacing colt I Direct to secure a mark of 2:13 at the same age, and thera are many mora that took records in previous years that traca to tha same grand old soorca. Thera is a young horsa in California that was five years old last June and carries the hlood of Eagless in his veins, that will add still further to the fama of tha State as the homa of fast trotters. This colt was sired hy Eros, dam of Dione, 2:09½, and is ont of Francisca, tha dam of I Direct. The colt is now at the Stockton track, hut is not in actual training. His breeding conld hardly ha excelled. By one of the hest sons of Electioneer ont of one of the hest daughters of Almont that has produced three with standard speed, the second dam tha grandam of Tuna, 2:12½, the fifth dam Eagless by Glencoe, tha sixth dam the grandam of Ansel, 2:20, the seventh dam the fourth dam of Sunol, 2:08½, and on to the 23d dam the Layton Barh mare. This colt is owned by Mrs. J. B. Palmer of this city. He has naver heen trained hnt had a few months' work and trotted a trial below 2:20, last quarter in 32½ seconds. He has legs like iron, is as sound as a n... dollar and a great prospect for 1899.

San Francisco, Saturday, December 10, 1898.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY that the directors of the district agricultural associations throughout the State hold meetings forthwith and perfect arrangements by which the fairs of 1899 will be assured. Although, owing to a lack of funds, the fairs in most districts have been allowed to lapse during the past four years, the law which created the districts and provided for the annual exhibitions is still on the statute books, and only needs an appropriation of money to put it in full force and effect. When the Legislature convenes next month the district fairs will be provided for in the general appropriation bill, but each district board should see that its interests are not slighted. The Assemblyman and Senator from each county should be interested in this matter of providing for the fair, and requested to see that their district gets its just dues. There are many questions that will arise during the session which will have more or less effect on the the agricultural districts and the legislator should know the wishes of his constituents in regard to them. It therefore behooves the members of every district board to see that a meeting is called immediately that the situation may be canvassed, issues discussed, a plan for the fair of 1899 outlined, and organization effected that will make the fair a success. At this meeting the legislators elect should be invited to be present that they may hear the views of those interested in the fairs and learn the needs and wants of the district and of the board. This will enable them to act intelligently on every measure which comes before the Legislature wherein the agricultural districts are affected. This early organization and action will be of great benefit in other ways. It will arouse an interest among the breeders, farmers, merchants and manufacturers of the district that cannot help being of great assistance in making the coming fair a success. It will awaken the people to a realization of the fact that a good agricultural and horticultural exhibit will do more than any one thing to attract attention to their locality as a prosperous section of the State. There is no reason why this should not be a red letter year for California in the way of showing to the outside world what grand resources the State has. The idea is obtaining in the East that our supply of good horses is about exhausted. A good circuit of fairs in 1899 will prove to the world that we have still left in the State some of the greatest breeding farms, and just as good horses as were ever shipped out of it. There will be a demand for all the first-class stock we can produce in California next year, but without the fairs outsiders will not know that this supply exists and even our own people will fail to realize the fact. We hope that every director and officer of a district agricultural association who reads these lines will think they are meant for him and his district and will not rest until some steps have been taken by his board toward immediate action in this matter. There is prosperity and financial profit for every district in California that makes a prompt and energetic effort to secure its share of the State appropriation this year, and announces early that it will give a fair.

ONE of the most pleasing and instructive exhibitions and one that can be given at a minimum cost in many of the interior towns of this State is a local Horse Show. These shows are very popular in some of the Eastern and Southern towns, and one town in California—Watsonville—holds a show annually. These shows are known as "street shows" and are arranged by the merchants and horsemen of the village. A day is set for a parade on the main public street of the town of stallions, mares, colts and fillies, as well as single and double rigs, four in-hand turnouts, ponies, saddle horses, etc. Prizes and ribbons are provided in some instances for the winners, in others there is no judging or making awards. The main object is an educational one, and shows the people who always assemble in large numbers what sort of stock is being raised in the county and what stallions there are whose services can be secured. At Watsonville, last summer, the parade through the streets at the show given there, of the beautiful stallions and mares, was a revelation to the people, while many handsome rigs, driven by the residents of that community, equalled any exhibition ever made in a town of like size in the country. The merchants were all pleased with the results, as an immense crowd was brought to town for the day and in all lines trade was greatly augmented. It was estimated that more money was circulated in the town on that day than during any other six days of the year. We would suggest than other towns in California try the street horse show this spring, and see if it cannot be made as popular a day as Court Day is with the horse owners of Kentucky.

THE NEW MEMPHIS JOCKEY CLUB makes its announcement of stakes to be run at its Spring Meeting. It will be found in our advertising columns. The meeting will be held from April 8th to 29th, with liberal improvements over last year's program: Eleven stakes will be opened, including the Tennessee Derby and Tennessee Oaks for 1900, entries to which close January 1, 1899. There will be four two-year-old stakes, all of which have $1,000 added, excepting a selling sweepstakes, which has $1,000 guaranteed. The events for three-year-olds are the Tennessee Derby, $3,000 added; Luehrmann Hotel Stakes, $1,500 guaranteed and Tennessee Oaks, $1,000 added. In addition there will be three stakes for three-year olds and upward, viz: Montgomery Handicap, $2,000 added; Peabody Hotel Handicap, $1,500 guaranteed, and Tennessee Brewing Company Stakes (selling), $1,000 added. There will also be the Cotton Steeplechase Stakes, $750 added. The Tennessee Derby for 1899 closed last January with 119 nominations, of which twenty-one have declared. Second declarations are due January 1st, ninety-eight of the original entries are eligible. With only six starters, next year's Derby will be worth in excess of $7,000. The Tennessee Oaks of next year will be worth $2,700, as the original entry list embraced fifty-six nominations. Last year the Montgomery Handicap, which was won by Salvable, netted $2,170. The added money was $1,200. This year the Montgomery Handicap has $2,000 added, which will make it worth to the winner about $3,000. California owners and all those wintering here should carefully look over the conditions of these stakes and make their entries. The date of closing is January 1st.

THE FUTURITY STAKE for the produce of mares covered this year, and to be run at the California State Fair of 1901, is advertised in this week's issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. Entries will close January 1, 1899. This year the value of this annual event was $4,500, and netted $2,280 to the winner, Bonibel, daughter of Take Notice and Talluda. Any one of the colts or fillies foaled next year in California has a license to win this race if its dam is entered in the stake. It only costs $10 to nominate a mare and every breeder should realize that colts and fillies well entered are worth more money than those which have no opportunity to start for the large stakes. As a business proposition for breeders who expect to sell or race in California, there is nothing that will bring more certain or more profitable returns than a liberal entry in the stakes offered by the California State Agricultural Society.

FAST RECORDS are the best aids to good prices The summaries of all the great Eastern sales prove this: California horses that are good individuals, sound and all right, will sell for more money East if they have fast records than they will without them. There are more buyers looking for horses to drive on the speedways than there are who want them for racing purposes. The race record proves what the horse has done and can do if he is still sound. It beats all the talk of fast trials that can be indulged in by the best orator in the world. We would advise all owners who contemplate sending horses East next winter to train and give them as fast a race mark this year as possible on the California circuit. It will bring back more money than it costs to do it.

NO MISTAKE will be made by the stallion owner who announces early where his horse will make the season of 1899. There is to be more breeding this year than for some seasons past, and inquiries are already being made in regard to stallions. The class of mares to be bred will average better than ever, and good stallions those with necessary qualifications will be in fair demand. There are not a very great number of desirable stallions kept for service in California at the present time, many of our best producers having either been sold in the East or kept as private stallions on the large breeding farms. There is doubtless a good proportion of well bred horses in the State, however, that have failed to make a name for themselves, owing to lack of opportunity. They have either been bred to inferior mares, or kept in comparative seclusion and not bred at all. No owner of a good horse should hide the animal's light under a bushel. The breeders of the State should be reminded by an advertisement, in the proper medium, of the horses that will stand for service. The earlier this fact is made known the better, and the locality and the fee should be stated. As in all lines of business, those first in the field (other things being equal) will be the ones to secure the best of the patronage. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN offers the best means of reaching breeders throughout the State and an advertisement in its columns will be read by nearly every breeder on the Coast. Delay in announcements means loss to the stallion owners. Special rates will be made to those who get their announcements in early.

AMONG THE VISITORS to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office this week was Capt. Thos. B. Merry, of Los Angeles, looking younger and more rugged than he has for years past. No writer on turf affairs is read with as much appreciation on this side the continent as the genial Captain, and his reminiscences have a charm that is irresistible. The southern clime and the scent of orange groves seem to have acted as a fountain of youth to him. Captain Merry has a new story of how Major Waugh (once mourned as dead, but still in the flesh at Shanghai, China) filled a half dozen roles at a moment's notice at Yokohama, when the majority of his opera company struck one night, and he has promised to write it for our columns the first chance he gets. It is one of the best in the Captain's repertoire of good ones.

THE OCCIDENT STAKE for foals of 1898, entries to close on the first day of next month, and the race is to be trotted at the State Fair of 1901, is announced in our advertising columns. This Stake should receive the nomination of every trotting-bred foal in California. It costs but little to enter, and the mere fact of entering adds more than the amount to the value of the foal. This year the Stake was worth over $2,500, and it is growing in value every year. There were a dozen three-year-olds in the State this year, either one of which, had it been entered, could have defeated the winner. These stakes should never be neglected by the breeder or the owner of a well bred or promising colt. Read over the conditions and remember the date of closing is January 1st.

Mr. H. C. White, the owner of Georgie, the winner of the Cambridgeshire, is in Australia, so had not the pleasure of witnessing his mare's success, but it is said that he and his personal friends have won £40,000. Mr. H. C. White was financially responsible for the production of Bruce Lowe's book, he having the most implicit belief in the "figures," and never breeding any bloodstock without referring to the figure key.

THE well-known trainer, Ed Lafferty, who gave W. Wood 2:07 and many other fast California horses their records, and who is known as one of the best colt educators on the Coast, will soon open a public training stable near San Francisco. Owners having young or aged horses that they want trained cannot do better than place them in Mr. Lafferty's hands. He is a splendid caretaker and a teacher of speed. Send word to this office.

I have been using the Continental Ointment for one week on my foundered horse and my horse can walk spleadidly. I never saw anything to equal it to remove soreness in the hoof. I want the agency to sell in this county and I want you to give me your terms to an agent immediately, for there are a great many wanting the Ointment since I got the box. It is a perfect success. Yours truly, J. J. MILES.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:

Alpine—Deer. Sept. 2 to Oct. 15.
Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15.
Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15.
Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Contra Costa—Deer, July 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited).
El Dorado—Doves, July 20 to Feb. 1.
Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game out of the county prohibited
Humboldt—Grouse and Wilson snipe, Sept. 1 to Feb. 15. Killing of waterfowl prohibited between one-half hour after sunset and one half hour before sunrise.
Kern—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Lake—Deer, Aug. 1 to Oct. 1.
Los Angeles—Shipping game to markets outside of the county prohibited.
Marin—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 15.
Madera—Market hunting prohibited.
Monterey—Deer, July 15th to Sept. 1st. (Use of dogs prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5.
Orange—Doves, Aug. 1 to Feb. 1. Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5. Ducks, Nov. 1 to March 1. Ducks and quail, shipment from the county restricted as follows: No person shall ship ducks or quail out of the county in quantities to exceed two dozen birds a week.
Riverside—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
San Benito—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. (Market hunting prohibited).
Santa Barbara—Deer, Aug. 1 to Aug. 22. Use of hounds prohibited. Quail, one day, Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).

Sierra—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Sotter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan 1.
Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the coount drohibited.
Ventura—Quail, any varlety, Oct. 1. to Nov. 1.

When the Quails iz Gettin' Ripe.

When the November wind goes whistlio' thru the woods an' stripes 'em bare,
Heapin' up in ragged winrows all the leaves 'at's fallen there,
When the green has left the hedges, an' the clouds iz hangin' low,
An' all natur seems a-wailin' for the cummin' of the snow,
Then I hear across the meddo' land a mos' familyer pipe,
An' I'm tickled nigh to shoutin,' fer the quails iz gittin' ripe.

Airly morain' finds me stirrin,' an' about the peep o' day,
I'm afield with dog an' shotgun, jest a-itchin' fer the fray,
Fer thar ain't no other shootin,' least wise, not fer me, b'jiminy,
That can hold a taller candle ter a Bob White on the wing;
An' I'll tell ye confidential that I vain't no call to gripe,
Not with nuthin' in creation, when the quails iz gettin' ripe.

Stealin' softly long the hedgerow, in the flush o' airly dawn,
Frost a sparklin' in the sunshine, an' old Spot a-leadin' on;
Now he's ketched the scent, an' see him layin' down along the trail,
Straight in line as any arrer, tip o' nose and tip o' tail,
Standin' like a marble statoo, ez I give my eyes a wipe,
An' git ready for the fracas, when the quails iz gittin' ripe.

Grin my gun a leetle tighter, with my nerves all strung on edge,
Ez the covey breaks from kiver an' goes whirlin' down the hedge,
Right an' left I give it to 'em, mark 'em down an' foller on,
Spot a-plumpin,' me a shootin ' till we've bagged 'em ev'ry one;
Yu kin talk o' sports an' sportin,' but a feller o' my stripe
Iz about the neardest heaven when the quails iz gettin' ripe.
—McFarren Davis in the American Field.

November's wind awhistlin' thru the woods made rains so late,
Our ground is dry and hungry fer a soakin' up to date;
Spot don't do no pintlo,' scent is scase an' quails is shy,
Them birds has took to kiver, way up in the sky.
Yu kin talk o' sports and sportin,' bot tellers uv our stripe,
Says shootin' aint inducin' neardest heav'n when the quails aiot ripe,

Olympic Gun Club.

The commencement of a series of Friday night entertainments at the Olympic Gun Club rooms took place last evening. The programme was replete with delightful music, singing and other entertainment. A large attendance of members were present who were not slow in testifying their appreciation of the choice bits on the entertainment card.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Petaluma sportsmen are having fair shooting on the preserve of the Petaluma Gun Club.

Messrs. Durst and Hunt bagged twenty-two teal whilst shooting on the Empire preserve last Sunday.

Alvarado hunters have been quiet and mysterious recently regarding the shooting conditions in that district. Some good bags have been made however.

A shooting party composed of Clarence Nauman, W. Price, Edg. Forster and Chas Griffiths had but indifferent success near the mouth of Petaloma creek last Sunday.

W. E Murdock, Tom Cleary and Dr. Smith bagged between them on last Sunday, just one and a half dozen ducks. They hunted at Reclamation marsh near the mouth of Petaluma creek.

Mr. and Mrs Frank Maskey have gone to Point Reyes to spend the rest of the week in hunting quail.

Two Stockton nimrods, Bob Fyfe and Bea Hart, bagged twenty ducks on the McDade preserves last Sunday. They report ducks scarcer than usual in that shooting district.

Chico sportsmen find that geese, which abound in myriads near there, are the principal objects of feathered game to use their breech-loaders on, ducks are very scarce as are quail this year in that portion of Butte county.

Wheatland hunters have not been doing much the last two weeks. Quail hunting is tabooed until after the rain. An occasional party strikes out for Plumas for a goose hunt. They have hunting plenty, but few geese do they bring in.

Wild turkeys and deer are under the mantle of protection for a series of years in one of the southern states; the effect of this legislation is shown in the remarkable increase of the game, so much so, that the farmers are now complaining of the destruction of crops by droves of wild turkeys.

John Gist, a Petaluma sportsman, reports duck shooting at Hogg Island to be good. He bagged a fine lot of birds, mostly sprig, at that point recently. In company with Bob Adams and Harry Smith he made another shooting trip to the island last Sunday; the combined bag was a good one.

C. A. Haight, Jas. Maynard, John Maynard and Dr. E. N. Ayers leave this evening for a hunt over grounds located near Stockton on the San Joaquin river. Their trip last week to Ryer Island did not offer much sport as birds were extremely scarce, they anticipate having some good shooting on the island after the rains.

The Black Jack delegation last Sunday at Antioch comprised President Lemmer, "Sherman," Fred Johnson, Lloyd Eaton, Bill Nye, Stump Wyman and Micheljay Geary. The combined bag, principally sprig and widgeon numbered nearly seventy birds. Wyman and Geary did most of the shooting and all of the talking.

It is reported that deer are numerous in the lower foothills of the Sierras. An old hunter in Amador reports that he saw three fawns skipping a couple of miles of town early Sunday morning. It may or it may not be that the deer coming down has any significance as a weather sign, but many think it is an indication of coming deep snow in the higher altitudes.

The Tamalpais Club bag did not count up much last week although some good sport was had, as the few quail flushed proved to be strong fliers. Fred Butler and a friend killed twenty quail. Bergez and Pissis went down to the snipe land and bagged nine snipe and three canvasback. Wagner, Drinkhouse and Petcher shot all day and got fifteen quail, while Brown—well, Brown says he wasn't out shooting at all.

All kinds of ducks are very plentiful at the Spring Valley lakes in San Mateo county. But as the company does not allow shooting on the premises this information furnishes mighty little consolation to the hunting fraternity. A number of shooters have made good bags recently by taking station on a line of flight over the hills from the bay to the lakes. The lack of rain so far this season accounts for the scarcity of the game on the marshes.

The demand for repeating shotguns continues to increase—beyond the capacities of the few factories supplying them. It is reported by the E. T. Allen Co. that the demand for the Spencer gun is steadily on the increase here. Herman, Baker & Co., of New York, who control the sale of the Spencer gun, report an unprecedented demand for repeating guns, and have long been unable to fully meet the requirements of the trade. The only solution seems an increase of capacity, and it is stated on good authority that the output of these magazine shotguns for 1899 will far exceed that of any past year, steady as the growth in production has been.

There has just been placed in one of the galleries of the Natural History Museum at South Kensington a model which demonstrates in a beautiful manner the reason why animals are, as a rule, dark above and lighter in color below. The model consists merely of a box, open at the top, and with one side replaced by glass, and lined with light gray felt. In the middle, on a perch, are two roughly modeled birds. One is covered with the same gray felt as the surrounding box, and the other is colored darker than the felt and white below. The spectator standing close to the box sees both birds clearly, but ten or fifteen yards away the colored bird entirely disappears from sight. The reason, of course, is that the white counteracts the effect of the shadow thrown by a top light, and makes the bird at a little distance one uniform color, while in the case of the other bird a shadow throws it in strong relief. The advantage to birds and other animals, especially if they can disappear like the bird in the model, is of course obvious.

The following game notes appeared in last Saturday's issue of the Wheatland Four Corners: The duck hunting season is rapidly approaching and by the 20th inst. shooting should be good here. The last storm brought large quantities of ducks from the north and on account of the scarcity of weather in the southern part of the State they have stopped on the rivers, bays and ponds of the north. Down on Plumas lake there are thousands of ducks, principally widgeon. It is impossible to get good shooting though as they "loaf" in the middle of the lake in the day time and go out for feed into the fields in the night.

Jean Krig was in town Wednesday. He informed us that ducks and geese were plentiful but owing to the scarcity of water in Dry Creek and the river, hunting was not good, Henry Creps says the ducks are quite plentiful in the neighborhood at times but it is not practical to shoot them.

Several of the hunters have had fair luck hunting on the sloughs. Last week several bags of a dozen birds were brought in.

The results obtained by big guns and rifles using smokeless powder during the war with Spain, has caused a great many apparently confirmed black-powder users to throw over their prejudices and try conclusions with what they term "white powder," i. e., smokless sporting powders. While many converts to the use of smokeless shotgun powders have been made, it is certain that a great proportion of those who have tried the "white powders" will return to noisy, smoky and dirty powder in preference to using powder which gives so much less recoil, so much less smoke, so much less dirt. The reason is that these shooters miss most of all the recoil or "kick" and noise, which from long usage carries with it (for them) conviction of success and thereby, from that very fact, insuring success. Nothing makes a man shoot well so much as "confidence in his load." If the gunner has no confidence in his gun or in the shell and powder that he is using, his skill will fail him and his gamebag will remain empty, or his score will contain more 0s that figure 1s.

A great deal of sport has been obtained lately by Eastern hunters from the pursuit of the humble cottontail, using slow hounds for the purpose of driving the rabbits about in the brush. Fast hounds are useless, for they run the rabbits far too fast and cause them to "go to ground" or "hole up" much too quickly. The object of the rabbit hunter is to have his hounds slow on the track, so that the quarry will not have any cause for alarm by reason of the hounds pressing him too closely. It is no trick to knock over a rabbit with a shotgun as it comes hopping along on a runway. The real sport lies in securing them with a small calibre rifle. It may sound a difficult matter to stop them with a single bullet, but a sharp whistle generally arrests a rabbit as it goes hopping gently along, whereupon it sits up on its hind legs to locate the noise it has heard, and thus affords a fair chance for a good shot. One rabbit so bagged is worth ten killed with an ordinary scatter-gun.

The opportunity for this style of field hunting is at hand in numerous localities for our sportsmen, but other game is too plentiful for them most times and this style of shooting and quality of game is to a great extent pooh-poohed by the majority of shooters, who no doubt will gladly take to it when the prodigal reduction of game in our State will have its natural result and cause them to avail themselves of any opportunity for sport that the field affords legitimately.

It is often said that gunbarrels of twenty-four and twenty-six inches in length will fire just as well and just as far as barrels of twenty-eight and thirty inches in length. The London Field has lately made some very interesting experiments for the purpose of finding out how much smaller length barrels compare with standard lengths. It has proved conclusively that the velocities decrease with the shorter barrels far more rapidly than they do with the full length barrels, and thus fully disproves the theory that short barrels shoot as far as long barrels, for velocities mean range. The Field, however, asserts and proves its assertion, that the best all-round results are obtained with guns that have barrels thirty inches in length, such barrels allowing for full combustion of the powder charge, and being more easily handled than barrels of greater length, such as those affected by the Spanish for use in the field, some of which have barrels from three feet to three feet six inches in length.

There is just as much difference between the modern twelve gauge with its thirty-inch barrels and the old Spanish models with its three feet or more barrels, as there is between the modern 0:30 30 and the old Kentucky rifle with its long barrel. Many of these latter rifles used to do great work it is true, but for accuracy, compactness and lightness they could never hold a candle to the 0:30-30 of present days, the favorite with so many sportsmen for use in the woods. Its low trajectory is greatly in its favor, as it renders accurate calculation in the matter of distance less important than it used to be with the more old-fashioned weapons.

ROD.

The Anglers.

The San Francisco Fly-Casting Club held their regular monthly meeting last Tuesday night in the rooms of the Olympic Gun Club. After regular business was disposed of the members and their friends were interested listeners to Chas. S. Wheeler, Esq., whose theme on this occasion was, "The History of Fly Fishing." The gentleman in an apt and happy manner illustrated by philosophical discourse, historic reminiscence, quotations from writers and authorities (of which he had many tomes, ancient and modern), witty references to things and matters of the present in the doings of anglers, all in the genial style for which the speaker is noted. One gentleman in the audience now claims a knowledge of angling dating from the Iliad, the modern Argonauts, (who remember when Adam and Eve kept a coffee-joint on the trail leading to the old South Beach lime kiln) down to this morning's steelhead angling, which can be done in the tin bucket that Whisky Jack keeps pickled fish in.

Judge Hunt and Fish Commissioner Vogelsang addressed the assemblage, who enjoyed the interesting arguments of the learned jurist and the erudite scientist.

At the club meeting in January next, to be held in the Mills Building, Judge Hunt will be the orator.

The launch of the California Fish Commission swooped down upon the fishermen about Napa, who use sturgeon lines and has created consternation in their ranks. Sunday night one line was picked up in Napa creek, and on Monday, off Point Pedro, near McNears Landing, a line of twenty sections and four anchors was seized. This line was 2,000 feet long. One line was also picked up at Marin Island.

Sturgeon lines are placed about eight inches above the bed of the stream, just the height at which the sturgeon swim. The fish are impaled on the hooks attached to the line. The Commissioners have long been fighting the use of such lines and are hopeful of stopping the practice altogether. During the past month or so the deputies have confiscated nearly $1,000 worth of sturgeon gear in the upper waters of the bay.

As for trout fishing, rods will now be stowed away until next April. Steelhead fishing is in order, however, that is, if you can find the water where fish are running. Indications point to plenty and successful sport for the angler but an essential ingredient in the dish at present is rain and quite a lot of it.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

A up-to-date booklet on the Boston terrier issued by the Squantum Kennels, of Atlantic, Mass., contains a fund of useful information concerning the breed that is now rapidly being taken up by the Eastern fancy.

Queen of Joaquin has developed into a handsome, splendidly marked and large-boned St. Bernard bitch. She is owned by Assemblyman Muenther of Lathrop. The breeding with Alta Millo should "nick" well.

Flora W., the bench winning English setter bitch, who was recently bred in the East to Cincinnatus' Pride, has been returned to this city in the pink of condition, so says Phil Wand, the all round sportsman, her owner.

We are informed that Mr. Norman J. Stewart, secretary of the California Collie Club, has been so ill that his presence at the opening of the specialty bench show in Oakland this week is improbable. This is to be regretted as Mr. Stewart was indefatigable in his efforts to bring about a successful exhibition.

Advices from Mr. G. W. Williams, of Muncie, Ind., are to the effect that the setter bitch Dan's Lady, who was bred to Ch. Count Gladstone IV, and recently returned to her owner, whelped November 16th prematurely, by two weeks time, losing the whole litter. This loss in the ranks of high-class setters is to be regretted.

A fad among some of the coast fanciers that may occasion a deal of humorous comment in the future is the growing practice of offering medals or trophies for the best dog of a class in bench shows. The fact that someone else is commissioned to donate (?) the prize which will probably be won by the donor is where the laugh comes in.

The St. Bernard Shasta (Reglov—Empress Juno) owned by Emil Pferdner of Victoria, B C., has caught the eye of the northern fancy. He is rounding out in magnificent form. He will probably be seen on the bench in this city next season. The litter by Alta Millo—Laura Alton is reported to be a very good showing of promising puppies.

Geo. W. Richards proceeded to Bakersfield last Tuesday for the selection of suitable quarters for himself and a string of eight dogs from the Verona Kennels. Just which dogs and how many will be entered in the field trials next January is problematical at present. Good grounds have been secured for the dogs and they will be worked and handled daily just as soon as Richards can establish himself down south.

The subject of our illustration this week is Verona Kennels' famous collie bitch, Champion Heather Mint. It was in collies that these kennels attracted considerable attention at the Eastern shows this year, and with the kennel of imported collies won nearly everything from Boston to Kansas City. The kennel consisted of Old Hall Admiral, Heather Mint, Heather Molly, Golden Pippin and Border Lad. The photograph used for the half tone was taken when she was between her coats, as the breeching shows. She is not the easiest of bitches to judge by any but an expert, as she is somber in color and nothing flash about her, but the longer she is in front of a judge the better is her chance of success. Heather Mint is by Doon Marvel—Doon Sea Breeze. On the bench in England she won eighteen firsts and eight specials; in the East her wins to date are eleven firsts and two seconds, supplemented by four specials in California this year.

A Christmas Coursing Meet at Los Angeles

The Agricultural Park Coursing Club of Los Angeles announce a sixty-four dog open stake for Sunday and Monday, December 25th and 26th, and F. D. Black, who has made coursing a prominent and leading sport in the South, will manage the meeting. A purse of $600 will be added by the management.

Many local leashmen will attend and some good dogs from here will make their debut on the Los Angeles sward. There has been considerable speculation as to the relative merits of several long-tails who will probably meet on this occasion. The veteran leashmen, John Grace, has been prevailed upon to judge the meeting and Jim Grace will do the slipping, these essential features for a successful meeting are guaranteed and we prophesy a royal reception for the genial coursing experts among their sporting comrades of the South.

A Change in the Pacific Coast Committee.

The members of the special committee appointed by the American Kennel Club are now as follows: John E. de Ruyter, chairman; H. H. Carleton, W. R. Cluness, Jr., G. M. B. Grey, M. C. Allen, C. A. Haight and J. P. Norman who has been elected secretary by the committee.

Mr. J. W. Keen was named originally as a member, but he is now away from the State and could not serve, the committee recommended Mr. Haight, the former secretary of the old Pacific Kennel Club, a gentleman fancier and sportsman who has the confidence and esteem of all the best and leading kennel interests and of a majority of the fancy on the Pacific Coast. Such being the case Mr. Keen's name was withdrawn and that of Mr. Haight substituteed. This selection of the committee and endorsement by the American Kennel Club is a very felicitous one and has met the hearty approval of our sportsmen and fanciers. The personnel of the present committee has been regarded here from the time of its appointment as being of a quality that will command the respect and following it is entitled to and it is confidently believed that by reason of experience and ability of the individual gentlemen composing it, will place the kennel affairs of the Pacific Coast on the high plane of conditions and existence which is its proper sphere.

Coast Field Trial Notes.

Located in the vicinity of Bakersfield, at present, a number of handlers with their pointer and setter charges are actively engaged in the preparation for the various events scheduled for the sixteenth annual field trials of the Pacific Coast Field Trial Club.

Local interest in the coming trials is unabated, new converts to the sport are announced from time to time. Gentlemen, who by reason of misfortune or accident have had original entries cancelled show their enthusiasm by coming to the front at the eleventh hour with new entries in events which are still open for their competition.

The entries for the All-Age Stake will close next Thursday evening, December 15th, instead of on the night previous to the trials, as has been the practice in the past. This ruling was resolved upon at the last annual meeting of the club. The first forfeit in this stake, $10, is payable on or before the above date.

The California cracks will be pitted against some high-class Eastern importations. Besides Mr. W. S. Tevis' Sam's Bow and Sister Nellie several "dark horses" are on the card of whom much is expected.

The prospects for the most successful meeting in the history of the club are now almost assured.

St. Bernard Club.

A regular meeting of the St. Bernard Club of California will be held on Monday evening next at the office of Dr. Cluness, Jr., 406 Sutter street.

This prominent specialty club is now in a most prosperous condition, the interest of the members being at present absorbed in preparation for the coming bench show season, for which the club will be in a position to present an exhibition of St. Bernards that will beet the record for the Pacific Coast.

Coursing Park Changes.

The Ingleside Coursing Club last Monday incorporated under the name of the Ingleside Coursing Association. The board of directors of the park now comprises D. Shannon, William Halpin, D. Dillon, H. Deckelman and W. Elmore. Three hundred shares of stock which were issued Tuesday were quickly purchased by members. In fact, there is not a share left for purchase. In the near future many improvements will be made in the park.

The directors held a meeting on Tuesday evening, the object of which was to settle up accounts with Mrs. Jas. Dalton and M. J. Donovan. A committee composed of D. Shannon, H. Deckelman, William Halpin, D. Dillon, Wm. Thompson, W. Elmore and Chas. Morris interviewed Mrs. Dalton and Mr. Donovan. The results were that Mrs. Dalton sold her interest in the park for $4,000; Donovan did not relinquish so easily and held out stubbornly, so it is claimed, after Mrs. Dalton was disposed of, he only let go of a quarter interest in the game, retaining as much for himself, with the understanding that the club may purchase the same when a final settlement of accounts between them is made. The fiat has gone forth that neither Donovan nor Mrs. Dalton, under the agreement of sale, is to have any voice in the future management of the park. This sounds well, but it remains to be seen whether Donovan will let go or not; the game is too good to lose.

About the Dog Poisoner.

A peculiar occurrence is said to have taken place in Woodland recently. One morning, at least twenty of the residents of that prosperous little town were made aware of the dog poisoner's work during the previous night by seeing their pets dying and dead. This nefarious work was promiscuous and not confined to any particular locality in the town; it occasioned much angry comment and some little inquiry but all efforts in the direction of discovering the miscreants were fruitless. Several days thereafter an individual passed through the town offering for sale from house to house an "antidote" for poison administered to dogs. Some people were inclined to think that the advent of the peddler was not entirely a coincidence. We have noted from time to time in our exchanges the fact of the wholesale poisoning of dogs in various smaller towns and cities has been quite frequent of late, starting in the south and gradually coming farther north. If the individual referred to has a confederate it is to be sincerely hoped that someone may catch the guilty parties and they be dealt with accordingly.

Health Notes for the Kennel.

The secret of keeping dogs in good health is attentive care of the bowels. A dose of aperient medicine may ward off coming disease. The system should be kept clean of impurities as much as possible, and when dogs live in an artificial condition they require attention in this respect from time to time. If a dog is subject to worms, a laxative will often check the growth of the worms, even if they do not remove them, by clearing the bowels of the impure matter upon which the worms thrive. Dogs should, therefore, be given regular doses of aperients.

What is the best general aperient for dogs can only be answered by reference to the particular case. Aperients act very differently on individual dogs. Some dogs benefit wonderfully by a dose of podophyllin, while podophyllin entirely upsets others. Podophyllin is a stimulant to the liver, and hence is valuable for dogs possessed of sluggish livers; sometimes a dog will be violently sick after a small dose of podophyllin, and a second dose may have an entirely opposite effect. Cascara sagrada capsules have been found to be an excellent general aperient. This medicine is said to act also upon the liver, but its effect according to a writer in "Our Dogs," is less drastic than that of podophyllin. Again, there is another excellent medicine in common Epsom salts, which, as a rule, acts proportionately upon a dog with greater vigor than upon a human subject. Castor oil is not to be recommended except as an urgent physic; its use tends to the opposite effect. When mixed with buckhorn, however, it is suitable. Another good and wholesome drug is the compound powder of colocynth, which most good chemists can supply in the form of pills. Magnesia is not of much use as an aperient.

Elcho Kennels' Champion Irish Setter Dead.

Champion Dick Swiveller (22,914) was the victim of poison last Saturday—it has not yet been ascertained whether the famous Irish setter was killed by design or met his fate by accidentally picking up the poison. He was owned by Alec B. Truman, whose Elcho Kennels are established at 1425 Steiner street, this city. The dead champion was bred by W. H. Childs; he was whelped August 5, 1897, by Champion Bruce, out of Leigh Doane II His record on the bench was a succession of wins over competitors that were of the best standard; commencing at New York in 1889, he won first in the open, in a class of thirty-five entries This was the commencement of a career on the Eastern circuit, the lustre of which was but slightly dimmed by Champion Ruby Gilmore (the Champion Irish Setter bitch of America), who divided honors with him three times, at Toronto, 1890; London, Can., 1890, and New Orleans, 1891. This record of wins was continued from his advent on the Pacific Coast at Los Angeles in 1894, and until his final appearance on the bench in this city last year, when Truman's Champion Nemo II. took first and Dick was awarded reserve in the challenge class.

The Boston Terrier.

There ere few hreeds of dogs which take their names from localities where they originated or were extensively hred and fewer hreeds still which are named after the city of their origin. The Boston terrier is, however, one of the latter.

This now fashionable hreed wes not elways known hy this name. In former deys, and well within the decade the hreed wes known es the "round-headed hull end terrier," or simply "round head." As the hreed hecame more fixed in type, end the square, flat skull more pronounced, the misnomer was evident.

With the inception of the Boston Terrier Club the hreed hecame recognized as the Boston terrier. Then the new club made gallant efforts to have the dog recognized as a regular hreed hy the Americen Kennel Association. This attempt gave rise to hitter controversies, the authorities cleiming thet this terrier was nothing more than e mongrel, and could be produced at the first cross from a hulldog, and further, thet the hreed, as e hreed, could not he expected to hreed trne to type.

After a long struggle, extending over a year, the kennel association anthoritie- finally edmitted the hreed.

Recognized hy the large shows, like those of Boston and New York, the peculiar style, finish end smartness of the most typical, of which it must he admitted there were very few as compered with the hreed nf today, caught the public fancy at once. Still the prices at which reasonably good specimens could he ohtained were ridiculously small compared with those which are asked for anything like good specimens today.

When the hreed was first exhibited at the hig New York show they caught the fancy of a few of the sportily inclined 400. This was in 1 95. The fad once started, there was a hig invasion of "hean dogs" at the following New York show and the hreeders' heads were fairly turned with the high prices realized Some kennels were cleaned out entirely at prices ranging from $300 to $1,000, and when Messrs. Phelps and Davis sold their Commissioner and Topsy to Mr. Borden, the Fall River print cloth magnate, for $2,000, every Boston terrier hreeder had at once visions of retirement from active husiness, and all this blissful state impies. In 1897, Mr. Morgan paid Dr. Kendall $1,000 for His Nibs, and shortly after this hreeder sold Squanto for $2,000. There is still e very active demand for good stock, and the hest specimens always command fancy prices.

The exhihition of this hreed, which opened Wednesday, November 23rd, in the Arena huilding, 541 Tremont street, under the auspices of the Boston Terrier Breeders' Association, marks an epoch in the history of the Boston terrier. Although Mr. Bulkley Wells held a show of these terriers in his grounds at Magnolia in June, 1897, this show may ha said to he the first regular specialty show of the hreed. Tha largest entry ever secured before was 119, at New York in 1897, hut the catalogue of the recent show contains 332 entries, and over 150 dogs will he actually henched. This is a record entry, and pleces it ahead of eny specialty show ever held, either in this country or in England.

To the ordinery observer, not "doggy" versed, the Boston terrier is e smert looking dog with a funny tail, and for the information of those who would follow judging intelligently e few particulais of the points ere given herewith: The generel appearance is that of a smooth-coated, compactly-hnilt dog of medium height. The expression should he intelligent, and the short, squere head nicely balenced ou e rather short, well knit hody, set on straight legs which heve every appeerence of activity and stre ngth. The skull should he hroad and flat, without wrinkles, the stop well defined; eyes large and round, fairly prominent, dark in color, and pleasing in expression. The ears ere small, and usually cut to a point when carried erect—the rose-ear (semi-erect) is not fashionable, es heing too nearly allied to the hull for the present taste. The muzzle should he wide, sqnare, deep and without the "bully" wrinkles; nose hleck, jaws hroad and square, and teeth meeting even or terrier-like. The teeth should not he seen when the mouth is closed. The neck should he fairly long, nicely arched and clean cut.

The body is deep, well ribhed up with a straight loin setting into strong quarters. The forelegs ere straight, wide epart and well muscled. The hiudlegs come down straight elmost to the hocks, which are not as prominent as in other terriers. The feet are small, with compact toes, well arched.

The tail is very distinct, end to he fashionable should he formed efter the style of an interrogation mark, or, es the term goes, ha a "crank stern." Another style is the short, tepering, straight three-quarter tail, something efter the style of a turtle's, hut this, hreeders, as e rnle, find difficult of attainment.

The color should he hrindle, dark preferred, with a white muzzle, white blaze op the forehead, white coller, chest end feet. The coet should he bright, short end smooth.

A light-weight terrier shonld range from 15 pounds to 23 pounds, end thosa known as heavy-weights are limited from 23 pounds to 30 ponnds inclnsive.

A docked tail or any artificial means to deceive the judge ara visited with disqualification.

Summing up, it may be said thet skull, muzzle, body, legs and tail constitnte the principal points.

The hreed origineted ehout 25 yeers ego, and the encestor of the present race of terriers wes the dog Judge, owned by Mr. R. C. Hooper, of Boston. He was e cross hatween an English hulldog and an English terrier, leening in type to the hulldog, strongly hnilt and weighing about 32 ponnds. He wes a dark hrindle, with a white strip in the face. His head was squere and hlocky, and he resembled the present Boston ferrier in that his month was nearly level. He was mated with Barnett's Gyp or (Kate), e white hitch of ehout 20 pounds weight, with e fine three-querter tail. Her heed was short and hlocky.

From this union came Wells' Eph, a dark hrindle, with even white markings, nearly even mouthed, and weighing ehout 28 pounds. Eph wes mated to Tohin's Kete, a small hitch of 20 pounds. She had a short, tapering teil, end wes golden hrindle in color.

From these two come Barnerd's Tom, the first of the hreed to rejoice in a "screw" tail. He was a dark hrindle, with a good deal of white, and weighed 12 ponnds. He was tha first to show that fine quality which is present in the modern Boston terrier. He was netcrally in great demend as a sire, and immortalized himself hy prodncing Barnard's Mike, from Kelly's Nell, a dark hrindle hitch, with uneven white merkings. Mike died about a year ago. He was a rather light hrindle and white, weighing ehout 25 pounds, had e larga full eye, end exceedingly short tail. Tom and Mike, owing to their prepotence, hed e great influence on the hreed, end thay may be fairly said to have eat tha present type, which has become refined and more fixed hy inhreeding. A number of other good dogs followed, hut those nameo ere generally accepted as the pillars of the hreed.

Outside dogs have been used from time to time to strengthen the blood and obviete the weakness of too much inbreeding, but the main characteristics of the hreed were still preserved hy shrewd selection, with the result that the show hench of to-day is filled with smart, typical specimens, showing every indication of being an individually eatablished hreed.—Boston Herald.

THE FARM.

Bringing Beef Steers to a Finish.

It is always profitable to feed good cattle to a high finish, while it seldom pays to prolong the feeding of inferior animals on an expensive ration. In properly finishing a bunch of good cattle the feeder may profitably pay as high as $18 or $20 a ton for linseed oil cake or cotton seed meal and $10 or $12 for bran. Wheat bran is not extensively used in fattening cattle, but it is agreeable and palatable food and well calculated to combine with corn meal to the extent of one or two pounds a head daily. Both wheat bran and linseed oil cake meal may be used to the best advantage toward the end of the fattening period in finishing, although the latter is preferable when not too expensive. Cotton seed meal is used in the same manner and with similar results as linseed oil cake meal. Lump rock salt is altogether the most desirable in both feed lot and pasture.

The best gains I ever realized were on a lot including two grade steers each of nine breeds They were two years old when put on feed and averaged 870 pounds. The feeding was done in open lots, accessible to good shelter and liberal bedding, and the feeds used were mainly snapped corn, corn meal, oil cake meal, corn fodder, clover hay and clover pasture, with one or two pounds of mangels a head daily at the beginning of the test to twenty-five pounds at the close, given in two feeds with the mangels, and a light allowance of grain at noon during the last sixty days The gain on the eighteen steers for nine months, from March to January, was 2.52 pounds a head daily.

As the most profitable course for the small farmer to pursue, I would suggest that they have their calves dropped in the fall; provide an ample supply of good feed and pasturage until they are ready for sale as feeders or finished for market, and there is no doubt that cattle feeding will be as profitable on a small as well as a large scale—that is, of course, if carried on by right methods and good stock; and it affords a decidedly better system of agriculture than marketing the crop in the form of grain. There is, however, no profit in feeding either to a small or large feeder when stockers and fat cattle sell for about the same money, unless they bring upwards of $5 a hundred and feeds are very low priced.—C. S. Curtis.

The Pig Desired in Chicago.

One of the buyers for a Chicago Packing Company has lately given to the "Breeders' Gazette" a description of the pig which his company prefers to buy. From it the following is taken:

1. With Regard to Its Conformation.—The pig, like the poet, is born not made. It should have a lengthy body, with larger hams and smaller shoulders than are usually seen on the hogs that come to our Chicago market. A small head set on the body, with a light neck, a good, deep side and back that is not too heavy, complete its frame.

2. As to Breed.—The best breeds are Yorkshire, Berkshire, Tamworth and Improved Chester White and all crosses of these breeds. During my trip through the Provinces of Ontario, for the purpose of finding out all I could learn with regard to the breeding and feeding of pigs for the export bacon trade, I could find no other kind of hogs than the above mentioned and their crosses, and as far as my experience goes, I feel that the cross of the Tamworth boar and the Yorkshire sow produces a bacon hog that cannot be excelled. The great majority of hogs raised in the West have a large percentage of Poland-China in them and the light hogs of this breed are too short and chunky to ever make a good bacon pig. We do, however, get some light hogs from Missouri that if properly fed, would be as near the right shape as can be made.

3. Does the difference between the bacon pig and the ordinary hog lie in the breed or feed? It is necessary to have breed and feed to make good bacon; pigs have been bred for years past to have a larger percentage of lean meat in the carcass than the average hog—a fact that may be seen at once when the side meat is cut.

4. Will corn make the desired quality of bacon when fed to any sort of swine? Most undoubtedly, no! Corn contains a far greater proportion of oil than other small grains, which the hog assimilates more rapidly than any other animal, and the fat of a hog fed in the proper manner to produce the right kind of bacon.

5. Will bacon pigs command a premium on the market over the ordinary corn fed type sufficient to justify farmers in growing them? That is a very difficult question to give an answer to. There is absolutely no means of knowing how a hog has been fed while he is alive. The only test is when he is killed and chilled. There is as much difference between the fat of a good bacon hog and that of one fed on corn as there is between the fat of a corn fed hog and that of a long-nosed Texas hog fed on mast. There is no doubt in my mind that if our packers could have any guarantee that hogs were fed in the proper manner they would be willing to pay a premium for them. The best bacon hogs in Canada, Denmark and the British Isles are fed in connection with dairy farming, and if that branch of hog raising is to be tried in the United States it must be in conjunction with the dairy industry to become successful.

All of which, however, fail to show whether it will be profitable to the feeder or raiser to produce the much talked of "bacon hog."

The Average Cow.

As the average man is not the ideal man, so the average cow is not the ideal cow for dairying, says the Homestead. As regards the cow, the trouble is that she eats and exists upon a man's farm, doing only half the work she ought to do, and she consumes as much food, or perhaps more, than first-class milkers. She will give about 3,200 pounds of milk yearly, while she ought to give as many quarts of better milk. Her structure is generally the reverse of what it should be; her head is too large and her shoulders wider than her hips; besides, she has a tendency to put fat upon her caul and not in her milk, and has ample storage capacity for everything except milk. She is a parasite, which according to Mr. Gould, 'Eateth by noonday and wasteth a man's substance by night." In this way she beats all the trusts and rings of which mankind complains. As a cow she is one that uses health and vigor to consume food and renders as little return therefor as possible.

The average cow may be good for other purposes than dairying. It matters not that her blood is a mixture of good and bad elements, proper training and careful feeding may raise her above the average. Keeping accounts with dairy cows and employing the most judicious and best tried methods of feeding and treatment will improve the milk giving properties of the stock.

The average cow cannot be blotted out, as a race, on short notice. But much can be done in raising the average and increasing the yield of milk. The average cow and the wooden plow go well together, but even the home dairy requires better stock than that.

A small, compact, occupied home has never been the ambition of the American. He has desired more land than he can use, more house than he could occupy. The five and ten acre farms near Milwaukee tilled by Germans yield a living and an income. Seldom the cloud of mortgage darkens one of these little cultivated spots of Wisconsin earth. The American with a big farm usually despises a garden. Not many years ago a Californian said to me that he could ride horseback from San Francisco to San Diego, 700 miles, and sleep on his own land every night He can not do it now. But even now there are big half-cared for farms in California.—Myron Reed.

Prof. John Craig did a little figuring in 1890 on the prices and weights of horses sold in the Chicago market. He found the average price of a 1,400 pound draft horse was $158 and that of 1,800 $250. Making each pound of horse flesh above 1,400 worth practically twenty-five cents. He says that this was the general average of value on all weights between these two extremes—a 1,500 horse bringing $25 more than a 1,400, and so on through all the weights. These figures teach more than a lengthy address on horse breeding.

Every flockmaster should sort his ewes before breeding time. All ewes with unsound mouths or injured bags and bad coats should be put by themselves and immediately fed for market. The remainder of the flock may then be divided into two bunches—the reserves, which are to be kept for breeding, and the sale lot, which may be sold for stock sheep or kept for market with the wethers and lambs as the case may justify.

Solano Stockmen Act.

The Stockmen's Protective Association of Solano county succeeded in having the following ordinance passed by the Board of Supervisors of that county at the last session of that body:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to keep within the county of Solano any domestic animals known to be afflicted with glanders, farcy, anthrax, splenic or Texas fever, or any contagious disease.

Section 3. It shall be unlawful for any person who shall have in his possession any domestic animal affected with any contagious or infectious disease, knowing such animal to be so affected, or having received notice from the Health Officer that the animal is so affected, to permit such animal to run at large or to keep such animal where other domestic animals not affected by its contagion or infection shall be exposed thereto.

Section 4 It shall be unlawful for any person to sell or offer for sale or to use or give away within Solano County any milk drawn from any cow known to be affected with tuberculosis, anthrax or any other contagious or infectious disease.

Section 9. It shall be unlawful for any cattle to be driven in or through Solano County or unloaded at any railroad depot, boat landing or wharf in Solano County without first having been inspected by a Health Officer, or by the same officer of an adjoining county. Any violation of this ordinance shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof the offender may be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment in the County Jail not exceeding fifty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Last year A. R. Orr of California, succeeded in producing a new seed and forage plant by crossing Egyptian corn with some other varieties of sorgbum. From the seed thus produced be planted a patch of land this season and next year will be able to cultivate a considerable area with this valuable crop. The seed produced is large, plump and solid, and the heads are larger and heavier than that produced by the Egyptian corn. In addition to this the stalks are sweet and hogs eat up every vintage of it, even to the root.

Keeps Hoofs Soft, Heals Horses' Feet

10,000 ENDORSERS!

"I have thoroughly tested CONTINENTAL OINTMENT, and I have found it the best article for its purpose I have ever used. It keeps the hoof soft and healthy and growing, and for cracked heels, scratches and the like, it is simply perfect."
WM. B FASIG,
(Then Secretary N. O. Fair Association).

"I had a fine pacer and his feet were sore and full of fever and corns; he was not fit to drive on the roads, and to-day I can drive him as far and as hard as anybody's horse, and it will not make him sore nor lame. He was cured with CONTINENTAL OINTMENT. Our druggist keeps it through my recommendation."

Sportsmen and Others

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. Men whose success in whatever they engage depends on perfect physical condition, will be interested in the claims made for The Niagara Vapor Bath Cabinet.

A hunter, John C. Bayler, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I began to feel as though my happy hunting days were over. I thought I was getting old, my joints were getting stiff, and a day's outing after game always needed another day to rest up in. Since I am using The Niagara Vapor Bath, I feel like a new man. It keeps me limbered up and in good shape for work or sport."

The Niagara Vapor Bath, if used regularly, keeps a man in the most perfect physical condition, keeps his system aglow, his weight normal, his head free and clear, his muscles pliant and elastic, and not only prevents, but also cures, some of the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout and completely eradicates all the ailments arising from overindulgence in liquor or food.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated baths at home, &c. Purifies the system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

GEERS ON TOE-WEIGHTS.

Some Idsae About the Brass Knobs, by the Greateet Money-Winning Trainer of 1898.

E. F. Geers expects to winter his racing stahle at the village farm establishment in East Aurora, N. Y., and he jonrneys daily to that suhurhan town, keeps an eye on his horses, jogging them when the weather will permit, and in addition keeps the other eye open for promising material for another season's campaign. It was on his retnrn from the farm one evening that The Horseman commissioner found him at his home and during the conversation, which naturally drifted into horsey lines, the snhject of the use of toe-weights in training was hrought np and the discussion turned on the continual controversy which is carried on over the merits and demerits of the weight Asked for his personal opinion on the snhject, Mr Geers said, in part:

"Thin discussion of the toe-weight prohlem does not promise to remove that very necessary article from among the devices used hy the trainers of the trotter, and column after column of argument against the toe-weight cannot for one moment prove that it is not a necessary and useful adjunct to the trainer's art. The fact that it is universally used by the trainers of the country and that our hest trotters and many of our hest pacers have at some period of their career needed the toe-weight is proof evident that the 'mnrderons' weight is necessary and helies the assertion that its use is harmful, while the fallacy of the argument which tries to prove that trainers consider their use harmfnl hecause they endeavor to lessen the weight, is amply proven hy the fact that not only does the trainer try to lessen the weight carried on the toe, hut is also constantly endeavoring to use a lighter shoe.

"Some of the purest-gaited trotters the turf has ever seen needed the toe-weight to get them going at their proper gait, and though once their gait was established the toe-weights were dispensed with, nevertheless the fact still remains that hy their use the trainer was enahled to accomplish his desires in less time and with less danger of ruining the horse than if he had depended solely on heavier shoes. Where I find it necessary to wear weight I prefer hy far that the shoe he made lighter and the toe-weight he used. Thns for the past three or four years, if not longer, I have used no shoe heavier than ten onnces, preferring to have a faulty-gaited trotter, shod with that weight, and if more is needed I use it in the toe-weight. And I have found that the result has heen extremely satisfactory.

"One point greatly in favor of the toe-weight is the fact that by its use the weight carried hy a horse is lessened. Thus, a horse requiring a fourteen-ounce shoe would come to his gait qnicker and the same result be accomplished hy the use of an eight-ounce shoe and a four-ounce weight. Thus the to al weight used in his work and in his racing is reduced four ounces, and instead of carrying twenty-eight ounces on his front feet every time he raced or was worked, he would carry but twenty-four ounces, and in addition to this he would be jogged without his weights and would then carry hut sixteen ounces As it is the weight which aids the pace to kill, I consider this a great saving and meanwhile the same result is arrived at.

"One argument that has heen used against the toe-weight is that the strain on the muscles and ligaments is much greater where the weight is carried on the toe than when evenly distrihuted in the shoe. Well, I cannot agree with the expounders of this argument, and were it so the fact that the weight is lessened during all work, racing or jogging, to me seems to settle that argument. Were it possihle to gain the same end hy the same weight used solely in the shoe, this theory might be right, hut I fail to see where the horse wearing an eight-ounce shoe and a fonr-ounce toe-weight undergoes a more severe strain than the trotter who carries continually a fourteen-ounce shoe.

"Of course, one cannot apply the same rule to all trotters and get them halanced, and there are horses that cannot trot to advantage with the toe-weight. Horses having excessive knee action, I have found, are apt to hit their elhows where the weight was used in the shoe alone, and hy using the lighter shoe with the toe-weight added it would straighten them ont, reduce the excessive action and prevent most surely any elbow hitting. Thns the horse possessing no action will do better, in my opinion, with the weight in the shoe and the omission of the toe weight. Of conrse, dnring the many years I have heen training I have handled trotters where I found the two-weight was not heneficial and hett r results were obtained hy putting the weight in the shoe, hut the cases were few and were of the kind where action was lacking and needed. Then, again, horses have their own special peculiarities, necessitating a study of their special reqniremen s, and oftentimes the trainer spends many honrs of study trying to remedy the gait of some fanlty-gaited trotter or pacer. No one can set np a rule or a series of rules that may he applied to all, nor divide the trotters into classes, and say that this rule applies to that class or that rule to this class. I have found during my training experience that these peculiarities run generally in families, and I have fonnd many families whose gait it would he impossihle to estahlish were it not for the useful little toe-weight.

"No, I do not helieve the time is coming when the weight will he discarded or when the hreeder will raise trotters so pure gaited that we trainers will find that the toe-weight is no longer a necessary adjnnct of the art. Certainly, there will he hors s that are gaited so that they can trot without heavy shoes or toe-weights, hut the day when we shall discard them is many years away."

Charles Tanner thus tells the story regarding the sale of Cresceus. Before the sale it hecame evident that several gentlemen were prepared to pay from $7,000 to $12,000 for the colt. Col. Bailey, of Louisville, owner of Commodore Potter 2:13, was prepared to pay about $7,500, the Huhingers were willing to give as much, and Henry Fleischmann had an order from Europe to go to $9,500. Mr. Bailey had a chance to make but one hid, which was $3,000, and opened the sale on the horse. Mike Bowerman raised it to $6,000, and Charles Tanner having an order for $10,000 and knowing Fleischmann's order, he promptly hid to his limit. It is said that Mr Ketcham was in possession of an order from Europe to hid $12,000, hut he did not have a chance to use it for the hid of $14,000 came immediately after Tanner's. Mr. Tanne says a member of the Gentlemen's Driving Club authorized him to hid $10,000 on the chestnut colt.

The speed track at Golden Gate Park is in splendid condition for fast work, and is the liveliest place in the park on Sundays.

THE WEEK'S RACING.

Flirtation St kes at Oakland and Palace Hotsl Stakes at Inglsside the Features.

The Fli tation Stakes were the feature of last Saturday, the closing day at Oakland, hut as there were hut three starters, the event was rohhed of that interest which always attaches to a large field of horses The stake is for two-year-old fillies and the distance six and one-half fnrlongs. Hnmidity, the hrown filly hy Hindoo, out of impo ted Calphurnia, helonging to the Burns & Waterhouse stable, was the favorite and won the race as she pleased, going to the front soon after the start and retaining the lead to the end, Elizabeth R. being two lengths hehind her, and Hemera last. The distance was run in 1:20¼, aud the track was fast.

The same day the mare May W., hy imported Eagle Plume, won at a mile, heating Don Quixote, Horton and Crossmolina, and getting away first, was never headed, reaching the wire in 1:30¾. As the mare won easily the race stamped her as an exceptionally good one.

The horses crossed the hay on Monday, and the crowd went to Ingleside. Good racing has heen furnished, though there has been considerahle fanlt found with the starting. The weather has heen generally cold,and rainy on one day which has prohahly had a had effect on hoth Mr. Caldwell and the jockeys. The Palace Hotel Stakes, worth $1,000 was decided on Wednesday. This is a handicap steeplechase over the short course. As a race it did not amount to much, hut there was an incident in it which was out of the ordinary. Hnntsman was the favorite. On the second round he fell, and his rider Shephard, was stunned so that he was unahle to remount his horse. Mr. Corrigan was standing near and grasped the situation in an instant. Calling to Jockey Cook he told him to mount Huntsman and added that he thought he could win. Cook did as directed but was unahle to reach Reno and San Carlos, hut finished third. The weather has kept the crowds from heing large at Ingleside during the week and perhaps the down town pool rooms, which are getting more numerous each day, are keeping the field-hook crowd at home and hroke.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, dnriug the recent over-powering snow storm in New York, ordered one of the electrics, in order to save her horses from the fury of the blizzard. The electric, or horseless cah, motorized all right until it struck an emergency in the form of a snow drift, from which it refused to emerge. In fact, it failed to either proceed or recede. The horseless motor is all right when there is nothing ahead hut smooth sailing, hut as an emergency machine it is a cold and dead failure.

Splan & Newgass have sold at private sale to Adam Machattie, of Glasgow, Scotland, for his private use, the hay mare Fashion Maid, 2:24. Mr. Splan hought her to use himself on the snow. She is handsome enough to win a blue rihbon in almost any show ring, and is a particularly fine horse under saddle.

Monterey 2:09¼, the champion trotting stallion of the Pacific Coast, and Rex Alto 2:07¾, the fast pacing gelding, will start in a race at San Diego on New Year-day for a special purse.

DIRECT LIKED A HARD TRACK,

So Mr. Salisbury Had It Scraped Down to the Bed Rock and Beat Hal Pointer.

Monroe Salisbury, "the King maker," was in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office one day this week, looking up the pedigrees of a few trotters that he has his eye on for 1900, when he expects to have done with the Klondike region and again be going down the line on the big eastern circuits with a string of champions. He is in better health than for years past and of stout and robust frame. A little lighter than before he crossed the Chilcoot last year, and therefore, he says, in better condition to make the trip again. His prospects in the northern region are good, and we hope he may uncover a goodly pile of the yellow nuggets. If he succeeds the easterners will have to look out for him in 1900, as no man living has a better eye for speed than he, or knows better how it can be gotten out of a horse.

The old days when he had the little black racal, Direct, are among the pleasantest in Mr. Salisbury's memory, and his eyes twinkle as he relates some of the incidents of those campaigns.

"I need to have many a wrangle with Hamlin," said he, "over the way the track should be worked. A good man and a thorough horseman is Hamlin, and as sharp as men are made when it comes to arranging conditions. He always wanted the track harrowed about three inches deep, when Hal Pointer and Direct were to meet, while I wanted a good hard track. We met at a little town down in Tennessee, and I wanted to win with the little black horse. I went to Hamlin and proposed to toss up to see which should work the track; he refused. Then I offered to toss up for position and each would work his part of the track to suit himself. That didn't suit Hamlin. Then I offered to give him the pole with Pointer if he would permit me to scrape the outside. The old fellow would not agree to that either and said we would both take our chances. I noticed, however, the track was being worked with a harrow that belonged to Hamlin. It had long, fine teeth and cut down pretty deep. I knew that the track was worked every evening after the races ended, so I went to the man who attended to it and told him I would give him $50 if he would put a scraper on that evening and scrape the track down to the hard pan if possible, so that Hamlin's scraper could not cut it up. The next morning when we went out to the grounds, I thought Hamlin would raise an objection to the track. That fellow had earned his $50. The dirt was piled up on the outside of the course until it looked like a levee had been built around it. Hamlin did not say anything, but I could tell by the looks of his eye that he would not forget the incident and I would have to keep my eyes open, as he would get good and even at the first opportunity. I won with the little horse that afternoon," said Mr. Salisbury, as he passed out the door with a smile on his face.

Laid Up to Win.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—There is so much said about laying up heats, that I would like to call attention to an accident that happened to me five years ago here in California, and ask some of the advocates of the rule what they would have done had they been in my shoes. I had much the best horse in the race, and as he was a stallion I wanted him to win in three straight heats so as to give the horse a reputation as it was in the county where he stood and was to make the next season. I thought three heats between 2:25 and 2:30 would win easy. The track was a very poor one and the day was very hot. My horse won the first heat in 2:26 and beat the favorite, a little mare, rather handily, though I did not have any time to waste. The next heat an old gelding that was not thought to have a chance in a hundred drove me out in 2:27 and was only a neck behind, while the mare, owing to a bad break, was away back—just beating the flag. The third heat the judges gave me the worst of the start, and the gelding and the mare took the track from me before getting to the quarter pole. The track was narrow and very rough on the outside. I might have beaten them down the stretch, but my horse was big and high in flesh and I was afraid that if I drove him hard and lost it would cook him and lose me the race. So I laid him up, but got inside the flag. I took no chances the next time, got him away well and won, though he was so tired after that heat that I was certain he could not have trotted another mile better than 2:40. I believe I did right to lay up the heat, and by so doing won the race and the money. It may be that those who are such sticklers for the rule will say that a race as slow as 2:26 don't count anyway, but the rules are of as much importance to us up here in the mountains as they are over there on the Grand Circuit in the East.

Yours, YREKA.

Making Fairs Attractive.

MR. EDITOR—I have been a sojourner in your State but a very short time, and will probably return to my home in the Mississippi valley as soon as spring opens, but I have been much interested in reading the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN while here, especially the articles in regard to county fairs, which you state have not been held during the past four years here.

As my business takes me to many of the small country fairs in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and the other States during the summer season perhaps I might be able to give your readers a few pointers as to how to attract the biggest crowd to a fair. The most successful fairs in point of attendance over in our country are those which pay the most attention to live-stock shows and offer the biggest premiums for those products which are grown or raised in the district. In our county the fair is a week of enjoyment. Last year we had some good racing five afternoons of the week, and on the fair grounds were all sort of shows and attractions. Every day was like a circus day. By ten o'clock the people from the surrounding country came pouring in and by half past one, when the races were called and all other attractions had to close up, the grand stand was crowded with people. The purses were $400 each — three of them each day. I heard that some of the drivers pulled their horses and that all did not drive honest, but the people seemed to enjoy the fun immensely. California ought to be an ideal place for fairs, and they do a great deal for all agricultural pursuits. The states of Ohio and Illinois probably contain the finest cattle, hogs and sheep in the world, and the breeds owe much of their improvement to the educating influences of our county fairs. I would sum up the drawing cards of a fair as follows:

A good live-stock exhibit.
A local horse show.
A good agricultural exhibit.
Some sort of amusements.
Good racing.

When these are provided and advertised the people will come if they are anything like the residents of my county.

THOS. H. B. RAEFIELD.

Wilfred Page Furnishes Some Evidence.

When Wilfred Page, of the Rancho Cotati, in this State, purchased at the Josiah White auction sale in this city in November, 1892, two fillies by Sidney out of Miss Helen by Gen. Benton, second dam Nettie George by Norfolk, he took some steps to establish their breeding, and got certificates from the proper parties. The other day he ran across these old papers and brought them to the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, that they might be looked over. There were among them a certificate from Superintendent Covey to the fact that the mare Nettie George was bred to Gen. Benton in 1877, and others from W. W. Mendenhall that a mare by Gen. Benton out of Nettie George was bred to Sidney during the season corresponding to the age of the filly belonging to Mr. Deane and sold at the White sale. There were also certificates from Mr. White and Mr. Deane as to the ownership of the filly and that they were by Sidney out of Miss Helen by Gen. Benton. The most important document, however, (as the breeding of Miss Helen is thoroughly established) is one signed by the late Wesley George, owner of the mare Nettie George. His certificate is as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, August 17th, 1892.

I hereby certify that I purchased the mare Nettie George, by Norfolk out of the Callahan mare by Ashland, second dam by Volscian, third dam by Bulwer, fourth dam by Illinois Medoc, from Mr. Callahan of Sacramento, Cal., who bred the said mare. I pledged said mare to Frank Malone, and whilst in his possession she was bred to Gen. Benton by the said Frank Malone.

WESLEY GEORGE,
319 Golden Gate Avenue,
San Francisco.

MR. WM. FLANAGAN, of Brooklyn, who formerly owned Lady Flanagan, the dam of Eagle Flanagan, 2:07½, speaking of that mare as he knew her, said: "I bought her from a dealer from Utica, the date I do not remember, and drove her on the Brooklyn roads for about two years. He represented her to be by Wood's Hambletonian. She was a large and powerful solid bay mare, about 16 hands high, and would weigh 1,050 pounds, square-gaited, level headed and showed breeding in her appearance and actions. I do not believe she ever had any track mark, but I could take her from my wagon and hitch her to a sulky and drive her any time in 2:32. I could not beat that, but could always calculate on coming pretty near it. She was one of the best road horses for what she could do that I ever owned, and having been a steady road driver on the Brooklyn roads for 30 years, and owning good and bad ones in that time, I feel that I am fully competent to judge."

Death of Sebra Briggs.

At French Camp in this State on the 12th instant Sebra Brigge, an old resident of California, passed away at the advanced age of 79 years. Among the latter generation of horsemen he was not widely known, though for the past twenty years he has acted as Superintendent of the race track at Stockton and few ever attended the meetings there but will recall him to memory. He was a native of Maine and came to California in early days. When Nathan Coombs of Napa was alive and owned Ashland, Billy Cheatem and Lodi, Mr. Brigge was employed on the farm, and had those stallions under his especial care. In those days every man in California who owned a thoroughbred horse or attended the meetings held in this State, knew Sebra Brigge. He was an honest, painstaking, careful man, respected by all and a general favorite. His death was caused by pneumonia, and his remains were followed to a grave in the Stockton cemetery by the Pioneers and Masons of that city, he being a member of both those orders.

The Horse Show at Los Angeles.

News comes from Los Angeles that additional prizes and premiums are being received by the Association for the Horse Show, to be held in February. A very handsome hand-painted fan, valued at $150, is a special prize to be offered in some event on floral day and a handsome gold stop-watch of a like valuation is another.

The list of box holders is large at this time, and there are but few boxes still unsold. An indication of the popularity of the coming show is found in the fact that a number of Eastern tourists who have already arrived in Los Angeles have sent in subscriptions for private boxes for the coming event. These gentlemen are from the parts of the country where horse shows are all the rage, and they know what a great attraction a rightly conducted Horse Show is.

The consulting architect of the horse show, is now working on the plans for the arena and stables. They will be finished next week, shortly after which arrangements will be made for the letting of contracts for the construction work.

Inquiries are now being received on all sides from intending local exhibitors as to the classification of the various events and the premiums to be offered. A large number of entries have also been made from Los Angeles, San Diego and other points in the southern country, and with the guaranteed exhibits of Mr. Hobart and others from San Francisco a full list of exhibits is already assured.

It has been definitely settled that a match game of polo between the two famous polo teams of Burlingame and Riverside will take place during or soon after the Horse Show. The Riverside team will be composed of Messrs. Bettner, Waring, Maud and Mackey, the first three of whom are vice-presidents of the Horse Show Association. The Burlingame team will probably be made up of Messrs. Hobart, the two Tobins and Mr. Dunphy. These clubs have already played several exciting matches, and there will be a keen interest felt in this coming game for supremacy. The game will probably be played at Agricultural Park, Los Angeles, a central ground, agreeable to both teams.

California Youngsters In Rhode Island.

At the farm of Col. Isaac L. Goff, of Providence, R. I., there is a nice bunch of young trotters and pacers bred in California. A correspondent of the Western Horseman visited the farm recently and went into ecstasy over a two-year-old, which he spoke of as follows:

About the warmest baby in the bunch is the black yearling I. L. G. He is by Oro Wilkes, dam by Arthurton. If he isn't a corncracker, it's all up with me as a prophet. I set my tent pine right there and camp on that spot.

Another by Oro Wilkes, coming two, a black filly, dam Flora Bell, 2:25, by Alcona, is quite shifty and can sift some herself.

Two-year-old filly Silence, by Wildnut, dam Sonnet, 2:24½.

Rio Doncella, a filly, same age, by Rio Alto, 2:16½, dam Anselma, 2:29½.

A two-year-old bay colt, Consolador, by Altivo, 2:18½, dam Consolidation, dam of Utility, 2:13, by Director.

A two-year-old filly, Leonora, by Monaco, 2:19¼, dam by Messenger Duroc, is a pretty fair actress, and as a looker is excellent.

Black two-year-old filly Adverosa, by Advertiser, dam by Nutwood, is one that appears likely to make a few step about some. She is very nearly my kind.

Another, same age as Adverosa, and bred the same, is the chestnut gelding Adronda, fairly good but I was not particularly taken with him.

There the band is. You can take your choice. I know which suits me best, and I know it as well as if I weighed a ton. Better keep cases on some of them, for they will be well known before a dozen moons wax and wane.

McKinley Won.

There are but few people who know that President McKinley once rode a race horse, but John Boies, who went to Topeka from Ohio forty years ago, tell this story on him, says a Kansas City dispatch: "I have known William McKinley since he was a small boy. He won a horse race for me at Youngstown when he was only fourteen years old. At that time I was dealing a little in fast horses, and I had a runner at the Youngstown fair. I offered young McKinley $1 to ride my horse, and promised to give him $5 if he won the race. The boy was willing to ride, but before he would do so he went to his father and asked permission. The father said he could do as he pleased, and so the lad accepted my offer. He won the race," said Mr. Boies, in conclusion, "and he has won nearly every race he has entered since."

Mother Goose Melodies for Racing Goslings.

[Horse Fancier.]

"Will you walk into my paddock?"
Said the spider to the fly.
"It's the prettiest enclosure
That ever met your eye.
It will only cost you fifty cents
To get inside the gate,
And you'll see some funny things and get Your leg pulled while you wait."

—o—

"Hickory dickory dock!
Somebody squared the jock!
When they came into view
He was last but two,'
And the owner dropped his sock!"

—o—

"If you've got a bad horse
And would guard against loss
Put up a boy that can 'jostle and cross,'
Make weight by holding the scales with his toes,
And 'stiffen the rest of 'em ('under the rose')!"

—o—

Bookie! bookie! (rather crook-y)
How does your business grow?
"I wins when the suckers bet with me,
But when I backs 'em!—No!"

—o—

"There once was a jockey, and what do you think?
He'd melt ice with money, and wine only drink!
Champagne and birds was the heft of his diet,
But the bloomin' young ass couldn't keep his mouth quiet!"

—o—

"Goosey, goosey gander,
Whither did you wander?"
"Up and down the quarter stretch,
And to the bookies, yonder.
"Goosey, goosey gander,
How, then, did you fare?"
"They got my roll, my watch and clothes,
And nearly got my hair!"

—o—

"There was a crooked man,
And he owned a crooked horse;
He won some crooked races
Upon a crooked course.
He had a crooked rider.
(Couldn't lie straight in his bed.)
And they never got him straightened out
'Til after he was dead!"

—o—

"Little Bo-Peep was fast asleep
When the field swung into the stretch.
And from his seat in the stewards' stand
Their fine work he failed to "ketch."

—o—

And when he woke up with a sudden start
And with glasses tried to find 'em
The race was run and the jobs were done
Leaving sad tales behind 'em!"

—o—

"Dear little public, give down your "milk,"
For I've got to buy Birdie a gown of silk.
An eighty per cent. book's the best I can show,
For Birdies and faro come high, don't you know?"

The Blacklock Drop Again.

That there never has been so great a sire as Birdcatcher's descendant, Stockwell, is matter of history; that there never again will he is my opinion, says an English turf writer. Who can ever forget the year 1866, in which he had thirty-nine winners of £66,000 to his credit, and that in the days when there were no big stakes, such as there are now. It is true that the house of Blacklock will this year head the list of winning stallions, through its best representative Galopin, but that horse probably owes much of his success to the close strain of Birdcatcher in his sire Vedette, and it is worth noticing that, although you may inbreed as closely as you like to this blood, no other seems to do much good without it. It is more than likely that Orme, whose son Flying Fox is undoubtedly the best of his age, will head the list of winning stallions, this time next year; whilst Kendal, Martagon, and Bonavista will probably help him to maintain the honor of the Doncaster branch of the house of Stockwell. Blair Athol's best sons have always gone abroad, and St. Gatien followed his son Meddler to America only a few days ago. As long as the Stud Book lasts, the house founded by Stockwell, son of The Baron, by Birdcatcher, will always be bang to the front.

OWNERS and trainers will do well to bear in mind before stakes close that with the great scarcity of four-year-olds and upwards with any pretensions to class, three-year-olds have a great opportunity to play a prominent part in all of the important handicaps in 1899.

More of the Starting Question.

Steward James Galway, of the Jockey Club, is in hearty accord with The Morning Telegraph's agitation for the more prompt and better starting of race horses. "It is evident that the present plan does not fill the bill," said Mr. Galway yesterday. "I am satisfied the Jockey Club will take the matter up this winter, as it will other important features of racing. In the meantime nothing can be lost by reason of a thorough ventilation of the starting problem.

"It is gratifying to me that Mr. Whitney has shown that he is interested in the details of racing management, both through his published interview as well as through his attendance at recent meetings of the Jockey Club. I wish we had twenty more men just like him willing to take a hand in racing affairs. As to Mr. Whitney's plan of leaving disobedient jockeys at the post, I would hardly like to express an opinion. There is no doubt, however, that something should be done to secure better behavior at the post on the part of jockeys.

"The jockeys must be in accord with the starter. If they are not, then the starts are bound to be wearisome and unsatisfactory. My own theory has always been that the jockeys ought to be suspended for disobedience and the punishment rigidly adhered to. When a boy is down he should not be permitted to ride either for his own stable or anybody else. He should be kept on the ground until his time of suspicion has expired.

"For the inconvenience that owners may suffer, let the owners fall back on the jockeys for redress. While the boy is under suspicion also suspend his salary, and let the owners insert a clause in their contracts with jockeys to that effect. Thus the burden will fall heavily upon the riders—so heavily that I think a very little experience of this sort of discipline would be sufficient to whip them all into line. This was the policy pursued at old Monmouth Park until Secretary Wheatley established the precedent at Saratoga that a jockey under suspension might ride for his own stable.

"In connection with the criticisms of last season's starting, it may be opportune to say that the Stewards had very little to do with the disciplins of jockeys, practically nothing in fact. That was left entirely with the starter, and if the boys were put up again before their terms of suspension had expired it was done through the starter and not through the Stewards. We discussed the matter early in the spring, and decided that it would be better for the starter to have absolute control of the jockeys; that if he merely reported to the Stewards he might be more lenient than he would be if he struck when the iron was hot and meted out punishment at the post."

The Condemned Mares.

Eugene Leigh gives the following account of his sale at St. Louis of the mares banished from the thoroughbred lists by the Breeders Protective Association, and incidentally what he thinks should be done to clear the tracks of horses unable to run fast enough to win races:

"The cast-offs were bought by horse dealers and sold for an average price of $22 a head. Farmers did not seem to care for this sort of stuff. There were many good ones in the lot. The fillies were sold without a pedigree, and if any of them should produce a racehorse he never can be registered, as the jockey club has been notified to mark 'dead' all the animals sold.

"Some money—several hundred dollars—was lost in this first venture looking to the weeding out of the inferior stock but each year the same kind of sale will take place. I favor a subscription for the purpose of instituting a fund for the purchase of all yearlings not bringing over $25. I will start the subscription with $200.

"My idea is to buy such horses and knock them in the head. They are only in the way at a race track and bother everybody from the secretary down. Many pretty stories are told of how one of these 'crabs' now and again wins at 250 to 1 and furnishes the poor owner with the money to send his boy to Harvard or his girl to Vassar, but my experience is that by the time this kind of a horse wins the owner hasn't a dollar left to bet on him, and the purse goes to the feed man. At any race meeting there are many horses that never run inside the money, and you will discover that most of these were cheap yearlings.

"It has long been a joke that the best bred horses on any race card are those with faultless pedigrees found in a race for four and five-year-old maidens. The reason is plain, such animals being misshapen or unsound from birth. My theory is to destroy all such, just as the ancient Greeks exposed their imperfect children. As it is, some man who has read the stud book gets a full brother of a great race horse for $18 and spends $1,000 trying to make him win a race. Failing, he condemns the turf. This money would get into the hands of racing people in some other way were the bad yearlings killed."

CHARLES F. DWYER has shipped Sly Fox, 3, by Silver Fox—Asteria, to England to be raced next year if he recovers form. Sly Fox was an exceedingly good colt last spring and was in great form at the Morris Park and Gravesend spring meetings, where he won the Van Ness Stakes Pocantico Handicap, Van Cortlandt High Weight Handicap, Broadway Stakes and Preakness Stakes and ran third in the Brooklyn Handicap, defeating among others such good ones of his own age as The Huguenot, George Keene, Mirthful, Traverser, Mont d'Or and Lydian. Afterward he went lame and trained off so badly that shipping him to England looks like a measure of doubtful value.

THE FIGURE GUIDE.

Wm. Allison's Defense of the Late Bruce Lowe's Book on Breeding.

Much of interest has been written on the book published by the late C. Bruce Lowe of Australia, and the theory therein expounded which he called the figure system of breeding. Probably a majority of those who discussed the theory pro and con never read the book. Marcus Daly, the well known Montana millionaire and breeder said an attempt to fathom the mysteries of the work nearly drove him crazy, while many others with less brains and no study, except a cursory reading of newspaper reviews of the book were able to give out opinions for and against the theory that were, in their own minds, conclusive of its value or the worthlessness as the case might be. In the London Sportsman of November 30th, however, is an article from the pen of a student and a scholar who is recognized as one of the best of modern writers on horse breeding, Mr. William Allison, known best in this country probably by the nom de plume of "North Yorkshireman." This article was called out by some criticisms on Mr. Lowe's work. It is as follows:

"I often wonder at the folly of those who, from any but a purely academic standpoint, discuss questions of bloodstock breeding as if every item of blood in a horse or mare must necessarily have its exact arithmetical value, neither more nor less. If there be one thing certain in breeding bloodstock or anything else, it is that particular items or lines or blood have a predominating influence wholly disproportionate to what a mere calculation of quarterings would assign them, and this influence is especially shown by the way in which great brood mares establish families which go on and on, while brood mares without the same character and vital force leave descendants which dwindle and die out. It is this great fact which is at the root of the figure system, and it is idle to contend, as some do, that the system is misleading, because the No. 1 family of the present day contains but an infinitesimal proportion of the blood of the Natural Barb mare. It would be as idle to deny that in dealing with tail male descent it is practically the same thing whether we talk of descendants of Eclipse or the Darley Arabian, though, of course, Eclipse had any amount of other crosses in him. The main point is that No. 1 family holds that place by virtue of winning results up to and including the present season, and that the running and sire families are to the fore all the world over, No. 19 being also very prominent in France. Practical breeders will, of course, understand that in No. 1, as in all other families, there are poor and rich relations, and to be a member of the family does not necessarily spell success. All other conditions should be carefully weighed, and the figure is simply a guide as indicating the balance of probabilities. The funny thing is that men who do not realize the value of the figures are the first to appreciate the value of mares of the Queen Mary, Woodhine, Pocahontas, and Devotion families, simply because they can remember those mares.

The figures do not profess to do more than present to them comprehensively at a glance that very system of following the families of great brood mares, and the results of it ranged in accordance with the classic victories of the stock. As in wines, however, there are various growths, so of great brood mares there are various branches, and in dealing with the Queen Mary family, for example, I suppose we should all prefer descendants of Haricot, Blink Bonny or Bonny Bell to those of Bab at the Bowster. When all is said and done, three original sires, and three only, ousted all the others in the maintenance of tail male descent, and of these Eclipse has long since almost overwhelmed the other two, while, of Eclipse's descendants, the Whalebones have attained immense preponderance. Just in the same way in tail female descent some eight or nine original mares have shown vast prepotency over all others, and this phenomenon appears likely to continue, as many of the less distinguished families will almost certainly die out altogether. It is the more remarkable because almost any well grown thoroughbred mare gets a chance at the stud, whereas among horses many a possibly successful stallion never does get a chance, and it may be for this reason that the best families in the female line have taken longer in shaking off all the others. Always let it be clearly understood that so long as you possess mares descended in the female line from a certain family you possess that family. It is for this reason that high caste Arab mares are almost unobtainable, though horses can be easily purchased. Well do I remember an old man named James Humphrey, of Kilburn, in Yorkshire, who possessed a hitch or two of the late Sir George Wombwell's famous breed of retrievers, and he used to sell all the dogs he bred whenever he could, but nothing would induce him to part with a hitch pup, and, to the best of my recollection, the present Sir George himself has lost the breed.

The great mistake which is so commonly made in regard to Bruce Lowe's book is to confound the figure guide with the author's theories as to its application. The latter may be unsound or fanciful, but the former is based on a sure foundation. If you will kindly turn to the preface of the book you will find that I wrote as follows: "The figure system itself is a model of convenience and simplicity, serviceable to all breeders alike, whether they agree with the author's deductions from it or not."

You are quite in error, however, in thinking that figure system has not gained extensive hold in England. Almost daily at our office we get applications from well-known breeders to figure out their studs for them. I may mention the Duke of Devonshire, Sir J. Blundell Maple, Mr. A. James, the Earl of Derby, Lord Stanley, Mr. C. D. Rose, Mr. T. S. Jay, Maj. W. H. Walker, Mrs. Langtry among those who have had the figured pedigrees printed in book form. On the Continent the figures are universally used—at the Imperial Stud Graditz, at the Kisher Stud, Austria-Hungary, and at every stud of the slightest importance in those countries and France. The point to be kept in view, however, is that the figures constitute a guide and not a fetish. They are of no use unless considered with liberal intelligence, and practical knowledge. It would have been far better had poor Bruce Lowe called his book the "Figure Guide," instead of the "Figure System."

Oakland Summaries.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 8

Five furlongs, Maiden two-year-olds—Peter Weber, 105 (Devin), 3 to 1 won; Mariello, 107 (Thorpe), 8 to 5, second; Gleugaber, 108 (N. Turner), 7 to 2, third; Raclvan, Limatus, Fermo, Simi, Cheated. Time, 1:01½.

Six furlongs, Selling—Don Luis, 100 (N. Turner), 10 to 1, won; Chihuahua, 110 (Piggott), 2 to 5, second; Colonel Dan, 112 (Thorpe), 6 to 1, third; Aluminum, None such, Little Alarm. Time, 1:14½.

Seven furlongs, Selling—Libertine, 108 (J. Reiff), 8 to 5, won; Imperious, 107 (H. Martin), 3 to 1, second; Sly, 105 (Brown), 15 to 1, third; Pongo, Flandes, Lady Britanic, Manzanello, O'Fleta. Time, 1:27½.

Futurity Course, Handicap—Etta H., 118 (Wilson), 7 to 2, won; Soscol, 100 (Turner), 15 to 1, second; Sport McAllister, 114 (Spence), 4 to 5, third; Amasa, Homestake, Rosebeau. Time, 1:11.

Futurity Course, Selling—Schultz, 105 (Martin), 10 to 1, won; Majesty, 103 (Bullman), 20 to 1, second; Ricardo, 112 (O'Neill), 8 to 1, third; Rosormaid, Durward, Defiant, Jack o' Lantern, Gracias, Ballverso, Roulette Wheel, Jerilderie. Time, 1:11¾.

Seven furlongs, Selling—Mamie G., 102 (Jones), 2 to 1, won; Zamar II., 110 (Martin), 7 to 2, second; Judge Stouffer, 107 (Turner), 3 to 1, third; Inverary II., Outaway, Be Happy. Time, 1:27¾.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9.

Futurity course, selling—Faversham, 108 (Spencer), 5 to 2, won; Silver Beaux, 105 (Bullman), even, second; Gilt Edge, 105 (Turner), 40 to 1 third; Polka, Dunpraise, Crutch. Time, 1:11½.

One mile—Recreation, 100 (Woods), 7 to 10, won; Rosormonde, 100 (Bullman), 11 to 5, second; Gulider, 105 (Spencer, 5 to 1, third; Bonnie Ione, Alvero. Time, 1:42.

CONEY ISLAND JOCKEY CLUB.

Rich Prizes Offered in Stakes Which Close January 3d.

In our advertising colums this week will be found the conditions of the rich stakes offered by the Coney Island Jockey Club, of New York. These stakes are as follows:

The Futurity—With $8,750 added, estimated value $50,-000, of which $3,720 goes to the breeders, for the autumn meeting of 1901.

The Suburban, $10,000, the winner to receive $7,000; weights to be announced February 1st. One and one quarter miles.

The Advance—$2,500 added. One and three fourths miles.

The June Handicaps—The Coney Island, $1,500, six furlongs; the Sheepshead Bay, $1,500, one mile; the Long Island, $2,000, one mile and one furlong.

For Three-year olds—The Swift, $1,100 added; seven furlongs; The Spendthrift, $1,000 added; one mile and one furlong.

For Two-year-olds—The Great Trial, $20,000, foals of 1897. Futurity course.

The Double Event—$10,000. Last five and one-half furlongs of Futurity course; second event to be run on the last day of the June meeting, same conditions. Futurity course.

The Zephyr—$1,000 added, Futurity course.

The Vernal—$1,000 added for fillies, two-year-olds, last five furlongs of Futurity course.

For the autumn meeting, 1899—The Flight, $1,250 added, two-year-olds and upward, seven furlongs; the September, $1,250 added, for three-year-olds, one mile and three furlongs; the autumn, $3 000, for two-year-olds. Futurity course; the Flatbush, $3,000, for two-year-olds, seven furlongs; the Great Eastern, $5,000, for two-year-olds, Futurity course.

The Victoria Derby Winners.

"Javelin" in the Melbourne Leader, says: The history of the Victoria Derby presents some peculiarly interesting features and coincidences. The sires of the last four winners were, in their respective years, red hot favorites, and all missed it. Sheet Anchor, sire of The Harvester (the winner in 1894), was not a Derby candidate, but the three immediately preceding candidates were all by sires who themselves had won the great classic event. The most remarkable features of the Victoria Derby are the successful connections with it of the great Fisherman, Yattendon and Musket families. It has been won by Angler, Seagull and My Dream, all got by Fisherman; by Oberon, whose sire, Ferryman, was also one of Fisherman's sons; by Miss Jessie, daughter of Maribyrnong, another son of Fisherman; by Nevigator and Trident, both sons of Robinson Crusoe, who was the son of Angler; and by The Admiral, whose sire, Richmond, was by Maribyrnong. The Yattendon family has produced winners of the Victoria Derby in Chester and Grand Flaneur, sons of Yattendon; in Dreadnought and Camoola, sons of Chester, and in Cocos, by Abercorn, another of Chester's sons. The dam of Cocos, by the way, was by Robinson Crusoe, so this year's Derby winner represents both the Yattendon and Fisherman families. The Musket family has borne a prominent part in the history of the race, through its winners, Martini-Henry and Nordenfeldt, sons of Musket, and also representing the Fisherman family through their dams, Sylvia and Onyx. Strathmore and Carnage, both Derby winners, are sons of Nordenfeldt; and Wallace and Amberite, who have also been decked with the blue ribbon at Flemington, are sons of Carbine, and, therefore, the grandsons of Musket.

Some Sentiment Still.

In these sordid days of tremendous combination sales and kaleidoscopic changes of ownership, where to-day one owns a farm and stud and to-morrow sells his plant for what it will bring and where on the surface the only aim and object of the men connected with the harness turf seems to be to make money, it is comforting to find that sentiment is not yet dead in the owners' and breeders' ranks.

A few days ago a gentleman wrote to a journal as follows: "I wish to say that the most pleasant years of my life have been spent in breeding the trotter. I feel that I made many friends whom I hold in cherished remembrance and when my working days are over and I am ready to spend the remainder of my life in peace and happiness, I will be found breeding the trotter again. I am one of those who believe that the brains, energy and money of such men as the elder Alexander, Col. West, McFerra, of Glenview, Senator Stanford, and a host of others, builded wisely, and that if those who follow will be as game and wise, a rich harvest will be their portion. The American trotter is an American product strictly, and has never needed an importation from any country, as in the case of the thoroughbred, to improve the breed. We will forever lead the world in the production of the light harness horse, if we will only husband our resources."

The man that wrote the above had "sentiment" enough in his make-up to give a favorite old horse the best a large farm afforded for some years after the old hero had ceased to be anything but a breeder of expense and the object of much solicitous care.

A Prominent Liveryman.

Mr. C. B. Dickens of Minneapolis, Minn., who conducts one of the largest livery stables in the northwest, writes as follows: "I have been using Quinn's Ointment for some time and with the greatest success. I take pleasure in recommending it to my friends. No horseman should be without it in his stable." For curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all bunches it has no equal.

VETERINARY DEPATRMENT.

CONDUCTED BY
WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C.V.C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

C. G.—I have a four-year-old colt that threw out a curb on his off hind leg last week and he is very lame on it. What would you advise me to do for it?

Answer—If the curb be hot and painful, and the colt be very lame, even when walking, shower the part with cold water two or three times a day, for four or five days, or until the severe inflammation has left it. Then rub the following blister well into the part, once.

Beniodide of mercury, half an ounce; lard, two ounces.

Before applying the blister, clip the hair from the part, and have it thoroughly dry and clean. During the following few days tie the colt so that he cannot injure the blistered part with his teeth, or by rubbing it against any object. This blister does not need washing off or greasing.

P. J. F.—What is good for a horse that has the lung fever? I have a horse that has it and I gave him a quart of linseed oil the day before yesterday and since that time he is breathing heavier and running at the nose. He won't eat anything and he grunts when I back him out of the stall.

Answer—I would advise you to have a qualified veterinary surgeon examine and prescribe for your horse. Seeing that he got worse since you gave him the oil, and is breathing heavier and running at the nose, I suspect that some of the oil has got into his lungs. If such be the case, there is very little hope to save him. Groaning or grunting when you move him, together with the other symptoms that you mention, indicate that he has pleurisy, or pleuro-pneumonia, either of which is very serious and needs good nursing and careful treatment.

With pleurisy you very often find weak circulation, and heart, which also needs attending to.

Until the veterinary surgeon arrives, attend to the horse's comfort. Clothe him warmly, rub and bandage his legs with woolen bandages. Let him have pure air to breathe, but no draught. Give him six ounces of whiskey in a bottle of oat meal gruel three times a day.

I cannot prescribe medical treatment without knowing the complications present.

Notes From the Antipodes.

[New Zealand Referee.]

The St. George—Strenue stallion Strennous died last month.

The Musket—Cascade horse, Waterfall, is dead.

The Queensland Derby, run for on November 5th, was won by Boreas, by Little Bernie, by Cheviot.

The profit on the Melbourne Cup Meeting will be about £11,500, as compared with £9,829 last year.

At the Queensland Turf Club's Spring Meeting, covering three days, £14,196 was passed through the totalisators.

The Sydney City Council has adopted a by-law making it illegal to use any public thoroughfare for bookmaking or wagering under a penalty of £10.

At the end of the first quarter Gozo is a long way at the head of the winning sires in Australia, with £9,000 to his credit. Trenton is second with £4,450, Lochiel being third.

Mr. Stead, who headed the list of winning owners in New Zealand last season, and Mr. W. R. Wilson who occupied a similar position as regards Australia, each won six races at the recent principal spring racing carnival of their respective countries. Another coincidence was that there were twenty-four races at both the C. J. C. and V. R. C. meetings.

The stake money paid away over the Melbourne Cup Meeting was £14,497, of which the lion's share was taken by New South Wales owners. Mr. Forrester received the biggest cheque, £4,199, which is, strange to say, within £1 of what he received last year. The others who secured four-figure cheques were Mr. W. R. Wilson, £2,850, and Mr. W. Bailey, owner of Cocos, £1,649.

THE LAWRENCE-WILLIAMS CO., Cleveland, O

Saddle Notes.

PRINCE PONIATOWSKI has leased St. Kristine, Jingle-Jingle and another one to A. Nickels. Jimmy Coffey will continue to handle the rest of the stable.

JACK O'LANTERN will not disappoint his backers again, as he has heretofore done. The injury which he received on Friday was of such a serious nature that he was destroyed by order of his owner.

HENRY SCHIELDS used to be one of the best boys in the country at getting away from the gate, but nowadays he is nearly always left at the post entirely, or off so poorly as to kill any chance his mount may have.

THE authorities at Inglesida are more strict than at Oakland. We are pleased to note that the gang of so-called stable boys are being driven from the grand stand at Ingleside. Oakland should certainly follow suit.

GEORGE ROSE has decided to take a few days' vacation and will spend it at Santa Cruz. Otis Evans will make the book in the ring while he is absent. His place on the field book block will be filled by Billy Connors of Chicago.

THE GRAFTER, winner of this year's Melbourne Cup has been sold to go to England, where there seems to be a decided penchant for Australian horses. Last year The Grafter ran second to his full brother Ganlus for the Melbourne Cup.

MONTGOMERY'S three-quarters of a mile in 1:14½, in such going as it was Thursday, marked a great performance. Bendoran also ran a great race, especially when one considers that it was his first time out. He will be hard to beat from now on.

AT the recent meeting at Lexington, Mr. Clem Pierce's Great Bend won the race in which, in addition to the purse, a service to Hanover was given by Col. Milt Young. Mr. Pierce has disposed of the service to Mr. C. F. McMeakin, of the Oakwood Stud.

THE popularity of the Sutter street Hammam is shown by the increasing patronage. A number of the prominent horsemen are constant visitors to these baths from one season to the other. For those who desire to keep in top form and condition the institution on Sutter street offers unparalleled advantages.

STEEPLECHASING is to be revived on a much more extensive scale than formerly at Morris Park next season. Two steeplechases of $5,000 each will be offered during the Spring meeting, and the size of the purses hung out in the other cross-country events will be sufficient to bring out not only new racing material but perhaps better cross-country riders.

DURING the recent sales held at Lexington, Ky., by the Easton Company and Messrs. Woodard & Shanklin, one of the largest buyers was Mr. Sydney Paget, who purchased $19,500 worth of horses. Mr. Paget is a good judge of a thoroughbred, and, though it is said that attempts were made to "boost" horses on him, he was not caught napping

STARTER CALDWELL has been instructed to fine in the sum of $25 every jockey that breaks through the barrier at Inglesida, and $25 more for a second breach, and the third offense will result in the suspension of the rider for the rest of the meeting. Horses breaking through the barrier two or more times will be barred for the rest of the meeting.

THE best English critics of racing think that this year's three-year-olds were a bad lot. Just think what would have happened if Hamburg had been engaged in the Derby, St. Leger, etc., had landed in England well and showed the same form in those races that he did in the Realization! Also suppose Plaudit and Bowling Brook had engagements in those races.

RACING men generally will regret to learn that the well known colored trainer, Albert Cooper, is dangerously ill in St. Catherine's Hospital, Chicago. He is suffering from catarrh of the stomach and dropsy and is in a critical condition. A few years ago Cooper trained for James R. Keene. Latterly he has been handling a few horses for Mr. Chanler and some of his own.

MR. CALDWELL made one of those awful starts of his on Thursday. He left two at the post out of a field of six, and one of them, Mainstay, was second choice, and heavily played for the place. The public are getting very much disgusted at the ragged starting, and the remarks heard in the ring are far from complimentary to Mr. Caldwell.

THE death of Mr. W. C. Whitney's crack jumper, Shillabah, is reported. By common consent this four-year-old son of Duke of Magenta and Shansheen was considered the best cross-country horse that has been developed within a number of years past. Great things were expected from him in the jumping stakes of 1899, and his loss will be quite a blow to Mr. Whitney, with whom he was a special favorite.

THE Fleischmanns offered W. P. Burch, the owner of Gen. Mart Geary, $2,000 for the colt last week, but the offer was refused. Gen. Mart Gary is a fair colt as his victory over Lady Lindsey showed, but he does not look like a world-beater nor does he show a disposition to go further than a sprinting distance. Horsemen generally consider the offer of the Fleischmanns a liberal one, and wonder that Bruch did not accept it.

BULLMAN was called to the Judges' stand after winning on Buckwa, and severely reprimanded by the Judges for his reckless riding. He almost put Our Climata over the fence in the stretch. Bullman's rough tactics have been much commented on, by the regulars, for some time past, so yesterday's occurrence did not come in the nature of a surprise. It would be too bad to see a boy, who is so rapidly making a name for himself as Bullman is, forfeit his popularity through ruffianism.

ST. PHILIP, the erratic son of St. Carlo, has developed into a sulker of the worst description; his actions at the post yesterday were of such a nature that his owner offered him to any one who would lead him away from the stable; Frank Narvaez closed with the offer and added the gold brick to his string of racers.

THE jury could not agree in the case of the officials of the Washington Jockey Club, charged with permitting gambling on the Bennings track, standing ten for acquittal and two for conviction. No time was set for a new trial and it is deemed doubtful whether the case will be pushed farther. It was instigated by Washington gamblers and the outcome is looked upon as a practical defeat for them.

BARON ROTHSCHILD heads the list of winning owners in England during the past season, with a total of $150,085 to his credit. Seventh place on the list is held by Mr. Pierre Lorillard, his winnings amounting to $43,450. Lord William Beresford, with $40,100, ranks tenth. The horses belonging to the Prince of Wales won $31,735, which places him fourteenth. This is quite a falling off from his record in 1896, when he won $184,095, chiefly owing to Persimmon's victories.

A MUCH needed improvement at Inglesida is a new jockey board; the present one is painted a neutral tint which does not contrast sufficiently with the white lettering of the jockeys' names, which makes it difficult to read them. The Jockey Club has heretofore furnished every convenience for the comfort and entertainment of its patrons but the present appliances in use for the display of the names of jockeys riding are not up to date nor do they tally with other more modern features of the track equipment.

IN a letter recently received at the American Horse Exchange from Mr. William Allison, of the London Sportsman, and manager of the International Horse Exchange, he states that while he would not advise the indiscriminate shipping of yearlings to England, he is decidedly of the opinion that there is a good market there for select consignments, and as a result of this encouragement from this well-known authority, two of the most prominent breeders in the country are likely to ship early in June a consignment of forty head, the pick of their entire crops.

MR. RYAN of Los Angeles, owner of the thoroughbred stallion Nomad, contemplates coming up to this part of the state to reside. A large number of owners in this vicinity desire to hook their mares to his horse, and if Mr. Ryan can find a suitable place he will doubtless come here to live. He wishes to lease a piece of land containing 100 acres or so, with houses and barns suitable for a breeding farm. Mr. Ryan has been offered a handsome price for the son of Wildidle and imported Amelia, but would rather keep the horse if he can find a place to locate him.

COLONEL W. R. LETCHER, formerly Secretary of the Cincinnati Jockey Club, will be on the circuit next season with a string of horses. Mr. Letcher has taken charge of the stable of H. L. Frank, the well-known Western owner and will prepare Mr. Frank's flyers at Oakley for next season's campaign. Among the best known performers in the Frank string are Senator Bland and Bitter Root. Frank's stable raced on the Montana circuit last summer, and wound up the season at Lexington, from which point they were shipped to Oakley, where the horses are now quartered for the winter.

THE Earl of Minto, Canada's new Governor-General, is a great admirer of the thoroughbred, and is himself a thorough horseman In his youth he was one of the crack amateur jockeys of England and an enthusiastic fox hunter He rode Defense into fourth place in the Liverpool Grand National Steeplechase in 1874, and the same year, at Auteuil, he won the Grand National Steeplechase of France on Miss Hungerford. He was always to be found wearing silk and spurs in the hurdle races and steeplechases in which amateur jockeys took part in England twenty-five years ago, and at the Lincoln Spring meeting in 1875 he won on five mounts.

SO MUCH has been said and written about the starting at the local tracks this season that it seems superfluous to add anything more, Suffice it to say, that if the officials of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club desire to foster the racing game in this State and to secure a full attendance at their beautiful track, they will make such changes in the starting department as will assure their patrons a run for their money. With the present starting at the Ingleside track it is three to one on, that any horse in the race is left at the post. Heavy bettors are becoming very cautious about laying their money down as the spectacle of one or two horses being left standing still when the gate rises has become of daily occurrance.

TOD SLOAN is not lacking in wisdom, and it was no surprise to me to read in a contemporary journal the other day that he had never accused Judge Robinson of robbing him out of two races by awarding them to other horses than those ridden by Sloan. The English Jockey Club is a body composed of the most distinguished and leading men of England, and it is not to be supposed for a moment that any charge, such as was alleged to have been made by Sloan against the placing judge would for a moment go unchallenged. The jockey states that all he said was that he thought he won those races and was surprised at the decisions. This he told to Judge Robinson in an interview arranged for him by Lord William Beresford.—Spirit of the Times.

JOCKEYS TOD SLOAN and "Danny" Maher have found in the midget Jockey McCue a formidable rival, for at Bennington the other day McCue rode five of the six winners, and finished second on his mount in the other race. It was a creditable performance, especially when the conditions are considered. McCue is a little mite of humanity, scarcely big enough to carry a saddle, and he was riding against Maher and some of the best jockeys on the turf. He did not always have the best horse, but landed some of his mounts first past the judges by sheer good judgment and horsemanship. Tom Healey who has the lad under contract, made a lot of money with him during the season, and there is a promise of more for him next season, for McCue will probably rank among the crack lightweights.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the death, at Branchport, N. J., of the once popular starting judge, T. Wood Martin. Mr. Martin was 51 years old and had recently been troubled with heart disease. He was a judge at the old Guttenberg half-mile track. When the new track was built Mr. Martin left the runners and became identified with trotting sport. He was for many years starting judge on the Grand Circuit. At one time he owned the stallion Hannibal. He was a charter member of the Philadelphia Turf Club and a stockholder in the Point Breeze track

MR. HUNN, the erstwhile gentleman rider, is either on his way to or soon will be en route to Venezuela, probably with a stable of racers. This Venezuela racket is at present confined to very few, but, from all accounts, it is a land of milk and honey to anybody who knows the least bit about racing, and his worst enemies will not deny that Mr. Hunn does know something about the game. The story is that he was many thousands loser this year up to the fall meeting at Aqueduct. There and at Washington he won back all he had lost and much more. Considering that he had access to the stable secrets of "Tom" Healey, it is not surprising that Mr. Hunn wound up a winner on the season. Healey's stable, by the way, will have the benefit of a good lightweight rider next year in the person of McCue. This boy rode five winners in one day at Washington.

WHAT odd things one sees at sales says J. J. Burke What an astounding thing it was to see Forester sell for fifteen dollars. "What!" we fancy we hear L. O. Appleby and Dave Johnson say: "Forester sold for fifteen dollars. What could have been the matter with him?" I saw Forester win both the Withers and Belmont Stakes at Jerome Park. In neither race did he beat a good field, but it was the Lorillard Stake of that year (1882), and its tremendous duel between Runymede and Forester which set the grand stand at the old Monmouth Park wild with enthusiasm. Forester, bred by Mr. Belmont, was by the Ill-Used, out of Woodbine, and was not a success at the stud, although in Leiber Karl he begot a really fast colt.

WHEN H. H. Hunn, formerly an amateur jockey, but lately an owner and trainer, returned some years ago from a brief trip to Venezuela, he brought back with him stories of wealth to be earned at racing in the South American Republic that appealed to racing men more forcibly than the tales of wealth in the Klondike did to broken miners. From Mr. Hunn's account, Venezuela is a land of milk and honey for even horses of the selling plater class seen on American tracks, while an ordinary American handicap horse would rank there as a Hamburg does on the American turf. The natives believe that their horses are invincible, and foreign horses are at fabulous prices in the betting, which is all done on the Paris mutuel plan. Mr. Hunn has made up his mind to gather in some more South American money before the racing season opens in New York next spring, and will start soon for Venezuela. He intends to take with him a good string of horses.

IN England, as in Australia, long work for long races is going out of fashion, and some of the old-timers contend that the present style of preparing a horse for a distance is all wrong. In connection with this the London Sportsman scribe remarks: "Looking back through the list of Cæsarewitch winners, what a lot of moderate horses one comes across. They got there simply because they were trained, and some years ago a Cæsarewitch candidate started his preparation in June or July, going over the full distance, too. Nowadays a few weeks' preparation, and never the length of the course, is considered sufficient by some of our trainers. But then they don't often win, and it is any odds on the old-fashioned manner of preparation against the present-day gingerbread style, which I regret to say is so much in vogue." As, in a previous paragraph, the writer pointed out that Chaloneux was doing the strongest preparation of any horse at Newmarket, the result of the Cæsarewitch will give him further reason for scoffing at the "gingerbread style."

THERE was a race meeting recently down in the south of France, where the sun lights up the country and keeps all awake. A certain horse was to run at the meeting, and "from information received," the Parisian went down to back him. He found no bookmaker willing to accommodate him, and going to the mutuals, surprised the employes by demanding 300 tickets of ten francs each in favor of the horse of his choice. The clerk said nothing, but when the horse backed had won, and the Parisian returned to the pay-office to receive his money, a hand was laid on his shoulder, and, turning round, he found a policeman on either side of him deputed to bring him to the office of the Commissary of Police. When he got there the official, in a stern tone, demanded where he had obtained the £120 he had put on the horse, pointing to the hands of the prisoner, and saying that he could not be the legitimate possessor of such a sum. Able to prove himself the lawful owner of the sum, the poor Parisian found himself detained by the Commissary as a man not in his right mind and apt to squander his money, and some great trouble was experienced in satisfying the over-zealous official that the Parisian was not only sane, but that such operations were anything but uncommon.

THE train stopped at a way station on the Long Island Railroad. We had been talking about the lamentable loss of life in the Baldwin Hotel fire at San Francisco. A young woman appeared in the doorway of a cottage She wore a bright, red waist, with white facings. My thoughts at once flew backward to the days when John Carter's grand old horse, Aretino, usually with either Isaac Murphy or Jimmy McLaughlin up, racing his opponents to death in a good long race. He was one of the gamest horses of his day. The colors won by his rider were "red, white hoops." Scores of times did the fine old horse carry them first past the post. Speaking of the lamented Judge Carter, Mr. E. King Woods, in the Canadian Sportsman, relates this incident: "During the progress of the Montreal meeting last August, Judge Carter and myself were sitting in the park facing the Windsor Hotel one night about 11 P. M., glancing up at the lighted windows of the hotel, which was crowded with guests to the roof. The Judge, who with all the officials were rooming on the first floor, remarked: 'We have a good deal the best of the deal in case of fire. If it's too hot for us to walk out through the door, we can step out through our windows to the sidewalk.' Within three months of that night poor Judge Carter was a victim to the one danger that he dreaded in a hotel."

Popularizing Trotting.

J. H. Thayer, the well known horseman of Lexington, Ky., is one of the progressive men in the profession and an advocate of all the improvements suggested by that element for the betterment and popularizing of light harness racing. In a conversation on the trotting outlook for next season, he said:

"It will tend to greatly popularize the sport if the associations will adopt some of the changes suggested, if not all. You pick up a program of a trotting race meeting and it is the same to-day as it was fifty years ago. And yet managers and secretaries of light harness tracks wonder why the public patronage is not greater. I am quite sure that the adoption of the two best in three-heat system would be a step in the right direction and would meet a hearty response from the public in general.

"I also think it would be wise to give special races at a mile and a half, two and even three miles, and races in which the owners drive. Public patronage will follow wherever these events are plentifully sprinkled throughout the meeting. It is also a fact that those associations that are most successful and attract paying crowds are those which make the social side of the meetings a prominent feature. Many of these little points are overlooked by even the most wide-awake managers, and as a consequence they wonder why it is that they do not attract the crowds that attend the Lexington or Cleveland meeting

"The nearer they can get to the appearance of a social function, the greater will be the returns at the gate, but withal there must be an attractive program of races. There should be more of such events as the Transylvania and Futurity Stakes at Lexington, the Charter Oak at Hartford and the Merchants' and Manufactorers' at Detroit. They become noted events and are not only looked upon as something especially desirable to compete for by the owners and breeders, but are favored by the public to such an extent that they become popular social functions.

"Let the associations close a two year-old stake, say in April, at from $250 to $500 entrance, better at the latter figure, and they will find plenty owners who will enter. Then let the association or private individuals give a handsome trophy to the winners. It will be found that it is easy enough to have successful meetings if they go about it right.

"There is another matter that is being agitated this winter should receive the serious attention of the proper authorities. That is the conduct of the judge's stand. It is just as necessary to have a man in the judge's stand who is a thorough horseman and perfectly familiar with every phase of racing as it is to have a professional to start the horses. It would be just as sensible for any association to select a starting judge because he is locally popular and a good fellow as to put a man in the judge's stand for that reason.

"Get the two in three heat plan started, intersperse some dash races at distances above a mile, inaugurate stake events, put a professional judge in the stand, give attention to the social features, and the balance will always be on the right side of the ledger, to say nothing of increased public interest in the American gentleman's sport."

Why Dealers Get the Good Prices

The man who actually breed the horses are not the ones who get the highest prices for them. Dealers who educate and shape them are the ones to get the big profits. The breeders seem to throw aside all the teachings of experience and the pleas of the shippers and dealers, and the grand majority of them will not even give their horses feed enough to make them as fat as the market demands. The dealer or consumer would far rather buy a fat horse than a thin one for many reasons, and many and many a time do breeders absolutely refuse to take a dollar a bushel for their grain. At certain stages of a horse's condition good grain, fed to him judiciously, will certainly net the feeder 100 cents per bushel, but still the fat horse is the exception in the lots sent up by the local shippers direct from the prodocer to the auctions. It is immaterial to the buyer whether he pays the breeder or the feed man for the feed to make the horse fat, but with this difference, he would rather pay the breeder a far higher price for the fat horse, for the possession of condition saves him time, shows him that the animal is all right physically, and then he can turn his money sooner and get it invested again. It is an axiom in the horse business that "you can't sell thin horses to advantage," and yet very few breeders seem to believe it. The man who is breeding horses will find that it is no hard matter to get good prices for them if he will put them on the market in the shape the buyers want them. If his horses are really fat and he can say to the buyer, "These horses are broken to this, that or the other—steam cars, trolley cars, steam rollers, overhead railway, etc ,etc.; jump in and I'll show you" If he can say, "These horses are thoroughly broken, double, single and to ride; they are well mouthed, quiet, prompt and fearless; take hold of the reins and try them," he will, if the animals have breeding, conformation, size, quality, style and action, be able to obtain very handsome prices for them. The fewer of these things he can show up and the fewer of the implied promises he can truthfully make, the lower the price will be, and therein is contained the gist of the whole matter.

The following from the New Orleans Picayune is evidence that rough riding is not confined to local tracks, but that the Sunny South too has its troubles in this line. "Burns' exhibition of foul riding which he gave yesterday was not the first he has displayed at the Fair grounds. The season before last while riding Robert Bonner in a race he used exactly the same tactics to beat out that good little mare, Marquise. On that occasion he left several severe welts across the mare's head as an evidence of his foul work. Some day he will knock a horse's eye out, if his rough work is not stopped."

California Entriee in Horee Reviiew Stakee.

The following California bred colts and fillies have been entered in the Chicago Horse Review, $6,000 subscription purse to be trotted or paced in 1901; when the foals are three years of age. The entries are given under their sires, and the dam and nominator are given:

Worms in Colts.

"Owning a horse that at one time was continually passing the variety known as the long white worm, I used faithfully a great many remedies, says a correspondant, all of which brought many worms away; but after a time the worms would again appear. I am not a veterinarian, but as several prescriptions from that profession had failed to make a permanent cure, and I had often heard it said 'treat a horse as you would treat a person for the same disease,' I resolved to try santonin (the active ingredient in worm seed), as I knew it was in good repute with the medical profession as a worm destroyer, and had always served well. I gave the horse a dram of santonin with each feed for one week; waited one week and repeated it, and since that time the horse has never shown the least sign of them. I have used it in many cases since and never knew it to fail. I have never followed it by physic, which I should deem very important, unless the second course is given at the end of a week, when the eggs have hatched that were deposited before the first course of medicine was given. By giving a brisk cathartic after the course of medicine has been given, the larvae, possibly with the unhatched eggs, may be entirely removed, and in that case no second course of santooin would be required; but if all the eggs and all the larvae are not removed no cure will be made, and on this account the second course is quite essential to effect a permanent cure. Considering one dram (60 grains) a dose for a ten to twelve hundred-poond horse, colts should be dosed according to their weight. I deem it essential to give the food to a horse at the three stated periods and the medicine given at the same time, and not allow the horse to have access to hay or grain between stated times of feeding. In this way the worms most get the medicine. Santonin treatment is more expansive than the antimony, but it is readily taken in the feed, as it is tasteless and not a dangerous remedy."

Things to Be Remembered About Knee Hitters.

"Yerrum" says in the Horse Review that it will pay to remember the following faw facts about horses thet strike their knees:

Weight on a horse's feet thet would anchor him if you asked him to go e mile might enable him to brush a short distance without hitting.

Some very bed knee hitters will go as clean as eny horse in a straightaway brush down the road in the winter time when they are full of the fire that makes them hold to the bit and step a foot higher than they would in the summer.

A horse that goes above his knees with his feet when at full speed may hit his knees hard at half speed.

A horse that pulls on one line or carries his head to one side because of a sore mouth or bed teeth, or any other cause is liable to hit one knee.

Anything that has a tendeucy to destroy e horse's confidence may start him to hitting his knees, such as a hard track that stings his feet, or soft, loose footing that breaks away from under him, or any sort of an injury that would make him shorten his stride.

Paesing of Wedgewood, 2:19.

Another of the great trotting stallions of the era when stallion races were popular to pass away is the famous old horse Wedgewood, 2:19. In the four seasons Wedgewood was record he won eighteen races, was second in thirteen, third in twelve, fourth in one, and was behind the money but twice. In that time his earnings amounted to over $20,000. In 1880 he was the sensational horse of the year, for he went down the Grand Circuit line, trotting a race every week, and did not meet a single defeat. R. B. Conkling, the owner of Rarus, 2:13¼, then the champion trotter, peid $10,000 for Wedgewood, and later sold him to Boston men. He then passed to John S. Clark, of Brunswick, N. J., who sold him to May Overton, of Hermitage Farm, Nashville, Tenn., who placed him at the head of a famous lot of matrons. He sired thirty-three standard performers, including Wistful, 2:11½, and Favorina, 2:15, and one of his daughters produced John R. Gentry, 2:00½. He was 27 years old when he died, and for the last two years he had roamed a blue grass paddock at Hermitage Farm, in idleness, his days of usefulness having been passed.

J. R. H., Madison—Your colt is fairly well bred, but it would be difficult to say just how much thoroughbred blood there is in his veins. He gets one-eighth from the dam of Don, and if the Grey Eagle mare was thoroughbred, one-sixteenth from her. There is in all probability fifty per cent of his blood thoroughbred, but it can not be proven. If he is a strong, vigorous horse twenty-five or thirty mares could be mated to him this year with safety, and probably more.

"Lady Keating."

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—I claim the name of Lady Keating for a bay suckling filly foaled May, 1898, by Stam B, 2:14¼, dam Abbie Woodnut, the dam of Abdine, pacer, 2:17½, this year's record, and Diawood, pacer, 2:14¼, this year's record. Abdine is by Wilkesdale, 4,541. Diawood is by Diablo, pacer, 2:09¼. Lady Keating is a trotter and Abdine's third colt. Abdine is due to foal to Diablo egein next spring.

Yours Respectfully,
Mrs. E. W. Callendine, Sacramento.

W. B. Faeig Ought to Know.

There is probably no better known horseman in America than W. B. Fasig and he certainly ought to know what is good for e horse. The following speaks for itself:

"I have thoroughly tested Continental Ointment manufactured by the Standard Oil Co., and have found it the best article for its purpose I have ever used. It keeps the hoof soft and healthy and growing, and for cracked hoofs, scratches and the like, is simply perfect. Wm. B. Fasig."

Used Succeeefully.

QUINN'S OINTMENT
FOR HORSES

stands at the head of all veterinary remedies. Such troubles as Spavins, Curbs, Windpuffs, Splints, Bunches have no terrors for a horse if the master keeps and applies Quinn's Ointment. All well-known horsemen speak of it in the highest terms:

Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bell Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fulfills all claimed for it. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches, it has no equal.

Price $1.50. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail.

Sulky Notes.

THE rain was a Godsend.

PASTURES will soon be green again.

THERE are 454 pacers in the 2:20 list.

STAR POINTER weighs nearly 1,200 pounds in racing form.

THE youngest son of George Wilkes is now fifteen years old.

GET your Assemblyman and Senator interested in the district fairs.

TRAINING will begin on most of the tracks soon after the new year opens.

NEARLY one hundred Canadian bred trotters entered the 2:30 list in 1898.

KENTUCKY UNION, 2:07¼, will be in Jack Curry's hands next year and is thought to ha as fast as ever.

IF Dare Devil goes through training all right next spring, Ed Geers thinks he will beat the stallion record.

QUITE a number of the newly elected members of the Legislature are directors of district agricultural associations.

DURING the snow storms in the East horseless carriages have to have horses hitched to them or he left in the barn.

WELL-MANAGED race tracks often pay. Charter Oak Park at Hartford. Conn., paid ten per cent last season on the capital invested.

ONE of the mares which W. E. Spier will breed to Directum is Birthday McGregor, by Robert McGregor, out of the dam of Pamlico, 2:10.

CALIFORNIA trotters and pacers will be numerous east of the Rockies next year, and they will he close to first money when the races are over.

R. T. M., 2:25½, owned by the King's County Horse Breeders' Association, Kentville, N. S., is by Sable Wilkes, 2:18, dam Marcola, by Le Grand.

THE gray Electioneer stallion Conductor, 2:14, now 11 years old, has been sold at different times for $4,125, $7,000, $3,100, $700, and $550, respectively.

MAJ. P. P. JOHNSTON has been re-elected President of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association and H. W. Wilson again elected as Secretary.

NATHAN STRAUS, the New York man, who owns Cohwehs, 2:12, secured an excellent stable companion for that horse when he bought Cuprum, 2:12¾.

LEE ROSE, a four-year-old colt by Langton, 2:21¾, out of Hinda Rose, 2:19½, by Electioneer, is in training in the stable of Geo. W. Bates, Oxford, N. Y.

INQUIRIES have been made at this office for a carriage team of good lookers that are 16.2 hands high. The price is no object, but the team will he hard to find.

MANY prominent Kentucky breeders claim that their brood mares do better when they run out all winter, rather than when stabled, provided they are liberally fed.

THE district fair draws more money to the locality where it is held than all the other attractions held during the year It also adds to the value of property in the district.

JAMES THOMPSON, who had Little Thorne, 2:09½, and Primrose, 2:14½, in his string last year. contemplates going East next year with them and a few other good ones.

WILLIAM HILL, of Alemeda, owns a very promising yearling by Dictatus out of a mare by Nutwood. He is a big chestnut, and promises to be 16 hands high and a trotter.

CARYLE CARNE is used as a road horse this winter by Robert A. Smith, a Philadelphian. The old gray can throw the snow in the faces of nearly all the fast ones in the Quaker city.

A BILL is to be introduced in the Legislature appropriating money to pay the indebtedness of all the district agricultural associations so they can start in again even with the world.

THE time to get a campaigner's feet right is during the winter months while he is idle, or taking only moderate exercise. Don't neglect them now and he doctoring them all summer.

SONS and grandsons of George Wilkes have sired 103 trotters and paces with records from 2:00½ to 2:10, while daughters of George Wilkes have produced seven 2:10 performers.—Horse World.

IT is reported that William Browne of Kalamazoo, Mich., who bought Cresceus, 2:09¾, bought that horse for W. F. Redmond, the New York man, who owns Lurline McGregor, 2:11¾, and Anglina, 2:11¾.

WALLIE MENDENHALL has turned over to Mr. Murray, for training, two fine Diablo colts, which he expects will make a good showing in a short time. We are given to understand that Mr. Mendenhall is seriously thinking of securing a string of fast horses this season and training them at this place.—Pleasanton Times.

THE paid professional judge must eventually be employed on the trotting tracks, but when he comes it is to he hoped that he will have other qualifications than a mere profession of faith in his own abilities.

NONE of the Eastern papers that come to this office have yet found a trotter with a record of 2:14 or better that stands as high as the California horse Clay S., 2:14. He's probably the biggest one in the 2:14 bunch.

ONE of the most promising youngsters in the East is by Direct Line, the son of Director and Lida W., 2:18½, by Nutwood. Lida W. is the dam of Nutwood Wilkes. Direct Line was bred by Martin Cartar at Irvington, Cal.

IT is said that $3,000 has been offered and refused for Del Norte (2:04¼ as a guideless pacer, and 2:08 race record). This horse should be able to win a good share of the money in his class East, and for exhibition purposes would be a drawing card on any track.

EXCELLENT results have been obtained by some farmers who have bred their heavy Clydesdale and Percheron mares to a high headed, rangy trotting stallion that has style and action. We saw a very handsome carriage horse the other day that was sired by a trotting stallion and out of a half Percheron mare.

W. H. CLARK, who is building the new trotting track near New York, says the association will he run on lines of the Coney Island Jockey Club, the affairs to he conducted by a small board, while members will supply pay for the privilege of the clubhouse and to witness the races.

MOST if not all the daughters of Pilot Jr. from which 2:10 or better light harness speed has come have been from some thoroughbred descendant of Old Diomed. Pilatus, 2:09¼, is no exception. His second dam was by Pilot Jr., out of a daughter of the great four-mile race winner Wagner.

THAT new trotting track which W. H. Clark is building in New York is to be on a grand scale. It is to he 100 feet wide its entire length and to he covered with loam. It will be the widest track on the continent, and will doubtless he a very popular one. A meeting will he held there in 1899.

IT is now given out that John H. Shultz, the millionaire New York horse fancier, will undoubtedly place the champion pacing mare Lenna N, 2:05½, in John Cheeny's charge next year to he campaigned. After a season on the turf it is Mr. Shultz's present intention to breed her to Star Pointer.

THERE will be no more vacancies in the Board of Directors of the California State Agricultural Society during Gov. Budd's term. The terms of three of the directors will expire during Gov. Gage's term. In all probability there will be no change among the officials of the Association for some time.

T. E. KEATING left on the Australia last Wednesday for the Hawaiian Islands, where he will sojourn for a few weeks in that land of balmy skies and equable temperature. Mr. Keating's trip to the Islands last year did him a great deal of good, and we hope to see him return with the same result this time.

THE proper thing for the State Fair Directors to do now is to announce a stake for trotters something on the lines of the Transylvania of Kentucky, the M. & M. of Detroit, or the Charter Oak of Hartford. At least $2,000 should be hung up. If made for horses of the 2:20 class a big entry list would he assured.

DAN MISNER has sold that handsome roadster he was driving in the park, to Major J. L. Rathbone of this city, who certainly has got a very fine looking as well as fast horse. The horse is called Nick Russell and was sired by Silas Skinner 2:17, his dam being Eveline, by Nutwood, dam of Maud Fowler and Tietam.

THE Transylvania is now the richest trotting stake in the country. The M. & M. at Detroit, and the Chartar Oak at Hartford are both for $10,000, but they are divided into two races, $8,000 for the first race and $2,000 as a consolation purse for none money winners. The Transylvania puts the entire sum up for one race.

A NEWSPAPER writer who recently saw Director, 2:17, at his new home at Locust Grove Farm, Pennsylvania, says the old horse is looking not more than half his age, and that his back is as straight, his eye as clear and bright as a four-year-old. He is the sire of three horses with records of 2:10 or better, and is grandsire of three more in that list. All but two of the mares bred to him last year are with foal.

WORD comes from Pleasanton that more horses will be trained there during the coming season than ever before in the history of the historical track. At least one hundred horses and colts are already being taught their first lessons in that vicinity and by the time the training season really opens a stone can't he thrown in the valley without hitting a prospective champion.

THE capital stock of the Bridgeport, Conn., Driving Association was increased $15,000 at the annual meeting held recently. The amount of stock increased was divided into 600 shares at $25 each. Of this number 250 shares were subscribed for at the close of the meeting. The corporation is now free from indebtedness, as the amount increased recently will pay off the indebtedness on Nutmeg Park.

THOMAS BONNER, the well known horseman of Santa Rosa has accepted the position of director general of the coming society horse show at Los Angeles, and will leave for that city shortly after the first of the year to take charge of the arrangements for the meeting. The Los Angeles association is certainly fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Bonner, for he is recognized as one of the most competent horsemen on the coast. Not only is he an expert judge and handler of horse flesh, but he possesses to a marked degree the executive ability necessary to a successful handling of an affair such as that contemplated by the metropolis of southern California. and he will make it a success.—Santa Rosa Press-Democrat.

TOM GREEN, of Dublin, took over to Pleasanton last week a three-year-old Directum colt, which he turned over to Dick Ables for training. This colt was in the hands of Chas. Griffith last season and went a mile in 2:21 in his work.

THE California stallions Arthur L. 2:15, by Direct, and Toots by Monbars, both owned by Louis Schafler of Oakland, were to have been sold at auction at the Hedges, Seaman sale in New York this week. In the advertisement published in the New York papers it is stated that Arthur L. has paced a trial of 2:05 and Toots one of 2:10½.

THE Central New York Circuit will be stronger than ever it was next year. A meeting of the representatives of the associations comprising it will he held in Syracuse in January. The dates for next summer's racing will he given out and the value of the purses will he determined. California should take a lesson from the successful eastern associations that claim dates and announce programs early in the year.

JO CUICELLO has Chas. Newman's fast Altamont mare Bessie Rankin, 2:16, in his string at his stables out on Page street. She is looking the picture of robust health, and the leg that was fired a few months ago looks as sound as it ever did. She has not had any work since being taken up this time, but seems to have more speed than ever. If she stays right Altamont will have another in the 2:10 list, sure, before another year passes.

A VERY fine pair of black geldings raised by Wm. Sims of Yolo county, were recently purchased by A. P. Cumming, of Oakland for shipment to the Hawaiian Islands, where they will ha used by a wealthy sugar planter. These geldings make a very handsome team being large and stylish. They were sired by Navada and are full brothers to Col. Hickman, 2:25½. The terms of the sale were private, but the price was close to four figures.

MAS. J. B. PALMER, of this city, has arranged to send her five-year-old colt by Eros, out of Francesca (dam of I Direct, 2:13) by Almont 33, to Pleasanton, where he will ha put in the hands of John Blue for a month. When Mr. Keating returns from the Hawaiian Islands the colt will ha ready to show a sample of what is in him, and if he comes up to expectations will make one of the string that Mr. Keating will take across the mountains nex year.

LAST spring a number of the farmers of Livermore Valley sent 178 head of horses into Mendocino county for pasturage. Of that number only fifty are now alive and they were brought back this week. Of sixty head owned by John Beck only nine could ha found. It turned out that feed in the mountains was no more plentiful than in the valley. The horses that were brought back were half starved and the return trip was made with great difficulty.—Livermore Herald

BOREA, 2:15¾, bids fair to prove a very successful sire of speed, just as might ha expected from the combination of choice blood lines through developed ancestors found in his pedigree. He got three foals in his three-year-old form, and it is stated that they have all shown miles in harness from 2:30 to 2:16. Boreal is by Bow Bells 2:19½, full brother of Bell Boy 2:19¼, St. Bel 2:24½, Chimes 2:30¾, etc. His dam, Rosy Morn, is by Alcantara 2:23, and out of Noontide 2:20½, by Harold; next dam Midnight (dam of Jay Eye See, 2:10), etc., by Pilot Jr.

MR J. L. KELLOGG of Nebraska, is spending the winter in California. He breeds a few mares every year at his home farm, and is a great admirer of and haliever in the American trotter. He is particularly impressed with McKinney as a sire and remarked while in this office the other day that a two-year-old by McKinney, out of an Electioneer mare, whose dam's blood was strong in thoroughbred, would tempt him to make an offer for it. Nothing better in blood lines could be found than that combination certainly.

THE easy manner with which the demand for all good horses absorbed the unparalleled offering at the Fasig sale, Madison Square Garden, New York, last week, and the week before, is a revelation to those pessimists who are continually predicting divers disasters for the horse business The offering was an immense one, containing more that eight hundred head, and up to the very close a desirable animal elicited as spirited bidding as prevailed on the first day, a fact that should convince all that good horses are in practically unsatisfiable demand.

DOCKING will, in a few years, he almost unknown in England, for the Royal Agricultural and the Hunters Improvement societies have passed the following resolutions: "In 1899 no docked yearling is eligible for any show held under the rules of the above societies; in 1900; no two-year-old which has been docked can be shown in 1901; no three-year-old, and so on; therefore, after the present year, docking will take off the value of any horse good enough for the show ring. and when the present set of docked show horses have died out there will be no more docked horses shown."

THE stockholders of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders, at their recent annual meeting elected eight managers as follows, to serve during the ensuing year: Major P. P. Johnson. Major H. C. McDowall, R. F. Stoll, Mike Bowerman, Shelby T. Harbison, L. V. Harkness, L. Brodhead and H. K. McAdams. The Board of Managers then organized and elected the following officers for the ensuing year. President, P. P. Johnston; Vice-president, R. P. Stoll; Second Vice-president, Shelby T. Harbison; Treasurer, Fayette National Bank; Secretary, H. W. Wilson.

"A NEW use has been found for steel by a firm in Sheffield, England. who are now making a steel harness trace, consisting of a narrow ribbon of steel, from ¾ to 1 inch wide, rolled very thin and cased in leather. A single trace of this kind when tested at the Sheffield testing works, recorded a tensile breaking strain of 4 575 pounds, while an ordinary leather trace of the best quality, tested at the same time, broke at a strain of 2,700 pounds. In addition to being lighter and stronger than the ordinary trace, the steel article is about 20 per cent. cheaper. The steel is so pliable that it can be twisted in any direction." How about preventing rust on this new steel trace?

San Francisco, Saturday, December 17, 1898.

SELLING YEARLINGS IN ENGLAND will not be the policy of Rancho del Paso according to Mr. John Mackey the Superintendent of that great breeding farm. The sending of a small consignment of fillies, specially selected for the experiment, composed of those carrying the blood especially desired by the English breeders at this time, was a success, but it is no guarantee that a second lot could be as well sold next yeer. The idea which gained place in the minds of many American breeders that the Rancho del Paso experiment had demonstrated beyond a doubt that England would absorb all the thoroughbred colts and fillies America could raise, is according to Mr. Mackey a mistaken one, and breeders should not give it a second thought. England is a great breeding country and her great breeding farms are fully equal to any demands that may be made upon them. Because at the annual sales very high prices are given for yearlings that are in demand, the fact remains that hundreds of well bred youngsters are knocked down at the English auctions for less money than it costs to rear them. American breeders are too prone to rush in with an over supply where they imegine a demand exists. If A. mekes a sale of a horse at a high figure, B., C. and D. generelly rush their animals to the same market, and almost invariably "lose money on the goods." Thoroughbreds are like eny other breed of horse—the first class ones are but few, while the market is always glutted with second and third class horses. Rancho del Paso, by the expendature of vaet sume of money in the purchase of choice stallions and broodmares has built up the greatest breeding farm in the world, but its owner knows that the entire annual product of his vast establishment would be more than the expert English buyers could find place for. The shipping of coals to Newcastle is not an undertaking which promises vast profits.

THE esteemed Rural Spirit of Portland, Oregon, seems to think that a circuit of fairs in California in 1899 at which races with purses from $500 to $1,000 will be offered, will be more than we can handle down thie way and suggests that we be more conservative and have about three good meetings, which will be part of a circuit that will take in Portland, Spokane, Butte and Anaconda. While we would like to arrange it so that those cities could be part of a great circuit, the distances are too far and the expenses of shipment too great to make such a circuit practicable. California had a first-class circuit in the days of fairs and appropriations and can have it again. Why, in the old days this State had three or four circuits and all were successful. If the rain comes within the next month in sufficient quantity to give a reasonable assurance of good crops, there will be twenty-five or thirty fairs held in California. The lessons of the past have not been lost on our district associations, and their officers will steer clear of the mistakes of former years. In at least a dozen districts in California purses of from $500 to $1,000 can be given for harness races and the meetings pay a profit at that if properly conducted. The others will give smaller purses, but will not get the largest stables, nor the fastest horses, and will not expect them. All we want here now is for Jupiter Pluvius to get to work with his sprinkling cart and give the State a good soaking, and as far as the fairs are concerned our Legislature and Governor, the directors of the associations and the horsemen will do the rest.

THE THIRD PAYMENTS on the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes, in which $3,000 are guaranteed by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will be due January 2, 1899. The two-year-old divisione will trot and pece for their portion of the money in 1899, $750 to go to the trotters and $500 to the pacers. The third payment, due next month, will be $10, which will be the only payment to be mede in 1899, unless the colt is etarted as a two-year-old, when the starting fee will have to be paid. No owner who has an entry in these stakes should ellow Jennary 2d to pass without making this payment. If your colt shows well as a two-year-old he can start in the division to which he belongs, but if it is thought best to keep him back until his three-year-old from the $10 paid next month will cerry him through the year. It is to be hoped that there will be a prompt response from all ownere who have named colts for this stake and that none will forfeit. The P. C. T. H. B. A. will undoubtedly increase the value of this stake in the future, if the harness horse industry resumes its wonted prosperity on this Coest, which all who observe the signs of the times believe will certainly come to pass. There is nothing thet adds more to the value of harness horses raised for racing purposes, than liberal stakes offered by the various associations throughout the country. The better the etakes are patronized by the breeders and owners, the more money the associations can afford to give.

SIZE AND STYLE are the great desideratums in the harness horse that ie in actual demand. Speed sells where it is of the extreme kind, but horses that have size and style and good manners are always in demand. This being the case the farmer who breeds a few mares each year ehould aim to produce horses having theee qualities. Not a day passes in San Francisco but men are looking about for carriage horses, 16.2 hands high, high headed, toppy, well built and handsome, that are also well mannered and eound. If a band of one hundred such horses were brought to San Francisco to-day every one of them would find a ready purchaser before twenty-four hours had passed. The breeder who will devote some effort towards mating fine large mares to the largest and best looking trotting bred etallions in California, feeding the colts that result so that they will grow into large horses, and then train them properly so that they will be fit to hitch to a lady's carriage, and will not be afraid of anything, will find hie venture a profitable one. From $600 to $2,000 per team can be readily secured for good and first class carriage pairs. During all the years of depression in harness horse matters there never has been a time that first-class carriage horses were not in good demand at high prices. Californin breeders should not forget this fact when they mate their mares in 1899.

THE C. J. C.'S STAKES FOR TWO-YEAR-OLDS, to be run at the spring meeting of 1899, will close with Secretary R. B. Milroy, 23 Kearney street, this city, January 2d. The stakes range from $1,000 to $2,000 and the distances are from four furlongs to the Futurity Course, which is 170 feet less than six furlongs. By referring to the advertising columns of this paper, the conditions of these stakes can be found. There is no better investment to be made by owners who race in California than a liberal number of entries in these stakes, and breeders who do not race their produce will find that a well-entered colt or filly will sell for a great deal more money than those having no engagemen's.

THE RAIN that fell on the just and unjust in al parts of California thie week, while not enough to enable the farmers to start the plows, has done a world of good, and will cause the grass to grow in the pastures and the grain already sown to eprout. It has also caused shrinkage in faces abnormally long, while traces of emiles are visible, and evidences numerous that hope still springs eternal in the human breast, as the poet affirms. The conditions are very favorable for a continuance of wet weather, and it is more than probable that Santa Claue will shower the State with watery beads that will be received with delight and cause golden harvests in 1899. The prospects now are glorious.

THE CHRISTMAS HORSEMAN for 1898 has reached our table and is a regular Christmas feast. The special articles are by the leading turf writers of the country and the etatistics complete and up to date. A very handsome cover in colors encloses sixty pages of the very choicest of harness horse literature. It ie a great paper.

AMONG THE ARRIVALS from Austrelia on the last steamer was Mr. C. Bourne, who brought the famous Musket stellion Artillery here on a former trip and leased him to Rancho del Paso. The time of the lease heving expired Mr. Bourne has egain crossed the Pacific to meke further arrangements in regard to the horse. The fillies by Artillery recently sold in England by Mr. Haggin brought excellent prices. In all probability the horse will remain at Rancho del Paso another year at least.

How They Get Big Prices.

Ed Tipton, who menaged the sale of Marcus Daly's Montane trotters, was highly pleased with the remarkeble averege of nearly $1,400 per heed which was realized for the twenty animals in the collection. John H. Shutts met Tipson in the Gerden shortly after the Daly horses had been sold, and seid, with a twinkle in his eye:

"Tipton, I want to have a two hours' telk with you privately before you leave town."

"All right, Mr. Shults. What cen I do for you?"

"I will tell you; I want you to explain to me how you Kentnckians work it to get such thundering big prices for the horses you sell. Why, if these twenty colts had been mine, they wonldn't have brought $500 apiece. Thet's so, no joking. Now, how do you fellows do it?"

"It won't take two hours to tell you that, Mr. Shults," replied Tipton. "The way we do it is like this: We pick ont a green four-year-old like John Nolan, 2:08, that can go throngh the circuit and win the Charter Oek and Transylvania stakes; that can win more money than any other trotter of the yeer, and win the fastest five-heat race on record. Then we get a three-year-old like Cuprnm, that can trot a fonrth heat in 2:12¾, and win the best three-year-old race of the season, then we did up a few more youngsters all by the same sire, like Improvidence, 2:13¼; Dr. Spellman, 2:13¾; Laurels, 2:15¼; Wilderneis, 2:18½; Limerick, 2:19½; and Handspring, 2:26¾, not to mention the pacer Dan M., 2:09½. We take all these colts out and race 'em; let the people see that they are trotters end stayers, and then we bring them here to New York and they sell themselves. It's easy. Jnst try it next time you are going to have a sale." And Tipton added: "When I was here last winter and offered to bet from $2,500 np or down on the Prodigal colts some of my friends thonght it wes ell a bluff. The money was ready end so were the colts."

AN amusing occurrence of the Fasig sale was the sale of a colt, by Bonnie Boy, to a German buyer for $100. The owner of the colt got it in his head thet Ed Baker, of Chicsgo, who owns Bonnie Boy, wanted the colt, so he got a friend to bid him up. His instructions to his friend were: "Watch Baker and if he hids, cerry him np to $300." The friend did jnst as he was told; he wetched Baker and no one else. The Chicsgo man, however hed no idea of hoying the colt and, of conrse, never made a bid. A German bnyer bid $100 and the friend of the owner, with his eyes glued on Baker, let the colt go at thet figure. The owner's remerks were too lnrid to be repeated.

THE veteran editor and founder of the Western Horseman, N. A. Randall, is now at Bread Loaf, Vt., assisting the indefatigable Joseph Batelle in compiling a work, the title of which will be "The Horses of America." Mr. Batelle could not have selected a more able assistant than the ex-Hoosier editor. Mr. Randall is much taken with the Morgan horses at Bread Loaf Farm, especially the get of Denning Allen ont of Daniel Lambert mares. Denning Allen he describes es the "biggest horse of his inches" that he ever set eyes on, and it is his opinion that the paddocks and pestures of Bread Loaf Farm are full of Lord Clintons, 2:08¾.

IT can hardly be claimed that there was a circnit in California this year, but there were two hundred trotters end pecers that started in races in the State during the summer. We are preparing a list of them for publication and will try to give the record and breeding of eech. The liet will be completed ahout the first of the year.

SAN FRANCISCO nesds a good trotting track, and a half mile track would be better than nothing. The speedway at the Park is much used, but a track is needed where stable room can be rented. There would be many horses trained in this city were there a track to train on where horses could he kept.

PRESIDENT A. B. SPRECKELS, of the California State Agricultural Society, will have a string of trotters on the local circuit in 1899. His mare Dione will probebly go East again in Keating's string, and she may be accompanied with one or more of Mr. Spreckel's breeding.

SPOKANE, Washington, will hold a harness meeting in the Spring at which the purses will not be less than $500, with some as high as a thonsand.

THE horses that were individually well advertised bronght the most money at the Fasig sele.

Truckee Obstructions Will be Removed.

A communication recently received by Fish Commissioner A. T. Vogelsang from Hon C. N. Bliss, Secretary of the Interior, will be read with interest and satisfaction by many anglers and sportsmen. It is now assured, thanks to the systematic interest taken by Commissioner Vogelsang, that fish will now have an unimpeded run from Pyramid Lake to the headwaters of the Truckee and its tributaries. The brush dam erected by the Indians across the river about five miles above its mouth at Pyramid Lake has been a serious obstable and menace to the propagation and increase of fish in one of the best fishing streams of the West. Interested parties have strennously endeavored to influence the Government officials at Washington against taking any steps towards changing the existing order of things, but their machinations availed nothing. The text of the letter is as follows:

"I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 29th, ultimo, referring further to the dam in the Truckee river on the Pyramid Lake Indian Reservation, Nevada.

In my letter of the 18th, ultimo, it was stated that the recommendations of Inspector Graves, who had recently investigated the subject of irrigation on that reservation, were then under consideration and would doubtless be adopted, in which case the dam referred to would be abandoned.

Since that letter was written the recommendations of the Inspector have been approved, and the Commissioner of Indian affairs directed to immediately carry them into effect.

Your latest letter is to-day referred to the Commissioner of Indian affairs and directions given him not to permit the work to be neglected or delayed; and to cause the dam to be removed at the earliest practicable date, and that if this cannot be done before the next spawning season, that he cause to be constructed such a fish way as the laws of the State of Nevada require, and not to permit fish to be taken within the probibited limit (300 feet) at the dam. Furthermore, I have directed him to instruct the agent to see that the Indians observe strictly the laws of the State of Nevada in the matter of obstruction of the river and taking fish therefrom.

I am gled to note the interest you take in the matter, and assure you of my disposition to co-operate with you heartily and to the full extent of my authority, to see that the State laws are observed both in letter and spirit, and shall be pleased at all times to be advised of any infraction of those laws by persons under the jurisdiction of this department, whether whites or Indians, which may come to your knowledge, as well as to have any suggestions you may feel disposed to offer in matters of this kind, in which the secretary may have discretionary power.

For two weeks past Powell street wharf and the railroad piers across the bay have afforded chances for catching salmon trout or steelhead as the careless fishermen call them. The fish are, in fact, small unbred buck quinnets, or grilse. Quite a few have been caught at the Oakland pier since the rain. The best bait is a piece of smelt belly and a spile worm on a 2 ought hook. Trolling for them has been successful.

Smelt fishing, since the cold weather set in, has afforded best results when the fisherman gets his tackle down ten or twelve feet in depth instead of nearer the surface.

Striped bass have given the angler sport at points along the bay shore from Pinole to Vallejo for several weeks past.

Flounders are unmerous in the Oakland estuary.

Bay fishing has been excellent for a week past.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:

Alpine—Deer. Sept. 2 to Oct. 15.
Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15.
Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15.
Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Contra Costa—Deer, July 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited).
El Dorado—Doves, July 20 to Feb. 1.
Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game out of the county prohibited
Humboldt—Grouse and Wilson snipe, Sept. 1 to Feb. 15. Killing of waterfowl prohibited between one-half hour after sunset and one half hour before sunrise.
Kern—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Lake—Deer, Aug. 1 to Oct. 1.
Los Angeles—Shipping game to markets outside of the county prohibited.
Marin—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 15.
Madera—Market hunting prohibited.
Monterey—Deer, July 15th to Sept. 1st. (Use of dogs prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5.
Orange—Doves, Aug. 1 to Feb. 1. Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5. Ducks, Nov. 1 to March 1. Ducks and quail, shipment from the county restricted as follows: No person shall ship ducks or quail out of the county in quantities to exceed two dozen birds a week.
Riverside—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
San Benito—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. (Market hunting prohibited).
Santa Barbara—Deer, Aug. 1 to Aug. 22. Use of hounds prohibited. Quail, one day, Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).
San Diego—Shipping game out of the county prohibited. Ordinance suspended.
San Luis Obispo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. Doves, July 15 to Dec. 1. (Use of hounds prohibited. Hunting for markets situated outside of the county prohibited).
San Mateo—Deer, July 15 to Aug. 26. (Use of dogs not prohibited. Market hunting prohibited). Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. (Shooting from boat at high tide prohibited).
Shasta—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1.
Sierra—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Sonoma—Deer, Oct. 1 to July 15. Quail, Feb. 1 to Nov. 1. Pheasants, close season till Jan. 1, 1894. Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Sutter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan 1.
Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the count prohibited.
Ventura—Quail, any variety, Oct. 1, to Nov. 1.

The Amateur Hunter.

(HOBART.)

Onward through the gloomy forest
Strode the hunter from the city;
Clad in golfing togs the hunter
Strode with haughty mein and manner
Onward through the gloomy forest.
Sprang a rabbit in his pathway,
Sat down in the road and smiling,
Winked his other ear, the rabbit!
Then the hunter from the city
Raised his rifle to his shoulder,
Aimed and fired—hit the treetop!
And the rabbit, smiling, scooted
Back to home and Mama Rabbit;
Left the hunter from the city
Standing there, disgruntled, swearing!
Onward through the gloomy forest
Strode the hunter from the city;
Chirped a squirrel in the treetop;
Then the hunter from the city
Aimed with due precision, fired!
Hit the atmosphere to westward;
And the squirrel, chirping shrilly,
Put his paw to his Cyrano,
Thus in squirrel language gave the
Ha! ha! to the city hunter.
Onward through the gloomy forest
Strode the troubled city hunter;
Perched a pheasant in his pathway,
Perched and spake in pheasant prattle:
'Lovely weather, ain't it, stranger?"
Then the hunter from the city
Raised his rifle to his shoulder,
Aimed with utmost skill and fired!
Hit a poor unarmored bowlder;
And the pheasant, laughing loudly,
Flew off home to get his dinner.
Onward through the gloomy forest
Strode the hunter from the city.
Saw a Robin Redbreast dreaming
On a leafless branch, and fired!
Hit the blue sky just amidship,
And the Robin Redbreast whispered:
"Try it over; slips don't count, sir!"
Straightway then resumed its dreaming.
Onward through the gloomy forest
Strode the hunter from the city,
Always aiming, never hitting;
Always shooting, never killing;
Till the dusky twilight came and
Brought with it the purple shadows.
Then the forest, dark and gloomy,
Moved through all its depths of darkness,
Spake in these words, spake in this wise:
"Go back home and shoot the rarebit!
Shoot the bird and shoot the bottle
In the restaurant and cafe;
Try your skill at shooting lobsters,
For ont here with Nature, why, you
Couldn't even shoot the chute, sir!
Couldn't even bag your trousers!"
Then the forest, dark and gloomy,
Shook his solemn sides with laughter,
And the melancholy hunter
Came to town and hit the market,
Hit it with some dollar bills, and
Strode home lyingly to wifey.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

A live bird shoot will be held at Pleasanton on Christmas.

Ducks are reported to be very unmerous in the tules near Nape Junction.

Col. Eddy had a good shoot on the Cordelie preserve the first day of the week.

The Sonome and Petelume marshes were fairly alive with teal last Saturday and Sunday.

Chas. M. Fisher shot over snipe ground near Niles last Sunday. His luck was medium.

Hyp. Justins and M. McLain brought in a slender string of English snipe from Suisun last Sunday.

The lagoon on the Temalpais preserve was tried for ducks last Sunday. W. C. Brown made a fair bag.

Dr. C. H. Bell's bag, made at a Mt. Eden duck shoot, was twenty-five birds; spooneys were in the majority.

Phil B. Bekeert and Lee Larzalere made good bags last Saturday at the Spooney Club's preserve near Alvaredo.

A. Borlini and friends made over two dozen teal, sprig and widgeon settle in their bags last Sunday at Fairville.

Suisun shooters had a good morning last Sunday, the weather was cold, teal and widgeon were plenty and in good flight.

W. F. Andrus shot last Sunday over ground located in the hills back of Lake Chebot, a dozen and a half quail fell to his gun.

Sce brent have been numerous lately in their favorite haunts in Tomales bay. Some good bags of these delicious birds have been made.

Frank Irelen plugged ducks that flew near his decoys in Boynton slough last Sunday. He brought down a goodly number of birds.

The sportsmen of Woodland, Dixon and Yolo have been praying for plenty of rain; ducks were scarce in that district during the dry spell.

Fred Surrhyne and Dr. Derby sculled the waters near Joyce Island for ducks on Sunday. Their efforts with the shotgun were well rewarded.

Two Napa Sportsmen, Robert Little and Channing Mansfield made a combined bag of sixty ducks near Napa Junction last Friday and Saturday.

Near Petaluma, last Sunday, F. Mullins and a friend from this city bagged thirty-five widgeon, sprig and teel and E. Smith, of San Rafael, bagged thirty birds.

A bag of 150 ducks was made last Sunday by five hunters at the Suisun drawbridge, near Teal Station. W. J. Hynes, Kullman brothers, J. Sweeny and E. Wands composed the party.

Otto Feudner and W. H. Bryan of the Suisun Gun Club had a fine duck shoot Sunday at Suisun. Geo. Walker sculled the sloughs near their shooting station, he made a nice bag.

Vacaville sportsmen have organized for game protection. A reward of $25 is at the disposal of anyone giving information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of persons violating the game laws.

The east bay shore gave good returns to hunters last Sunday. P. McRea shot twenty-five teal and sprig at Mt. Eden; B. Sherock and a friend bagged thirty-two teal at Newark and "Schultze," Huie and Klevesahl had a combined bag of forty birds when they left Alvarado.

Near Los Banos last Sunday duck shooting was first class. The quackers were so numerous as to give the shooter a selection of shots. W. D. Burlingame and G. H. T. Jackson made a combined bag of more than 140 birds. Geese are also plentiful in that section.

James Meynerd and Dr. E. N. Ayers leave this evening for a four day's duck hunt near Grizzly Bay. They will shoot with C. F. Legros, who knows every nook and cranny of the Suisun hunting grounds and understands the habits of the webfoot game to a remarkable degree.

A three-day's mountain lion hunt over 100 square miles of territory was commenced in Utah and Colorado last week beginning Thursday. The start was made near the Western Colorado boarder, and hunters from all parts of the two states assembled to take part in the chase. Fifteen mountain lions or cougers were killed.

Duck shooting near Point Reyes station was first class last Saturday and Sunday. Among the shot-gun enthusiasts at that point who took part in the sport were Frank Vernon, who bagged thirty ducks; F. Dolliver, who claims forty-one; Mr. Wilkie and Mr. Watson with thirty and twenty respectively. The birds were principally teal and widgeon.

W. E. Murdock and T. Cleery were in their favorite spot at Reclamation last Sunday, the day's bag counted twenty-five sprig, teal and widgeon. Tanner and Schuster two other city hunters, had but fifteen birds when they returned home and the best that Al Lomier could do was to bring down two geese. Evidently game was fairly numerous and of variety enough to create a lively enjoyment of sport.

Empire Gun Club.

At the annual election of the Empire Gun Club, held December 6th, the following officers were elected: A. M. Shields, president; Dr. O. E. Parent, vice-president; J. B. Hauer, secretary; J. Peltier, manager; J. L. Hezen, captain; T. L. Lewis, sergeant-at-arms; Dr. F. Cornwell, J. P. Sweeney and J. B. Hauer, directors.

The club is now in a flourishing condition, the preserve near Black Point, Marin county, has been placed in first-class order in every respect, the members having had up to date a plenty of good duck shooting. A recent improvement is a new house on the club preserve.

About fifteen members were at the club house last Sunday, some of whom assisted in putting the finishing touches on the new structure while others followed the bent of a sporting inclination by taking station in the blinds and bagging teal, widgeon and sprig from time to time as they came in range. All of the shooters had good luck, Messrs. Durst and Hunter bowling over between them thirty birds. Mr. E. W. Hunt uses a 20-gnage gun, full-choked, the load being 2½ drams of powder and ⅞ oz. of shot. He has generally been near the top on a count-up of bags after each weekly hunt. J. B. Hauer shot an even dozen of ducks.

Fined for Poaching.

Several hours were taken up in the Superior Court, Judge Buckles, at Fairfield last Monday in hearing the testimony in the proceedings against Robert Boyer, the Oakland merchant, for contempt of court. A number of local sportsmen were present. J. N. Young of San Francisco and R. Coghlan of this place appeared for the Cordelia Club and District Attorney F. R. Devlin for Boyer.

An injunction was issued and finally made perpetual two years ago, in the case of the Cordelia Gun Club vs. McCrea, prohibiting hunting on the Chamberlain track of 5,000 acres of tule land near Teal station. Boyer was one of the defendants in that action and was served with the injunction.

From the evidence, it appears that Boyer was found hunting on the club's tract on Nov. 22d of this year. He claimed he didn't know he was on forbidden ground. The court found him guilty of having violated the injunction, but said as there was some question as to his having done so willfully and as this was the first violation of its mandate, he would be lenient, but for any future violation he would be more severe. He thereupon fined Boyer $10, which fine was paid.

Captain Crittenden, keeper of the preserves, threatened to whip Boyer after court adjourned. For a few minutes it looked as though the courtroom would be the scene of a slugging match. Under Sheriff Robinson interfered before blows were struck.

Sonoma County Game Ordinance.

The much-talked-of game ordinance for Sonoma county was passed by the Board of Supervisors last Saturday. For the reference of sportsmen and all interested the ordinance is printed in full below.

The market hunter is cut off from shipping game out of the county, Chinese and Japanese pheasants are protected for five years and the deer and quail open season is shortened.

Section 1. Any person or persons who, at any time, or during any season in the county of Sonoma, shall hunt, pursue, take, kill or destroy or have in his possession for the purpose of sale or shipment for sale or profit to any party or parties outside of said county of Sonoma, or who (being then in or a resident of said county) at any time or during any season, shall sell or offer for sale to any party or parties outside of said county, or shall ship for sale or for market or profit to any party or parties outside of said county, any valley quail, bob white, partridge or any kind of wild duck or rail, mountain quail, grouse, dove or doves, deer, antelope, elk or mountain sheep, the same having been killed or captured in the county of Sonoma, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction for violation of this section shall be fined in a sum of not less than twenty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail of Sonoma county for a period not less than ten days, nor more than one hundred and fifty days, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 2. Every person who shall kill, trap, or in any way destroy and Chinese or Japanese pheasants within the county of Sonoma for a period of five years from the enactment of this ordinance shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction for violation of this section shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than one hundred and fifty days, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 3. Every person who, in the county of Sonoma, State of California, between the first day of February and the first day of November in each year, shall hunt, pursue, take kill or destroy or have in his possession any valley quail, or bob white or partridge shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction for violation of this section shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten days or more than one hundred and fifty days, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 4. Every person who shall hunt, pursue, take, kill or have in his possession, or destroy any male deer between the first day of October and the fifteenth day of July of the following year, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum of not less than twenty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail of not less than ten days nor more than one hundred and five days, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 5. This ordinance shall be in force and take effect from and after the first dey of January, 1899, and shall be published together with the names of the members of the Board of Supervisors voting for and against the same for a period of one week in a newspaper printed and published in the county of Sonoma.

Sacramento Bench Show.

The premium list for the show at Sacramento, commencing January 4, 1899, has been issued by the California State Poultry and Kennel Club. The exhibition will be conducted under P. K. L. rules. Entries close Friday, December 23rd. The judges selected are J. W. Burrell, of San Jose, for the pointer and setter classes and C. D. Nairn for all other classes. Single entries will be $3. All over two, $2 each. The prizes will be, for first, a silver medal, for second and third, diplomas. Special prizes will be numerous. To all dogs winning championship honors the club will award their champion gold medal. The club also offers a gold medal for best and silver medal for second best meritorious exhibit. Secretary Coffey reports most encouraging prospects for a large number of entries and a successful exhibition. Thirty-nine breeds of dogs, aggregating 216 classes, are enumerated in the list, exclusive of the miscellaneous and selling classes. Dogs of any breed can be entered for exhibition or for sale only, upon payment of an entry fee of $1 25.

Further particulars can be obtained by addressing M. Coffey, secretary, 2503 E street, Sacramento, Cal.

Coursing at Los Angeles.

Despite the somewhat chilly, cloudy weather, there was a great crowd at the Agricultural Park coursing last Sunday. The sport was good and the courses as a rule were long and exciting. Mountain Belle won first money, B. B. and B. second, Jessie Hays third, Stella fourth.

Entries are already coming in freely for the big Christmas Day meet, and all indications are that it will be the biggest event of the kind ever given outside of San Francisco.

The amount of the purse in the sixty-four dog open stake will be $600. Local leashmen are manifesting a great deal of interest in the southern event. W. G. Taylor, the secretary of the club, will give full particulars to those interested. His address is P. O. Box 987, Los Angeles, Cal.

Oakland Specialty Show.

The inaugural specialty show on the Pacific Coast was held in the Exposition Building, Oakland, for three days, commencing December 8th, under the auspices of the California Collie Club. Pacific Kennel League rules prevailed. The entries numbered twenty-five cocker spaniels and fifty-three collies. There was also on exhibition a number of cockers and collies not in competition, among the latter a string of four collies from the Sacramento Collie Kennels, Matt Coffey, manager. The cocker exhibit was a good one, several of the dogs benched were not in good show condition and lost to dogs that could not have won so easily, if at all, under other circumstances. The collie exhibit, while it was a meritorious one, was not up to the standard of recent shows. Stewart and Sons' Rancho Bonita Kennels' had the largest number of collie entries, O. J. Albee and W. F. True came next with ten each.

The judging of the cocker class, with but few exceptions, was satisfactory; in the collie class, judging by score card can not be voted an overwhelming success, whilst it may be tolerated for a small number of entries it is too slow for individual work in a large show. This has been demonstrated in eastern shows and the score card relegated to oblivion. S. Tyler, of Pasadena, officiated as judge. Secretary Stewart's appearance at the eleventh hour, having recovered in time from an attack of illness, was very material in making the show as successful as it was. Messrs. Harker and Berrett rendered able assistance in making things move smoothly.

The awards were as follows:

Cocker spaniels (other than black): Puppy bitches—First, Mrs. T. J. Blight's Baby Ora. Novice bitches—First, Redwood Kennels' La Palome; second, George H. Smith's Flossie S. Winners, dogs—First, Redwood Kennels' Colorado; second, Thornhill Kennels' Knight of Los Angeles. Winners, bitches—First, Redwood Kennels' Tootsie W; second, H. H. Carlton's Oakside Trilby (formerly Banner Trilby).

Cocker spaniels (black, not over 28 pounds); Puppy dogs—First, Redwood Kennels' Redwood Bob; second, Redwood Kennels' Redwood Forest. Puppy bitches—First, Plumeria Kennels' Omo Girl; second, Redwood Kennels' Redwood Betsy. Novice bitches—First, Miss E. Warner's Pocho; second, Thornhill Kennels' Woodmere Tiney. Open dogs—First, Redwood Kennels' Dufferin Pastime; second, Mrs. Webster Jones' Pedro. Open bitches—First, Thorbill Kennels Woodmere Rupee; second; Redwood Kennels' Peg Woffington; third, Plumeria Kennels' Omo Girl. Champion dogs—First, Redwood Kennels' Champion Havoc; second, Plumeria Kennels' Champion Viscount; third, Mrs. W. C. Ralston's Champion Woodland Duke. Champion bitches—First, Redwood Kennels' Champion Polly Pastime.

Collies (tricolor, black and tan, black and white): Puppy dogs and bitches—First, W. B. Frue's bitch Princess Ziska; second, Stewart & Son's dog Ormskirk Yarrow; third, Stewart & Son's bitch Ormskirk Witch. Juvenile bitches—First, J. C. Berret's Wellshourne Happy Medium; second, Stewart & Son's Lass o' Gowrie; third, Charles R. Harker's Wellehourne Bonita; reserve, Stewart & Son's Crookit Bawhee; V. H. C., Dr. H. C. Brown's Happy Afterthought; V. H. C., Stewart & Son's Ettrick Maid. Puppy dogs—First, O. J. Allhee's Ormskirk Emerald, Jr.; second, W. B. Frue's Count Sergius; third, Beach Hill Kennels' Don Jose; reserve, Fred Baltzer's Sampson Ormonde; V. H. C., C. H. Chabot's Donald VI. Puppy bitches—First, O. J. Alhee's Ormskirk Queenie; third, Beach Hill Kennels' Phronsita; V. H. C., W. B. Frue's Princess Ozre; V. H. C., T. T. Greaves' Highland Lass.

Choice of Puppies.

Continuing our hints on how to choose puppies, Mastiffs are the next large breed to be dealt with. The principal points required in the young puppies of this fine old English breed are, shortness and squareness of muzzle, massiveness in skull, small ears, great bone and a rotund short body. Size is, of course, important, but secondary to the points enumerated.

Taking a string of sporting dogs next, the Pointer is invariably given the pride of place. In choosing the best of a litter of Pointer puppies, the head is a most important part of the dog's anatomy. This should, in a puppy, be long, narrow and square at the muzzle, with pretty well of flew—that is of lip. The body should be short and so should the tail, which should taper to a point. Legs straight as possible in front, and feet short and cat-like, hind limbs well bent in stifle. Ears small, color immaterial, being lemon and white, liver and white, and black.

The Setter family contains three varieties, viz., the English, Irish and Scotch or Gordon in body, build and coat all being much the same, but differing in color and minor characteristics.

The English setter embraces the lemon and white, blue belton or Leverack and bleck, tan and white. There is no difference whatever in these three subdivisions of one breed, except in color. As in the Pointer, a long, lean head is required, with a square muzzle, but the development of the occiput is more marked in the Setter than in the Pointer, and less exactions are made as to "stop."

The Setter is not so round in body as the Pointer, and of course, must have more coat and be well feathered on the legs, with a straight, short tail, eyes small.

The Gordon or Black-and-Tan Setter is almost an exact duplicate of his English brother, except, perhaps, that he is a trifle bigger dog, and does not grow so much feather. The richness of tan is a minor point, which is of little consequence in a puppy, except that the darker tanned ones are preferable.

In the Irish setter we come to a rather different dog, more particularly in head, which is not required to be quite so long, and to show more stop and less occiput development, eyes not so small, and presenting an expression particularly Irish. The Irish setter is a trifle smaller than the English, and exhibits less feathering, but a flat coat in all the three varieties is an all important one.

The Irish Wolfhound is closely allied to the Scotch Deerhound, except that a harder coat is required, and he is a heavier dog all through, but a trifle lower on the legs, and should be more powerful still in jaw owing to the more savage nature of his quary—Southern Fancier.

English Sheep Dogs.

In England and Scotland the fancy for sheep dogs is growing. As a companion to a shepherd or stockman the old English sheep dog, being easily trained and at the same time steady and deliberate in movement, cannot be beaten. In Scotland sheep farming has been carried on in parts isolated from human habitation, therefore the shepherd and his collie are often separated from human associations for a considerable time. The collie is thus less of a household dog than the bobtail, who, being employed to herd, drive and watch stock, to guard his master's premises, drive trespassing stock away, and, in fact, act as the friend and associate of his master's family, has developed that charming disposition which has made him one of the best of companions. Owners of sheep dogs say gentleness goes farther in training them than anything else.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

A chance to dispose of a bulldog puppy is offered in our advertising columns this week.

J. P. Norman has been elected a director of the San Francisco Kennel Club to succeed F. W. Tallant, resigned.

Among the litter of pups recently whelped by Mrs. E. F. Beck's cocker speniel, Lady Thornhill, was a pure white dog puppy and the best looking one of the six. This is a somewhat unusual color, though the sire is black and white.

William Halley of Sacramento, states that he is well pleased with his recent purchase from Norfolk Kennels. He proposes to have the puppy in first-class condition for the coming Sacramento show and will cut out the pace in the fox terrier competition.

The bench show held by the American Pet Dog Club in New York and the Boston Terrier Club at Boston recently were both successfully conducted. The attendance at each show was large and fashionable, in fact as a combination of dog show and society function they were hard to beat.

The judges at the inaugural field trials of the Ohio Field Trials Association were Theodore Goodman, of Terre Haute, Ind.; Jas R. Foster of Waverly, Ohio, and G. O. Smith, of Wheeling, W. Va., whose decisions were received with universal satisfaction by the club members and sportsmen present at the trials.

The case of William McCaffrey, who was ruled off at Union Park a short time ago for criticising one of Judge Bull's decisions, will come up for decision before the directors. As this was McCaffrey's first offense, it is thought that the directors will reinstate him, as it has developed that McCaffrey's utterances were without malicious intent. Kay & Trant, for whom McCaffrey is training, will retain his services.

Dr. R. Feldt, of Eureka, was in this city last week. The Doctor takes quite a pride in his handsome rough coat St. Bernard Leo (Marc Anthony R.—Sutro's Maud). Leo is a solid orange color, white breast, blaze, white feet and tail tip. He weighs 190 pounds, and is 34 inches high. His bone development is very great. He lacks the dark shadings however which would wonderfully improve his grand head. Leo will stay in a local kennel for a while before being sent back to Eureka.

Pickle Donovan's difficulties with the people who are now running Union Coursing Park caused their withdrawal from Ingleside and the opening of the new resort; now that he had to let go of most of the Ingleside interests he retained, the air is full of rumors of a new coursing park to be started. Articles of incorporation were recently filed by a third coursing organization headed by one Chas. Mehn, who made his debut into the business circles of this city by starting a cheap grocery store south of Market street on a cash capital of a head of cabbage and a keg of steam beer.

R. de B. Lopez, the well-known importer of thoroughbred horses from Australia and enthusiastic devotee of the sport of coursing, has a plan to prevent the long and trying courses that have injured some of the best racing dogs in the State. He thinks it would be advisable to have little stalls in the field, and when the racing dogs were seen to be on the verge of exhaustion, other dogs might be slipped from these stalls and the racers would be saved. The plan has not been fully worked out, but in some shape or other it will yet be proposed for the consideration of the Union Park directors.

The Tacoma Kennel Club have elected the following officers for the coming year: President, R. T. Reid; Vice-President, H. T. Denham; Secrstary and Treasurer, S. Holbrook; Trustees—E. G. Griggs, J. W. Harden, Marshall K. Snell, O. H. Kimball and George Keihlmeyer.

The judges for the Continental Field Trials were Prof. E. S. Osthaus, Toledo, O.; W. B Meares, the club's secretary, and Irving Hoagland, of New Brunswick, N. J. Trials commenced on December 6th at Lexington, N. C. The Derby had sixteen starters. The winners were: first, Colonel R, by Harwick—Trsp, Jr, owned by S. R. Edwards, Cleveland, O.; second, Lad of Jingo, owned by W. P. Anstin, Mansfield, Pa.; third, Count Danstone, by Ch. Coont Gladstone—Dan's Lady. Colonel R was beaten in the second series of the Eastern Trials Derby by Tahsrd. Coont Danstone was first in that event.

Secretary Kilgarif is in receipt of recent advices to the effect that quail will be foond in sufficient nombers to enable the trials to be run off in first-class style. It has been reported that the quail are very scarce in the vicinity of Bakersfield. This has caosed considerable apprehension among sportsmen interested in the Pacific Coast field trials, which occor at Bakersfield in January. It is said, though, that there is no occasion for worry on this score. for the reason that the birds always desert that locality at the present time of the year and go into the mountains, where they remain until driven down into the valleys by the snows. The indications point to a very soccessful event.

It is well known that the bodies of many homan beings are tattooed all over in a most extraordinary way, hot it is only recently that this fad haa extended so that the same treatment is being applied to dogs. It is said that in the East, New York we believe, the first case of a dog being tattooed was heard of, and now, in England, the crests of their owners have been tattooed on the dogs. The operation is said to be a painless ons by the application of corrosive soblimate, cocaine and ether spray, but it is probable, that were the victims able to speak they would not endorse this statement.

A cresm colored greyhoond was nsed in Cleveland not so long ago to advertise the name of a certain sewing machine, the name was stained in the dog's hair, this, howsver, while it was effective as a novel way of advertising was not tattooing.

One's love for a pet dog can be shown far better by careful attention to his health than by applying terms of endearment in the presence of visitors or by endowing him with an expensive collar or fine ribbons. The mistress should apply to her pet the same laws of hygisne she applies to herself, comparatively speaking. Give him plenty of fresh air and water. Keep the skin clean and his coat well groomed. Give him plenty of exercise. Do this and nature will reward yoo with a lively, loving appreciative companion.

Too moch attention, both at kennels and in the home, can not be given to the fact that a dog's digestion and therefore his bowels need constant watching and special care. How often does a fine spirited dog. more especially a bitch appear dull, listless and without style through neglect of the owner to see that his system is clear of imporities. It seems strange when there are so many simple effective remedies at hand that this is so moch overlooked.

The Torf, Field and Farm has the following concerning recent press notices of the loss of a local dog: "The Irish setter Dick Swiveller, well known in the States in the early nineties, is reported to have been found dead in his kennel December 3d with evidence of poison. He was whelped in 1887, and at his age, over eleven years, it would seem unnecessary to use poison as an agent to bring aboot his end. Yooth he no longer had, and the majority of dogs die before the age of eleven from natural causes. In bis early career Dick was owned by an excellent advertiser, and were it not that he was in other hands we might surmise that, having outlived his osefulness as a mediom in the nsual channel, his desth was hastened to get one more chance at the credulous reporter. Alas, poor Dick!"

There are more things, Alec, twixt heaven and earth than thoo has dresmed of in thy philosophy. We recall now that Truman's Patti; an old Irish setter bitch, the dam of Lightning, her name we can't recall; Lady Elcho and others, all old enough to have died naturally years before, were reported to have gone by the poison route.

Odd too, Dick Swiveller was reported lost and fonnd and poisoned in the short space of two or three months—it is probable of coorse, hut——

THE FARM.

Cheap Paint for Farm Buildings.

Farm buildings should be painted before showing that they need paint badly, because one coat then does better and is far more economical that two coats later, when the surface has become very dry and porous. Indeed, a single coat of boiled linseed oil applied when the paint first shows signs of fading, is all that will be found necessary at such a period, because it is the oil that is lacking in the paint, or rather pigment, and the oil restores both color and texture and makes the color as good as ever. Under such system of treatment, I would advise putting on, in the first place, three coats of the best paint. But if there be a danger that the paint will not receive due care afterwards, it may be well to use a less expensive paint. Of course there are several varieties, and some of them wear about as well as the average paint.

I will give some of the cheap paints that are especially useful for farm buildings. A friend lays the following paint problem before us for solution: "I have a weather beaten barn that must be painted. I bought and applied some paint to the barn doors, and two gallons of linseed oil at forty cents a gallon hardly made a respectable grease spot on them. What shall I do, seeing that I cannot afford to go all over the barn with such costly material? Is there no good, cheap paint?" If the surface is extremely dry and open, a milk paint will answer. This is made by simply slaking lime as usual, and then thinning the mass with skim milk or with buttermilk, the former being preferable. An agreeable color may be imparted by means of dry, yellow ochre, or umber, or any dry earth pigment.

If lamphlack is to be used, first break it up in vinegar. Care must be exercised when making a milk-and-lime paint. Strain the slacked lime, then stir in the sweet skimmilk until the mass is about like good rich cream. If it becomes too thin, the paint will run, unless the woodwork be very porous. Apply with a good whitewash brush. By the way do not waste a quarter on a brush, but add one or more quarters and get a brush that will not only work more satisfactorily, but will last years with care. By adding a solution of salt to this paint it will become much harder and will be become fireproof. It is excellent for shingled roofs.

Here is another formula for a cheap paint, one containing an additional element of durability—oil: In three gallons of clear, soft water, boil one pint of flaxseed for one-half hour; take it off and add water enough to make four gallons; let it stand to settle, pour off the water in a pail and put in enough whiting to make it as thick as whitewash. Then add one-half pint of linseed oil, which must first be emulsified by adding sal soda to it and shaking it up in a bottle until it becomes yellowish white. Stir in the mixture thoroughly; or more flaxseed may be used in place of the oil, though the latter makes the paint more durable.—A. A. Kelly in Field and Farm.

The Power of Prepotency.

Mr. J. H. Walker, a well-known breeder of cattle in Massachusetts says: "There is no possible formula for breeding or selecting a male that has the power of stamping upon his offspring his individuality, or that of his family. Very few have the power of perpetuating their qualities, and no possible way exists of determining the question except by experiment. When it is possible to keep a bull, he never should be killed, providing his progeny is fairly promising, until he is eight or ten years old or more.

While this is true, it is also true that line breeding is almost absolutely necessary to give prepotency. It is much more likely to give it than incestuous breeding, but when an animal is found that is bred incestuously that has the quality of stamping his offspring, it is usually more powerful than in even line breeding. Unless animals are bred in line, as uncles to nieces, or nephews to aunts, or what is better, several lines, or more distinct relationship, converging in one animal, they rarely have the quality of prepotency. While this discussion might be extended through columns, what I have said covers the whole case as far as breeders have been able to determine the question."

Horses' Feet.

Farmers and horse breeders could learn a lesson from the big city stables in the care of horses feet. When they come in at night they are rubbed down and their feet cleaned. Any mud, manure or gravel that may be in the bottom of the foot is carefully cleaned out with a foot hook, so that the frog is clean and thus kept healthy. On many farms we see the horses go days and weeks without their feet ever being cleaned out, and the foot becomes foul, which often develops into thrush, and the horse goes lame just from careless neglect. When on the road or in the fields horses are more apt to have clean, healthy feet than when kept standing in the stable. A good hook should be kept in the stable and every horse should have his feet cleaned, if not daily at least weekly, and it should be done when he is put away for the night, and if you find bad feet from neglect after thorough cleaning let the horse stand on clean, moist clay or put in the frog of the foot calomel, iodoform or powdered bluestone. Care to prevent foot disease should be enjoined on all about the stable to keep the feet clean and trim the colts feet to make the foot and ankle grow straight. These are little things that it pays to carefully attend to.

The coyote problem is an annoying one to the sheep men of San Joaquin and Calaveras counties. Several prominent sheep men of Lockeford and vicinity have clubbed together and offered a reward of $5 for every coyote killed within a certain radius. In order to secure the reward the party killing the coyote must leave the animal where it has been killed until it has been viewed by the parties offering the reward. The coyotes have done great damage to some of the flocks.

The California State Agricultural Society's

FUTURITY STAKE

For the Produce of Mares Covered in 1898

TO BE RUN AT THE

STATE FAIR OF 1901,

TO CLOSE JANUARY 2, 1899.

A sweepstake for two-year-olds, foals of 1899, by subscription of $10 each for mares covered in 1898, and of $100 each for the produce of such mares, to be paid as follows: $10 FOR MARES TO ACCOMPANY ENTRY, $10 on produce, payable January 1, 1900 (when color, sex and marks of foal must be given), $15 payable November 1, 1900, $25 January 1, 1901, and $15 on September 1, 1901. The State Agricultural Society to add $1,000, of which the winner is to receive $600 and the stakes paid on produce; second colt $250, third colt $150. The owners of mares at time winners of first, second and third money were foaled, to receive 60 per cent., 30 per cent. and 10 per cent. respectively, of money subscribed for mares on January 2, 1899.

Colts to carry 118, fillies 115 pounds. The winner of a stake of the value of $1,500, or two of $1,000 each, to carry three pounds extra. The winner of a stake of the value of $2,500, or two of $1,500, each to carry five pounds extra.

Allowances: Beaten maidens allowed three pounds for once, five pounds for twice. If beaten three or more times and not placed, 2, 3, allowed ten pounds.

The produce of mares not having foaled a winner prior to January 1, 1899, to be allowed five pounds additional, if claimed at time of entry of mare. In case of sale of mare before foaling, or produce thereafter, notice thereof should be filed with the Secretary, as payments not made as they become due declares entry null and releases subscriber from all liability.

If mare entered proves barren or has dead foal, entry is void, and money paid will be returned; otherwise entry follows colt.

Sportsmen and Others

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. Men whose success in whatever they engage depends on perfect physical condition, will be interested in the claims made for The Niagara Vapor Bath Cabinet.

A hunter, John C. Bayler, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I began to feel as though my happy hunting days were over. I thought I was getting old, my joints were getting stiff, and a day's outing after game always needed another day to rest up in. Since I am using The Niagara Vapor Bath, I feel like a new man. It keeps me limbered up and in good shape for work or sport."

The Niagara Vapor Bath, if used regularly, keeps a man in the most perfect physical condition, keeps his system aglow, his weight normal, his head free and clear, his muscles pliant and elastic, and not only prevents, but also cures, some of the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout and completely eradicates all the ailments arising from over-indulgence in liquor or food.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated baths at home, &c. Purifies the system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh. Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

SELLING CALIFORNIA HORSES EAST.

Suggestions As to What May Be Done in This Business Next Year.

Since the Fasig sale in New York last month at which several California horses were sold at prices largely in excess of what they would have brought in this State, there has been an expressed desire on the part of many owners to place horses in the next sale held by Mr. Fasig, which will be in February.

While there is no doubt in the mind of any person who knows the condition of the horse business, that good horses will sell for a great deal more money in Chicago and New York than they will here, owners must not delude themselves with the idea that anything in the equine shape will pay for shipping across the continent. And what is more, if owners have carefully read the advertisements of the Eastern auction firms they should know that the ordinary horse is not wanted by them. Almost any horse that is perfectly sound and can show a high rate of speed—that is, speed sufficient to go out on the road with and win one's share of brushes where quarters are driven better than 35 seconds, and sometimes in 31 or 32 will sell for a good long price in New York. Of course good looks add to the price that can be obtained for a fast one, but it is not necessary. But the animal must be sound and all right. No patched up cripples can be faked off on those eastern buyers and the auction firms don't want to waste money advertising or time selling them. Such animals as Silver King and Margaret Worth sold well, and when they are taken out on the road there and show what they can do, can be resold for double the money. But had those same mares had no records, or been unable to show high speed in the salesring there would be a different story to tell.

It is not much use to send horses across the mountains that cannot show speed in the ring and have no record, no matter how many times they have shown quarters in thirty seconds. There are too many horse sharps plying their trade in New York for hearsay testimony to have much weight at an auction sale. As Sam Gamble says: "What the New Yorkers want is good goods and you can't work off any shoddy on those people for the genuine article."

If you have no speed for sale, the next best qualifications are beauty, size, style and action. A handsome horse, with the style of a French dancing master, will have a crowd of people following him around as soon as he reaches Madison Square Garden, and if he is sound and of good size the price he brings will be worth crossing the mountains for. If there is a horse in California that stands 16 hands high, has good color, is handsome, high-headed and stylish, absolutely sound, a good, high actor and well behaved in harness, it will take four figures to express the price he will bring in either Chicago or New York. Mention that fact in a crowd of owners, and a half dozen will claim to have just such a horse, but when one goes to inspect them the probabilities are that not one will come up to the standard. There is a deficiency somewhere that was not stated. And it is this very deficiency which prevents the dealers from bidding very high when the horse is put up to be sold.

There could be picked up here in California, by a man who understands the Eastern desires and market, several car loads of horses that would bring good prices in the East, if owners would not expect too much, and would be as liberal in their terms as are the auctioneers. A splendid trade in horses can be built up between California and the East if these who want to sell and those who want to buy can only thoroughly understand and be honest with each other. We have the country to breed good horses in and across the big divide is the place to sell them. We should strive to breed and the people over there will buy no other.

Winners in California.

Up to December 12th the horses at Ingleside and Oakland tracks had raced for an aggregate in stakes and purses of $99,895. Burns & Waterhouse have taken the largest slice ont of this sum with $14,305 to their credit; but on the whole the money has been well distributed as is evidenced by the fact that thirty-one owners can show from $1,000 upward. The Cambridge Stable is second in the list, closely pressed by "Lucky" Baldwin's Santa Anita Stable. The stables that have won $1,000 or more are as follows:

Burns & Waterhouse	$14,305	Cambridge Stable	$5,470
Santa Anita Stable	4,910	Matt Storn	3,025
D. A. Honig	2,820	F. M. Taylor	2,660
W. D. Randall	2,550	H. L. Jones & Co	2,405

J. G. Brown & Co	1,180	C. S. Cunningham	1,125
J. McManus	1,080	D. Cameron	1,000

E. J. Baldwin's fine filly La Goleta leads the horses in the amount won, with $2,575 to her credit, and the Burns & Waterhouse filly Napamax stands second with $2,340 won. The horses that have won upwards of $1,000 are as follows:

Horses.	Age.	Amt.	Horses.	Age.	Amt.
La Goleta	3	$2,575	Napamax	3	$2,340

The Westchester Stakes.

Entries for three of the biggest stakes run for in America, those given by the Westchester Racing Association, will close on the last day of the year, which is just one week from to-day. They are the National Stallion Race of $20,000, The Matron of $20,000 and the Nursery Handicap, to which $2,500 is added. These races are run at Morris Park, the greatest race track in America, at the Spring and Autumn meeting of the Westchester Racing Association The full particulars of payments, closing and conditions are set forth in our advertising columns to-day.

C. J. C. Stakes.

Don't forget the date. The stakes for two-year-olds, six in number, to be run at the Spring Meeting of 1899 at Oakland, will close Monday, January 2d, 1899. They range from $1,000 to $2,000, and the conditions are all set forth in our advertising columns. The Oakland track is one of the best in the world; the accommodations for horses are not surpassed on any track.

LOS ANGELES HORSE SHOW.

The Entry List for Horses Will Close January 3d.

That the Los Angeles Horse Show will be a success is now pretty well an assured fact. The people of the metropolis of Southern California are taking more interest in the coming exhibition than in anything that has been given in that city for many years, and it would be no surprise if the attendance exceeded that of the celebrated Horse Show in New York. Los Angeles is filled with Eastern people who take great pride in the horse as an animal used for pleasure or show. No city in California has ever been able to draw the crowds to harness races that Los Angeles annually turns ont, or did when the district fair was held there, and this horse show being something new will be the feature of the new year in the City of Angels.

The probabilities are that there will be a large number of buyers to be found among the spectators of the show, and those having fair carriage and coach horses, or first-class saddle animals, cannot do better than enter and exhibit them at Los Angeles. There will be entries made in nearly all the classes by residents of this part of the State, and the train that carries them to the southland will have to be a large one should they all ship at the same time. It will be well for all desiring to enter horses for any of the premiums to remember that the lists close absolutely on Tuesday, January 3d. All communications in regard to Horse Show affairs should be addressed to M. E. Wooster, Secretary, 404 Byrne Building, Los Angeles

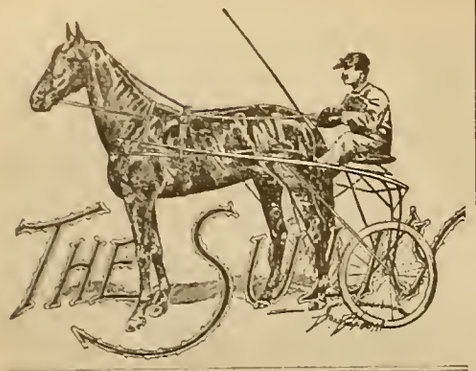
The Older Class for 1899.

The four year-olds were rather disappointing last season, and there were few really good ones. Tillo, Ornament, Ogden, imp. Algol, Macy, Ben Ronald, Kinnikinic, Cleophus, Poetess and Charentus are about the only ones worth mentioning that ran in the East.

Ben Holladay will be six years old next season, but the long-distance races should be just as surely his as if he was in the younger division. He stood out in a class by himself last season, there being literally nothing at weight for age that had a chance with him at two miles or over. If only Hamburg could have met Holladay last fall at Morris Park in a two-mile-and-a-quarter race over the hill it would have been the event of the year, and fully as many would have pinned their faith to Ben as the Daly crack.

Of the four-year-olds Imp's work was the best last season. She ran in thirty-five races, twenty-one of which she won. Including Imp, Geyser, Ornament, What-er-lou, Ogden, Kinnikinic, The Chemist, Cavalry and Satyr were the only ones to win 50 per cent. of their races, and Ogden only started eight times. May W., one of the fastest fillies now running at San Francisco, only won nine races out of twenty-two. Kinnikinic's record is eleven wins out of eighteen; Ornament's, three out of eighteen. Tillo, the winner of the Suburban, only won three races out of seven attempts.

Horses of this age can only win handicaps as a rule; consequently, if they are the best of the lot they have to carry weight in proportion, and as the handicapper's object is to make all horses equal he is often necessarily hard on the good ones, and they attempt impossibilities rather than forever stay in the stable.—Hassard.



REMOVED TO HAWAII.

All the Horses of the Agnew Stock Farm Sent to Our New Possession.

On a sailing vessel which left San Francisco last week were Boswell Jr., 2:19, six broodmares and a dozen head of weanlings, yearlings and two-year-olds, comprising about all that was left of the Agnew Stock Farm, one of the leading breeding farms in California devoted to the raising of trotting bred horses. Thus passes another of the breeding establishments of this State. The last of the stallions and mares have gone from the Corbitt place, the barns and paddocks are vacant, and its founder has passed away. The once celebrated Hobart collection is a thing of the past. The Souther Farm, the Asylum Farm, Count Valensin's collection of stallions and mares, and fifty others that could be mentioned are gone. The Agnew Stock Farm is the latest to go, but we are pleased to know that the animals will not be dispersed, but will form the nucleus of a breeding farm at our new island possessions, and will undoubtedly produce many of the horses of the future in that land of eternal sunshine. The mares in the consignment were as follows:

Lyla A, by Arthurton, out of Flora Langford the dam of Lillian Wilkes, 2:17¾.

Clara P., 2:29, by Mambrino Wilkes, out of Cora by Corsican.

Baby Mine, 2:27, by Nephew, dam by Black Boy.

Mamie Harney by Grand Moor out of Sarpy mare by Elban Allen Jr. Mamie Harney is the dam of Sidmoor, 2:17¾.

Aurelia H. by Dawn, dam Aurelia by Albert W. This mare is a half sister to Irish Lassie, 2:16, a mare bred on the Agnew Stock Farm and now holding the Island record, having beaten everything she has met in that country.

Trilby, by Dawn, out of Nettie Notwood, dam of Hillsdale, 2:14.

All the above mares are in foal to Boswell Jr., 2:19.

Mr. Agnew undoubtedly made a mistake in not breeding his best mares to Boswell Jr. instead of to Dawn. While Dawn was a great trotter, he was not really a successful sire. Since his death the mares were mated with Boswell Jr. and all the produce are extra fine lookers and show speed, many of them being very fast. Boswell Jr. is by Boswell, a horse bred by Hart Boswell, of Kentucky, and sold by General Withers to King Kalakaua, of the Hawaiian Islands. When Harry Agnew was living in the Islands, he made a bargain with Kalakaua to breed two mares to Boswell, one of them being Maude, 2:20, the dam of To Order, 2:12¾, a daughter of Bertrand Black Hawk. The produce of this union was Boswell Jr., which horse was brought to California by Mr. Agnew and has since been at his farm at Hillsdale. Boswell Jr. took his record of 2:19 in the fifth heat of a race at Petaluma, Cal., in 1892, this being the fastest heat in the race. He is a very handsome horse, as game as a pebble and as is proven by his get, a sire of size, style and speed. The people of Hawaii are to be congratulated that this stallion has been returned to his native land, and the mares that accompany him, are fit to grace any stock farm. Some of them cost Mr Agnew well up in four figures. The death of Dawn and a number of other fine animals from sickness, followed a year or so after by a fire that destroyed his handsome barn and a half dozen head of very valuable animals, and the dry season of last year, are causes that compelled Mr. Agnew to embrace this opportunity of sending his horses to Hawaii. We sincerely hope that his luck will change and that the blood of the Agnew Stock Farm, from which many good trotters and pacers have been produced, will be appreciated in the Islands. The young stock taken over, and that which will be produced hereafter, will be winners in many of the races held there in the future, and will lead in many a future brush on the Island roads. Such a fine collection of broodmares, mated with as well bred and splendid an individual as Boswell Jr. can be depended upon to uphold the good name of the American trotter in any country on earth.

It is about certain that the National Trotting Association will hold a special congress before next season, and it is believed by many horsemen that a two in three heat rule will be formulated, and that programmes for the early meetings at least will be made up of the two heat events. The professional judge question will also be considered.

A NOTABLE GATHERING.

Golden Gate Park Driving Association Holds Its First Annual Banquet.

Last Wednesday evening, at the California Hotel in this city, there assembled about fifty of the prominent road drivers of San Francisco, nearly all being members of that popular and rapidly growing organization known as the Golden Gate Park Driving Association. Although this association has been several years in existence, and given many matinees at which excellent harness racing has been furnished for the amusement of its members and the public, this is the first time those holding membership in it have met around the festal board. Last Wednesday's gathering was such a complete success, however, that the members thereupon decided to make it the first of a series of annual feasts of the kind. It was nearly 10 P. M. when they seated themselves about the table set in the shape of a horseshoe in the handsome dining hall of the California Hotel on Bush street, and proceeded to discuss the following excellent

MENU.

Eastern Oysters, half shell
Soup—Clear Green Turtle a la Amontellado
Hors D'œuvres—Celery en branche, Salt Almonds, Olives
Reisling
Fish—Fried Filet of Sole, Sauce Tartare
Entrees—Tenderloin of Beef Larded, Aux Petits Pois
Vegetables—Asparagus, Sauce Mousseline
Roman Punch
Claret
Roast—Mallard Duck, Currant Jelly
Salad—Shrimp Mayonnaise
Dessert—Plombiere Ice Cream, Cateaux Assortis, Fromage de Roquefort, Fruit, Assorted Nuts
Cafe Noir

Fully two hours were spent at the tables during which the assembled company was regaled with some excellent vocal and instrumental music. Then cigars were lighted and Vice-President Edward Aigeltinger rapping for order called on Mr. T. J. Crowley for a few remarks for "the good of the order."

Mr. Crowley was most happy in his response. He first spoke of California as the great harness horse breeding State of the Union, naming many of the champions at both the trotting and pacing gaits which had gone East to win money for their owners and fame for their native State. He spoke of the loss of interest in breeding that had followed a depression in financial affairs and an administration hostile to the district fairs. It was when he suggested that there were enough enterprising horsemen in San Francisco to form an organization and build a track for harness racing, however, that he brought the members to their feet and drew forth a storm of applause. "Fifty thousand dollars" said he "ought to secure a piece of land and erect suitable buildings." He complimented the association on its enthusiasm and the hearty interest taken in the matinees, and predicted that the future gatherings and race meetings would be still more successful.

Mr. Crowley was followed by Mr. Chas. F. Kapp, Mr. Kingsley, F. J. O'Kane, Dr. Ira B. Dalziel, Dr. Leek, C Newman, Dr. W. F. Egan, J. C. Ohlandt, E. Stewart and others who showed themselves to be enthusiastic lovers of road drivers and believers in honest, fair sport. The idea of building a track was pretty well discussed and in all probability the first step has been taken toward building a first-class harness track in San Francisco.

The success of this banquet, at which as never before in the history of the association the members met in communion and exchanged views on subjects of more than great interest to all present, was greatly appreciated by every member present and there will be better attended meetings, more enthusiasm and more fellow feeling than ever among them. It was along in the "wee sma' hours" when the members dispersed with a feeling that much had been accomplished to make road driving and matinee racing more popular than ever among the horse owners of San Francisco, and certainly there is more of a fraternal feeling among the association members and a desire and determination on the part of all to make Golden Gate Park Driving Association one of the leading organizations of its kind in the United States.

The officers of the organization at present are as follows: President, John C. Kirkpatrick; Vice-President, E H. Aigeltinger; Treasurer, E. Stewart; Secretary, F. W. Thompson; Directors, Charles F. Kapp, F. G. O'Kane, G. Berry, H. F. Patrick, J. Chesley, Dr. W. F. Egan, H W. Miller, J. C. Ohlandt, W. H. Hamerton, I. B. Dalziel, R. F. Gallagher and A. Schwartz.

Of the 714 head sold at the Fasig sale, over 460 were shown in the ring by Al Thomas, the balance being shown in harness or by their consignors. It would be a very conservative estimate to say that when showing each horse went one mile, as some went a good bit more, so that Thomas rode over 460 miles during the selling time, or over 50 miles a day. In addition to this he rode steadily every one of the nine days, from 7 to 10 o'clock each morning, and oftentimes an hour more between 5:30 P. M. and the opening sale, so that his total work would come up to mighty close to 100 miles a day.

Pittsburg will very likely ask for a place in the Eastern grand circuit. A few years ago the Pittsburg track was the scene of some of the greatest races of the harness season.

HOW DR. BOUCHER TRAINED MISS LOGAN.

Patience and Gentle Treatment Made a Champion Out of a Poor Prospect.

"Yarrum" tells the following story in the Horse Review of Miss Logan, 2:07½, as related to him by her breeder and owner, Dr A. W. Boucher, of San Jose:

"The dam of Miss Logan was an old mare by the thoroughbred horse Firetail, and she was owned by a neighbor of mine. The Firetail tribe were all noted for their ability to get tired whenever they were asked to exert themselves very much, but this particular mare seldom got tired, because she generally refused to exert herself. She never paced and could not walk, trot or run much better than a goat, and she seemed to know it, as she most always balked when she was asked to do anything in that line. Her owner finally consulted me in regard to breeding her to my trotting stallion, Gen. Logan, 2:23¾, a son of Alexander Button, and as the gentleman had always been a good patron of mine and paid me in gold for many services rendered as a physician, I accepted his proposition, and when the colt came I agreed to keep her and train her for a half interest, and later on I became her sole owner in exchange for another service of the horse to the same mare. This filly was Miss Logan, and that is how I came to own her.

"I took her up as a two-year-old and employed a colt-breaker to come and break her. She did not take kindly to this scheme at all, and she threw herself, and balked, and kicked and fought, day after day, until she finally fell and injured her spine. We thought she was 'done up,' for a time, but she rounded to all right, and I afterwards gave her to a young man to drive double with an aged horse. This quieted her down a little, but she was still about the meanest thing that ever drew breath of life. The boy worked her so hard that it finally began to tell on her, and I was obliged to hobble her. With the hobbles on she could not kick, and from that day to this, on the road or track, no matter whether she was to be speeded, jogged or walked, she has always worn the hobbles. I drove her on the road back and forth to town with the hobbles on, but she did pretty much as she pleased, and if I wanted to go south and she wanted to go north, we generally went north or else did not go at all. As soon as I could induce her to go round the track she commenced to make speed, and I fussed along with her until she was a four-year-old. I then went out to the races with some other horsemen. I gave her very irregular work on account of other duties that kept me busy, but we took one trip of 200 miles across country that had a very quieting effect on her. She went one mile for me, late that season, in 2:18, and won a race where no time was taken or money charged at the gate, in about 2:31.

I have learned that she could be induced to do most anything if handled just at if she was a can of dynamite and never tried to force her. She would rebel instantly as soon as I tried to use force. She would not turn either way, or stop, without a fight if I took hold of her and tried to force her, but if I could make her understand what I wanted by a very careful and gradual manipulation of the lines she would often do it herself. She would not go in on the track only when she felt like it, and one day when she balked at the track gate I slapped her with one line. I never did it again though, as she kicked with one foot quick as a flash and just grazed my leg. The next year I wanted to take a long trip across the country, so I hired her and turned her out. She raised a colt and last winter I took her up again and put her in training, and, as she had lots of speed, and I believed that by yielding to all her whims and letting her have her own way as much as possible, and never using force or severe measures that she would eventually get confidence enough in me to do as I wanted her to. I entered her at Denver and a few other places east of the mountains. At the time I shipped her to Denver, she had only had one mile as fast as 2:18, but I knew she could go faster, though I did not know that she could go to the half in 1:01¾, as she did in the first heat of her first race, and to tell you the truth, I did not know she was going that fast. I knew that it would not do to try to restrain her too much, but I could have checked her a little if I had known she was going so fast. All the trouble I had in the Denver race was in trying to get her to turn around and score, and I had to have my boys take her by the head and lead her around above and below the wire. She sometimes turned around herself at the proper time and place, but she did not want any assistance from me in doing it, and when she was a little bit slow in turning, and I, in my anxiety, pulled an ounce too hard on the proper rein, she generally balked. Even when she got turned around to score she never wanted me to take hold of her to assist her to square away. She wanted to do it all herself, and whenever I was forced to take hold of her for any cause it was 'two to one' that she would refuse to pace another step that time down. That is the reason why I most always turned her ahead of the field in scoring—I wanted clear sailing, so that I would not have to take hold of her. I never struck her or argued with her, and from week to week during the past summer she kept getting better and better, until, in her last race at Lexington, I did not need any outside assistance in turning her around. I cannot say that she is thoroughly broke to drive yet, but I think, under my system, she eventually will be. We will be over again anyway next season, and I have no fear but that she will get part of the money. Charley DeRyder and others timed her a quarter in 0:28¾ at Fort Wayne, and she has been a mile, separately timed, in 2:05. The only trouble I had in keeping her balanced was in stopping her from hitting her knees. She never hit them hard, except for a short time during the summer, and after John Hussey's blacksmith, R. E. Nash, shod her with a shoe that forced her to break over her outside toe, she went clean and all right again. She always wore a little toe-weight and rarely ever made a mistake or a break after she once started to race.

Horse Sales and Auction Prices.

LOS ANGELES, December 19, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your issue of the 11th I find the subjoined paragraph, in which I am partially prepared to concur and from part of which I must be permitted to dissent. You say:

"The prices obtained for the Spreckels yearlings at the sale Tuesday evening were most absurdly low. The youngsters were royally bred and from producing dams and sires besides being far above the average as individuals. Such prices as were received for the lot were not calculated to encourage breeders, as it does not speak highly for the horse sense of the horsemen here who failed to take advantage of an unusual opportunity to secure high class material for winning race horses."

I will admit the prices were very low when the individuality of the youngsters was taken into consideration but they were mostly by untried sires, although I always prefer an untried sire to one that has been fairly tried and found wanting. The youngsters were "royally bred" beyond all venture of a doubt but there were scarcely any of them "from producing sires and dams," although you were right when you said they were "far above the average as individuals." They were as choice a lot as I had ever seen and even I was surprised when I saw some of them in the ring, for I had inspected them only in the stalls. More especially was this true of the colt by General Miles (as game a horse as was ever saddled in America) out of Nitonche by Jim Brown. I went into the stall the first time and he stood up in the corner about half asleep. The next time I went in, he was lying down and I never like to disturb any horse when at rest. But when he came to be led into the ring I saw a colt that would have brought $1,000 on his looks in a sale ring at either Melbourne or Doncaster. The flash of lights, the strong voice of the auctioneer and the babel of tongues among the visitors, were something novel to the beautiful chestnut (who would have readily passed for a son of Abercorn, if laid out at Sydney) and he showed off as not one colt in a hundred ever does. Andy Blakely certainly got a prize in him.

The great disappointment to me was the low price paid for the chestnut colt by The Judge out of Georgia by Flambeau. He was not very large but built on such hard-finish lines as to recall Donbloon, the great mud horse of my boyhood days when I used to go out to New Orleans with my grandfather on a cotton ship. This colt, called Orpheus, will make a two-year-old performer, while the Nitonche colt would be better if "saved for the St. Leger," as they say in the colonies. I look for Orpheus to mature rapidly and, for that reason, believe he will be heard from as a winner before the next watermelon crop comes to market.

When you stop to consider that the Palo Alto imported mares were quite as good as Mr. S. G. Reed's (which is saying a good deal) and that there were twice as many of them, you cannot call Mr. Spreckels' sale one of "absurdly low" prices while the fact stares you in the face that he got $98 per head more than the Stanford youngsters realized. The difference between the two lots was that while the Palo Alto sires are failures and in nowise the equal of the mares, the Napa stallions are as yet untried and have a chance in this world. Again, they are no more untried than were Mr. Charles Kerr's lot or Mr. Baldwin's, and yet both those lots fell below the youngsters from the Napa farm.

But, granting that, as you say, the prices really were "absurdly low," there is another cause for that which you may not have stopped to consider. In 1895 I was employed as a "barker" to assist the auctioneer, at nearly all the yearling sales conducted by Killip & Co., who had at that time a monopoly of the business; and in those days $350 was considered no very extraordinary average price for really highly bred and well-shaped yearlings. But at those sales we could always count on considerable rivalry between Messrs. A. B Spreckels, Walter S. Hobart, Barney Schreiber and Edward Corrigan, who were spirited and energetic bidders whenever anything choice was led out for sale. Now all four of those gentlemen are in the breeding business themselves and have horses to sell, instead of being purchasers. That has, in my belief, more to do with the "absurdly low" prices at Mr. Spreckels' sale than all other causes combined. I was with Mr. Spreckels for two days following the sale and never once heard him complain of a lack of appreciation on the part of buyers. But then he never was any great hand to weep over spilt milk, either in politics, racing or anything else.

Another thing that may have led up to the low prices of this season in the auction ring is the fear on the part of those who would otherwise be buyers, that they will not get much chance to use their new purchases. Everything looks now toward legislation that will restrict racing down to thirty days in each county within the State, and as that might mean the loss of several thousand dollars worth of engagements, trainers and owners are and have been a little nervous about investments in high-bred horseflesh.

Don't for a moment imagine that this is written in ill-will over the extract above cited or even in a captious spirit. Indeed it is more explanatory than negative of what you stated in the extract quoted. And while Mr. Spreckels' young stallions could not be expected to bring such prices for their progeny as prevailed three years ago, I am frank to believe that his yearlings by those very sires sold on the night of December 6th for less average prices than they will ever sell for again. Yours truly,

HIDALGO.

A New Method for Starting.

Every man that ever went to a race track has some suggestion to make which he religiously believes would, if acted upon, make the starting of horses a pleasant diversion and a joy forever. The latest is from a New York turf writer on the Commercial Advertiser and is as follows:

A great deal has been written and talked about the starting problem lately without any improvement being suggested. To begin with, though nearly all racing men will admit that the use of the recall flag is a mistake, it is still persistently used.

The writer wishes to offer a plan, which certainly is feasible, and was suggested to him after an experience of many seasons.

Instead of one barrier use two, sixty feet apart, of any make or description, as preferred by the club on whose grounds this plan is adopted.

The recall flag is abolished, but the assistant starter finds employment at the first barrier. Here the horses are lined up, and when the first barrier is raised the horses are in line and walk up to the starter. If he likes the way they are coming he calls to the jockeys to come on. Up goes his barrier and away they go. If the horses are badly aligned the starter sends them back to the first barrier without raising his barrier at all.

With a good, quick man as starter, this would certainly do away with long delays at the post, and the punishment should be severe enough if a jockey came from the first barrier faster than at a walk to compel obedience.

Practical men to whom the writer has explained his ideas are already believers that this is the remedy for long delays at the post.

This would be a sort of go between a running and a flat-footed start. Last season many of the regulars will remember that one or two starts were made by sending the horses back and allowing them to walk up to the barrier. These starts were always satisfactory, and with two barriers a perfect start is almost assured.

Racing at New Orleans.

Reports from New Orleans are to the effect that the racing is much improved over last year. The class of horses competing is much better than heretofore and there is a greater attendance in spite of some pretty bad weather. Last season eight books managed to handle all the money wagered at the track, but on Monday, December 12th, sixteen layers of odds cut in, and that number has been maintained ever since. Of the seventy-five races run up to the date above mentioned thirty-four were won by the favorite, and fourteen second choices got past the post first, which shows that the public has won a fair share of the money. In nineteen instances there have been finishes in which the first and second horse were only necks apart or less. $21,000 was divided among purse winners during the time, G. C. Bennett being the heaviest winner, with $2,076 to his credit. Of the jockeys who have ridden one or more winners there are twenty-four, T. Burns with fifteen, having more than twice as many wins as any other rider. The jockeys who have won are Burns, Frost, Holden, Hothersall, Lines, Songer, Powers, O'Connor, Aker, C Combs, Crowhurst, Dupee, R. Narvaez, McCann, Mason, Valentine, Troxler, Thompson, Southard, Shepperd, Kitley, Guiteres, Dunn and Dugan. While the purses are not $250 in most instances, as a general thing there are three races a day at one mile or over. The California horse Diggs is winning there occasionally. On the 7th instant he won a six furlong race there, beating a pretty fair field of horses. The track was slow, but he ran the distance in 1:16, which is considered pretty good time for the track.

California Jockey Club Stakes.

The following dates have been assigned for the stakes to to be run at Oakland after January 2, 1899:

Rixford, b c, by imp. Brutus—Mary Russell.

If the turf reporters of the daily press would only be a little more consistent in their criticisms, racing would have a healthier tone. Take the case of the setting down of Bullman last week. For weeks the reporters have been criticising his rough riding and saying that he should be punished, and now that the Judges have punished him for a most flagrant foul, and not heavily at that, these same reporters are saying that the punishment is severe, calling attention to the fact that he is the support of a family, and even claiming that as other jockeys do wrong things a good rider like Bullman should not be so severely dealt with. No jockey should be punished when he is not guilty and severe punishment is not necessary in all cases, but if we are to have clean, honest racing, sickly sentimentalism must be thrown aside, and jockeys, owners, trainers and all concerned must be made to understand that punishment for violation of the rules will be enforced. If Bullman indulged in the tactics he is accused of (and the Judges are certainly the most likely to know positively whether he did or not), then the thirty days on the ground is not too great a punishment, and the good of racing will not be conserved by an attempt on the part of well meaning, but misguided reporters trying to make a martyr of him.

THE lesson of the season's sales of thoroughbreds, both private and at public auction, is that untried yearlings, unless of extraordinary quality, bring low prices, while developed two-year-olds showing some class, are in demand at good figures. The experience of Messrs. Gideon & Daly, J. E. Madden, E. O. Pepper and others should prove a very strong argument in favor of developing two-year-olds and then selling them. The market for yearlings the past few seasons has been glutted, and practical horsemen have by sad and expensive experience become shy of investing at high figures in full brothers and sisters of first-class horses, for in only a few cases have these ventures been successful on the turf. If breeders were to train their annual crops as two year-olds, instead of selling them as yearlings at prices which have ruled the past few years, it is not unlikely that there would be a better balance on the right side of the breeding ledger. —Turf, Field and Farm.

BENDORAN is a pretty high-class three-year-old as is well shown by his two races at Ingleside this season; his breeding is of the best, running back through the most fashionable lines of the English Stud Book. As he is apparently sound and a remarkably well turned colt he should develop into one of our best handicap horses.

American Bred Horses in England.

The showing made in England last year by the get of stallions owned in America was better than most persons imagine. Besides the American stallion Sensation, which had nine winners of nineteen races on the other side of a total value of about $36,000, the Sailor Prince had seven winners of ten races of a total value of about $17,000; St. Blaise winner of three races; Simon Magnus, two winners of four races; Sir Modred, one winner of three races; Strathmore, one winner of one race; Tenny, one winner of two races; Whistle Jack, one winner of one race; Candlemas, one winner of one race; Dobbins one winner of one race; Duncombe, one winner of three races; Goldfinch, two winners of six races; Iroquois, one winner of two races; Locohatchee, one winner of three races; Long Taw, one winner of one race; Pontiac, two winners of four races; Rayon d'Or, one winner of six races.

This is the record on the flat independent of jumping races. All these horses were imported from England to this country except Sensation, Tenny, Strathmore, Dobbins, Iroquois, Locohatchee, and Long Taw, which were bred here; Sir Modred, imported from Australia, and Rayon d'Or, imported from France.

The American bred horse Lafayette, by Strathmore—Ocean Wave, won a two-mile steeplechase at a recent December meeting at Sandown Park, from a field of fourteen. He carried 154 pounds, and although he is reported as "wearing a tube," he took the lead at the second barrier from the finish and won easily by three lengths.

This is a very remarkable occurrence and probably the first of its kind on record; while American horses have heretofore won hurdle races in the old country, it has always been the boast of English racing men that we never had a horse in America which could go over one of their steeplechase courses at all; leaving the possibility of his winning out of the question. It is thus apparent that stock of American breeding is making headway on the English turf. No doubt, in moderation, the get of the sires named above might sell reasonably well there next season.

Prominent English Judge Dead.

At the age of 83 recently died J. F. Clark, for all his life the Jockey Club judge at Epsom and Doncaster. His father and grandfather were judges also. It is related of the late Judge Clark that in the Derby of 1859 he placed Ticket-of-Leave instead of Marionette second to Musjid. He had confounded the white body and black sleeves of Colonel Towney, who owned Ticket-of-Leave, with the black body and white sleeves of the owner of Marionette. The mistake was adhered to until after the Oaks was run (two days later), when the matter was gone into, and Judge Clark being satisfied that he made a mistake, the stewards permitted the placings to be altered. Inasmuch as the settling did not take place until the following Monday, no great harm was done by the original error. But in this country hundreds of thousands would have gone into the wrong hands if such a thing had occurred, for the poolrooms and betting rings would have all paid off on the day of the race. One of Judge Clark's theories was that it was a bad thing for the good of the breeding of horses when the date from which horses take their ages was altered from the first of May to the first of January. He attributed the great increase in roaring to that fact, because breeders so arranged matters that the foals came to an inclement season when there was no grass, and they were often cooped up in close boxes for weeks together, with the result that when they were turned out they caught cold and the seeds of roaring were laid. With the foals coming on in May, on the other hand, the sun would probably be shining on them, and there would be plenty of young grass for the dams to eat.

THE Memphis Commercial-Appeal says: Charley Patterson is in luck again. He developed Ornament and Hamburg, and unless all signs fail, he will have a two-year-old out next year that will throw in the shade all previous performances of the two famous horses named in the beginning. The youngster that will make fame and fortune for his owner is a yearling by Fonso, out of Daisy Rose. Since last Saturday night's heavy rain the track has dried out and is now lightning fast. Mr. Patterson gave his Fonso colt and one by Bramble a workout. They were sent three furlongs, and although the colt by Fonso was pulling to the Bramble colt all down the stretch, the distance was covered in about 0:36. Several trainers held their watches on the pair, and they all agreed that had the Fonso yearling been ridden all the way he would have made a new track record for the distance at Montgomery Park. Two years ago when Howland was in his two-year-old form, along in March of 1897, one bright day Charley Patterson sent him to work a brisk quarter. The time was 0:22½, and although the colored boy who rode him tried to pull him up, Howland went to the half in a fraction better than 0:48. In that same year, and in a stall next to Howland, was Hamburg, who in his work at the track here always held the Hindoo colt safe. Mr. Patterson does not hesitate to say that his Fonso yearling is the fastest youngster he ever handled, Hamburg not excepted.

JOHN O'LEARY, Patrick Sullivan and Peter Hentz, innkeepers in North Bergen, N. J., have made an application to the owners of the Guttenberg race track for a lease of the property. They say that they can operate the race track legally provided they do not permit bookmaking. It is said that a number of pool men and bookmakers are interested in the scheme and that if the plans are carried out there will be racing on the track next March. One of the projectors said that it was the intention to put up purses, and if the authorities interfere a fight will be made against them in the courts. The racing will not be conducted during the winter. The track was purchased recently at a receiver's sale by Dennis McLaughlin and John Mullins, of Jersey City, for $125 000. McLaughlin is one of the "Big Four" who were the original owners. Mullins admitted that negotiations were pending for the lease of the track, but said that he and his partner had not yet secured title to the property. His idea was that the prospective lessees intended to convert the place into a pleasure ground and that there would be only occasional horse races. The other attractions would be baseball games and bicycle races.—New York Sun.

ATTENTION is called to the fact that no horse has more than three performers with trotting records of 2:10 or better and that among these Chimes is the ranking sire, the average of his trio being the fastest.

MANY of the recent arrivals from the East, who are interested in track affairs, have already discovered the advantages to be derived by patronage of the Sutter St. Hammam.

THE Whirl of the Town, one of the stars of the high-stepping brigade at the recent Horse Show at Madison Square Garden, is by Kilbock Tom.

A REPORT is going the rounds that the champion two-year old pacer, Ecstasy, recently trotted a half in 1.07. The correct figure is said to be 1:20.

JAMES A. MURPHY says that he expects to attend the harness races another season, but he will not race any horses.

OCCIDENT STAKE OF 1901
TROTTING STAKE FOR FOALS OF 1898

To be trotted at the California State Fair of 1901. ENTRIES TO CLOSE JANUARY 2, 1899, with Edwin F. Smith, secretary at the office in Sacramento. One hundred dollars entrance, of which $10 MUST ACCOMPANY NOMINATION; $15 to be paid January 1, 1900, $25 to be paid January 1, 1901, and $50 thirty days before the race. The Occident Cup, of the value of $100, to be added by the Society. Mile heats, three in five, to harness. First colt to receive Cup and six-tenths; second colt, three-tenths; and third colt one-tenth of the stakes. Five to enter, three to start, otherwise N. T. A. rules to govern.

Nominators are not held to full amount of entrance in case colt goes wrong; only for full payments made, which relieves you from further responsibility and declares entry out.

This stake is growing in value each year. In 1898 it was worth $2,525.

REMEMBER THE DATE OF CLOSING IS JANUARY 2, 1899

Saddle Notes.

GOVERNOR SHEEHAN broke down in his race after leading to the half-mile pole.

LENA was said to have cut Myth down on the backstretch but Kittleman's horse showed no signs of lameness when returning to weigh out.

BRITOMARTIS, the filly by imported Inverness, in Prince Ponsitowski's string, was so badly injured last Saturday that she had to be destroyed.

MRS. HENRY WALSH, widow of the veteran trainer, died in this city Thursday last, aged about sixty five years. She was the guardian of Joe Piggott, the jockey.

BARNEY SCHREIBER has at last succeeded in winning a race; after a long series of seconds and thirds Sweet William finally broke the string of bad luck by winning the last race Tuesday.

THE three-year-old colt Field Lark, by Goldfinch—imp. Musical Gem, which Mr. G. Butler of New York recently purchased from Mr. Hunn, died of pneumonia last week at Morris Park.

A DISPATCH from Milwaukee says an effort to repeal the law making pool selling illegal in Washington will be made during the coming session of the Legislature, and the prospects are the plans will be successful.

RED GLENN'S win at a mile and a quarter was a surprise to those who thought he did not like the distance; the old fellow's win was a most impressive one, as he made the pace throughout and finished with plenty left.

THE Arkansas Jockey Club, of which Col. S. M. Appersou is president, will give a six-day race meeting at Little Rock, Ark., beginning March 30th and ending April 5th. A list of the stakes will shortly be announced.

IT is not generally known that one of the biggest plunge made by Tod Sloan last season was on Tom Collins in the last race Tod rode in this country; he was beaten by Teo Spot a hundred to one chance ridden by Moody.

SAM DOGGETT, the jockey, has purchased a fast pacer. He bid $425 for the sidewheeler Clans Forrester, 2:1¼, at the Hedges, Seaman sale in New York last week, and proposes to get into the swim on the Speedway this winter.

CHARLIE PATTERSON, of Lexington, Ky., is very proud of his yearling Hanover—Workmate colt, which he purchased of Applegate & McMeekin last fall for $4 000. Mr. Patterson says he will train the colt, and if he shows well he will be prepared for the English Derby.

COL. W. R. LEICHER, formerly secretary of the Cincinnati Jockey Club, has taken charge of the stables of H. L. Frank, of Montana, and will prepare them at Oakley for next season's campaign. Among the best known performers in the Frank string are Senator Bland and Bitter Root.

TOD SLOAN is at West Baden, Ind., with his friend Charley Dwyer, son of the turfman, and Eddie Bald, the cyclist. Sloan will spend Christmas at his home in Kokomo, Ind. He positively will not race in America this season, but intends to enjoy life. He will come to California within a short time.

THE owner of Lena had a stormy interview with Charlie Thorpe in the betting ring Thursday; much harsh language was exchanged and blows were nearly resorted to. It was said that Thorpe has been indulging too freely in the flowing bowl of late and has been in no condition to ride on several occasions.

THE horse Sevoy which ran in the fifth race at Ingleside Wednesday was incorrectly named and described on the programme In the Stud Book he is registered as Syrlin, by St. Saviour—Kassie. On the programme he appeared as Savoy, by St. Saviour—Cassie; had he won there would have been good grounds for protesting the payment of the purse.

IT is rumored in Anaconda that the race track and buildings thereon must give way to dwellings to be erected on the property. It is said that a race course is to be built at Gregson Springs, which is between Anaconda and Butte, and that the summer racing season will be held on the new track, trains being run from both cities.

THE Breeders' Mutual Benefit Association is preparing to purchase worthless broodmares at the spring sales in all parts of the country. Mr. O. H. Chenault, of Lincoln, said recently: "We will buy mares wherever they are offered for sale. The mares are rather hard to buy privately, but we may conclude to advertise for them and purchase in this way also."

THE morning papers which last week devoted several stickfuls of matter to the description of the fine raiment and sleek appearance of a couple of touts, lately arrived from the East, Thursday lost an opportunity for an another equally important item of news. Pretty Willie made his first appearance of the season in the ring and looked to be fairly prosperous.

THE Christmas Handicap, to be run at New Orleans, Dec. 24th, is for all ages, at one mile, and has 79 entries, embracing a lot of real good ones, in the lot being Macy, Timemaker, Cathedral, Handsel, Sailor King, Kenmore Queen, Peat, Boanerges, What Next, Simon W., Great Bend, Belle of Memphis, Guida Rock, Dr. Sheppard, Banova, Hittick, Forhush, Diggs, Laureate.

NIHILIST, a son of Glorious, won a hurdle race at Flemington, Australia, recently, carrying 194 pounds, the distance being two miles, and the time 3:58¾.

THE racing at the outlaw track in West Virginia does not rise to the dignity of respectability. The purses are only $30 and the two books that lay odds are simply in the game with the horse owners for the purpose of making a few dollars out of the public.

JOCKEY COMBS, who cultivates an unruly temper, allowed it to get the better of his prudence a few days ago, and let fly with a pistol shot at ex-Jockey Al Isom. Two or three years ago the latter wasn't larger than a snow bird, but now he is a Jumbo, still Combs missed the mark. However, he has been turned over to the courts and pending action suspended from the privilege of riding at New Orleans.

EVERY indication points to the Memphis meeting next spring being the very best in that Club's brilliant history. The stakes which close on January 2d are announced in another column, and include not only a large number which will be run at the meeting next spring, but the Derby and Oaks of 1900 (for foals of 1897). Every turfman and owner of a good yearling should not fail to study the attractive conditions offered.

LAST week imp. Cinderella, owned by Dr. Neet, of Versailles, Ky., slipped a brown colt, by Hindoo. This is the first time in her stud career that this remarkable broodmare has slipped, missed or failed to raise a sound colt and this year when she foaled a filly by Spendthrift was the first time she failed to produce a stud colt. She is the dam of Foreigner, Ferrier, Handsome, Hastings, Plaudit and Glenheim. Dr. Neet states that she will be bred back to Hindoo.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer says: "The Cincinnati Jockey Club has not yet decided how many stakes will be opened for the spring meeting, but a sufficient number will be hung up to bring a large number of good horses to this city for racing next season. The spring meeting will be of fifteen days' duration, according to present plans." The Directors of the Cincinnati Jockey Club have decided to levy an assessment on the stockholders in order to raise enough money to pay outstanding debts.

"TOM" HEALEY, who purchased Jockey McCue's apprentice license from "Jim" Dillon for $1,250, has sent the boy to school for the winter months. McCue will have a full three months' tuition before he again takes to the saddle. "He is a very bright boy," said Healey, "and he ought to learn a good deal even in that time." McCue was selling papers a few years ago at the Broadway ferry, Williamsburg. Healey, by the way, won fifty-six races with the horses attached to his stable this year.—Horse Fancier.

IN handicaps and weight for age races during the coming season, three-year-olds, it is to be hoped, will be much in evidence in the entry lists, as otherwise some of our most important events will command but little interest, the four-year-olds and upwards which have any class to them being so very poor in number. Owners of fair three-year-olds would do well to enter liberally in handicaps and weight for age races, as the chances for the three-year-olds showing prominently in these events were never so good.

ACCORDING to the Picayune, Mr. A. H. Morris, who is now in New Orleans, has made the statement that both Manuel and Kentucky Colonel will be prepared for the Cresent City Derby and started if fit and well. This lends color to the statement made some time ago that these colts were bought by Messrs. A. H. & D. H. Morris with a view to an extensive campaign on the Western tracks where they are heavily engaged. They are not in the $7,000 Tennessee Derby, however, but their more recently purchased Glenheim ie.

MR. CALDWELL did not give Ocorona half a chance in the mile race; the filly was turned the wrong way and there was no excuse for raising the barrier. The start in the last race was also of the wild and wooly order, nothing but the favorite getting away. Both of these starts were of the worst possible description and the veriest novice at the business would not have dispatched the fields on such terms. That errors should at times occur is unavoidable, but where such glaring proofs of thorough incompetency are shown, no excuses can be offered,

"TOUCHSTONE, greatest of all thoroughbred stallions, had a club foot, and was allowed to roam about the Duke of Westminster's paddocks, no attempt being made to train him. The Duke became suddenly ill and a messenger was dispatched in haste some distance over muddy roads for a doctor. It happened in the hurry and excitement Touchstone was saddled for the journey, and he acquitted himself so well that the stud groom burst into the sick chamber and informed his master that 'the little brown horse' was the best horse on the place. Touchstone was trained, became a great racer and a still greater sire of racers."

THE racing records have not been equaled or beaten the past season, except in a very few instances. Mary Black, 3, by imp. Islington, dam Songstress, with 93 lbs., at Washington Park, Chicago, tied the three-quarter record on a circular track in 1:12¼ Macy, 4, 107 lbs., by Hindoo, dam Alga, equaled the mile and twenty yards record at Washington Park in 1:40. Floronso, 3, by Fonso, dam Florence E, 93 lbs., at Washington Park won one mile and fifty yards in 1:42½, and Boanerges, 4, by Spendthrift, dam imp. Landrinio, 101 lbs., at Washington made a mile and three sixteenths record in 1:58¼ Algol, 4, by imp. Top Gallant, dam Equality, by Bend Or., 107 lbs., and David Tenny, 4, by Tenny, dam Mamie B., 100 lbs., at Washington Park, Chicago, both ran a mile and a quarter in 2:04½, a new record for a circular track. The mile and a half mark was cut down to 2:30½ at Washington Park by Goodrich, 3, by Patron, dam Edith Gray carrying 102 and Judge Denny, 5, by Fonso, dam Belle of Nantura, by Jils Johnson, 105 lbs., at Oakland, Cal., placed the two mile record at 3:26½ —Turf, Field and Farm.

ONE of the local tipsters at the track sent a telegram to a subscriber yesterday on Dollie Wiethoff Ha was rooting hard for Dollie while she was sailing along in front, and was shaking hands with himself after the filly had won, and was promising himself suits of clothes and diamonds galore. His anticipations received a rude shock, however, a few minutes after the race, when one of the messenger boys tackled him for sixty cents, the telegram having been returned, with the information that the party to whom the message was sent had died. Now the poor tout is lamenting the fact that the first time he was able to dig up a live one at the meeting he fell to a dead one.—New Orleans Picayune.

PRESIDENT ANDROUS, of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, will return to Los Angeles in a couple of days to attend to his Federal duties. "It is impossible for me to be here all the time," said he. "As I am in the service of the Government at my place I will devote most of my time to it. From all indications we are going to have a hugely successful season. Better horses are coming out all the time, and this rain alone will do racing good. People have been afraid to spend money for fear that we might have another dry season and the times would be awful. Now that this uneasiness has been removed, all kinds of enterprises will profit. Ingleside has started off well and I look for a good season."

APPLEGATE & MCMEEKIN, Oakwood Stud, Lexington Kentucky, have just purchased of Col. Milton Young, of McGrathiana, a half interest in the stallion St. Florian. St. Florian was foaled in 1890 and is by St. Blaise, out of Feuflollet. He was raced by A. H. & D. H. Morris until he was years old, when he was retired. As a two-year-old he defeated His Highness twice, the last time in the Great American Stakes. As a three-year-old St. Florian made six starts and won five races, beating Lamplighter in the Ft. Hamilton Handicap at a mile and an eighth, with 122 pounds up, while Lamplighter carried but 114. The time was 1:54½. In the Bowling Brook Handicap he defeated Locohatchee, who carried 118 pounds to St. Florian's 120. He won three races as a four year-old. St. Florian will be retained as a private stallion by Col. Young and Applegate & McMeekin.

EXCESSIVE two-year-old racing is admitted, generally, to be in urgent need of curtailment, and there can be no doubt but that if, in the place of some of the two-year-old stakes, events exclusively for fillies and mares of all ages were substituted, not only an improvement in the sport would result, but the innovation would be a great boom for the breeding interests as well. It would increase the market value of fillies, which, under the present conditions, are hardly saleable as yearlings. A series of races exclosively for spayed fillies (spaylings), galdings and spaylings, would encourage the use of the knife and test the usefullness of spaylings as compared with geldings. Many advantages to racing and breeding would result from the policy above outlined, and it is to be hoped racing associations in making up their programmes will give the subject due consideration.—Turf, Field and Farm.

WILLIAM LAKELAND, the well-known trainer, is a practical man who knows all the tricks of the trade, and his opinion is therefore worth quoting In regard to shipping horses to race in England, he thinks that in case of a horse being engaged in any of the big fall events in England there would be ample time to ship him after he had demonstrated at home that he was of the calibre to have a chance with the best in England at weight for age. Like Wishard and other horsemen, he would not hesitate to ship from New York in the month of July or early in August to meet engagements in England in say six weeks from the time of leaving New York. Of course in this case he would prefer going over on a six day steamer, but even if a day or two longer, he sees no reason why a horse in racing fettle when shipped should not run up to his form in England inside of six weeks, and as Wishard is of the same opinion, the experiment is certainly worth trying, as in the case of three-year-olds having valuable engagements in this country and proving to be the best of their year, there would not only be less expense and uncertainty than in the shipping of a score of yearlings, but the international interest would be ever so much greater; and should the American candidate be heralded the winner of the $50,000 Eclipse Stakes, run for at Sandown Park, or of the Princess of Wales, of the same value, run for at Newmarket, inside of a month or so after being returned a winner in this country, the prestige to both owner and trainer would be immense.

THE SPLAN—NEWGASS SALE.

Trotting Bred Horses Brought Good Prices at Chicago This Month.

The Splan Newgass sale which opened at Chicago, December 12th and continued for one week was a success. Good horses brought fair prices in every instance. Five hundred horses were offered and sold which was a very large percentage of the animals catalogued. Their next sale will take place commencing February 20th, and already they have consignments enough to guarantee a successful sale. It is to be hoped they will get a few car loads from California and the firm wishes it made plain that they desire good useful horses with or without records. Old worn-out stock they will not accept, nor do they want any young unbroken things. Stallions with coach horse style, manners and speed are sought after in the Chicago market at first-class prices; Road horses for gentlemen's use are also in demand. Good prospects for trotting purposes will bring top prices. Those having animals of the above description, can be assured of fair and honest treatment if they send them to Splan & Newgass and will in all probability get satisfactory prices. The following are the horses that brought $300 or over at the recent sale:

Lady Keating.

In the publication in these columns last week of a letter from Mrs. E. W. Callendine, of Sacramento, claiming the name of Lady Keating for a filly by Stam B., 2:11¼, out of Abbie Woodnut, the dam of Abdine, 2:17½, and Diewood, 2:14¼, an error occurred which made the item read that Lady Keating was Abdine's third foal. It should have stated that Lady Keating is Abbie Woodnut's third foal and the mare is due to foal to Diablo, 2:09¼, again next spring. Lady Keating is a natural trotter and knows nothing of the pacing gait. She will be entered in all the stakes that are open to the foals of 1898 in California.

Foreigners Want Coach Horses.

At the Splan-Newgass sale recently held in Chicago, the number of interested and critical foreigners present was a significant feature to the American breeders. For the most part they were occupied with watching the coach horses, for without exception these gentlemen from abroad are in this country to replenish the European markets drained by the demand on the other side for good carriage horses that embrace style with perfect action. Gaston Roy of Paris, who has done much to introduce the American coach horse abroad, attended the sale and Baron Houzst de Boubers of Lille, France was another foreign buyer of coach horses present. The Baron declares that the American coach horse has more speed than any animal of the same kind in the world, and he makes a specialty of buying big-boned animals with plenty of stamina and almost any color save light bay or light sorrel. These he will not touch at any price. The Baron remarked that good coach horses are as dear in the United States as they are in France.

The Hackney Horse.

The name Hackney is of French origin. In times gone by, some horses used for some special purpose were known in France as haquet, haquenee, the latter being a lady's saddle horse and corresponding to what was called in England the nag, pad, or lady's horse; and when the Normans came to England they applied the name of their own French haquenee to the nag or pad; one became synonymous of the other, says an exchange.

But what is considered a perfect Hackney to-day is far from the original haquenee or nag; crossing and improvements in breeding have changed the character of his predecessors, of his godfather, and if we can believe the description that Prof. A. Reul gives in the Annales de Belgique, the true Hackney of to-day possesses very little of the character of the French haquenee or of the true English nag. Indeed, according to Prof. Reul, the following is the character of a perfect hackney:

"Not of large size, those of 15 hands high are not rare; its head must be small, short, well carried, with kind and energetic features; the forehead wide, the face rather narrow, but in proportion to the size of the nasal cavities; the eye large, the ear short and active; the neck of average length, with well developed muscles, high above and slightly arching. The back straight, well muscled, especially to the loins and croup. The withers high, clean and bony; shoulder long and in good direction; the arm and leg of good length in proportion with the canon bones, the muscles of the thigh and croup well developed. All the articulations must be wide, well developed and supple in proportion with their resisting power to the violent efforts they must support."

In conclusion of this description, Prof. Reul says:

"Whatever may be the anatomical beauty of the Hackney, its great value remains in the brilliancy of its gait. he must know how to handle his legs (lever la patte) and carry them in all their extension; he must, so to speak, trot in the air; his most curious aptitude is to go faster trotting than galloping. He has two excellent gaits, walking and trotting; galloping is hard to him, and he only takes it under pressure, and when he has lost control of himself."

Successful Horsemen.

Many horsemen wonder at the success attained by others in this calling. It is easy to explain. Simply by keeping abreast of the times. No stable is complete without a bottle of Quinn's Ointment, which is a cure for curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and bunches. Ask your druggist for it and if he does not keep it send to W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y. Price, $1.50; smaller size, 50cts.

Recent Board of Review Rulings.

At the recent meeting of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association, held in New York, the Board laid down a general rule, which can be studied with profit by every trainer and driver who expects to enter a horse in a harness race hereafter. This was an appeal from the ruling of the judges in a race at Goshen last season, wherein E. H. Harrimen's mare Rival broke a rein at the quarter pole and ran from there to the wire, finishing second She was set back to last place, but this did not satisfy E. S. Wells, the Jersey City horseman, who owns Cherrycroft, and he protested the ruling, asserting that Rival should have been distanced. The board took this view of the matter, announcing in its decision the broad general rule that every party to a race is responsible for the equipment of his horse and that where any part of the rigging gives way the horse must take the consequences, and that such a breakdown will not excuse a running break like that of Rival.

Another notable decision was that in which the Board sustained a ruling of the judges at Tunkhannock, Pa, who had ruled out as dangerous a hoppled pacer that fell twice in scoring. The owner appealed, but his contention was not sustained.

W. T. Woodard a Bankrupt.

Every horse breeder will regret to learn that W. T. Woodard, of the firm of Woodard & Shanklin, has gone into bankruptcy, having lost in real estate and on the running turf what he made in the auction business. Mr. Woodard is the widely known combination horse sale man, who took the business up shortly after it was started by the late Captain Phil Kidd. His first partner was Wiley Brasfield. Shelby Herbison succeeded him as Woodard's partner, and later Elliott W. Shanklin paid Woodard $10,000 for a half interest in the business, Herbison having retired. After losing much money in boom towns the elder Woodard staked his son on the running turf. At first he had success, but during recent years luck seemed to run against the Woodards, and they have lost heavily. The creditors are chiefly banks in Lexington and elsewhere, which have loaned the elder Woodard money from time to time. Woodard has made more than $250,000 in the combination-sale business during the past twelve years.

Horses at Oaklawn Farm.

The demand for fine coach, carriage and driving horses remains very keen in spite of the dull market for all other sorts of horses, speed winners excepted, at Chicago and all the other large centers of distribution. The elegant, sixteen hand actor of fine quality finds a buyer very quickly at a most remunerative price, no matter what may be the conditions affecting the other sorts offered during the day. Experience has proven that the French Coach stallion has the ability to transmit the qualities that sell for "good money" when he is mated with the native mare of trotting blood, and this coming spring this cross should be taken advantage of to the fullest extent. Those who are contemplating the purchase of a Coach horse should not fail to look over the collection of animals of the French Coach breed now at Oaklawn Farm, Wayne, Ill., the property of M. W. Dunham. Mr. Dunham has many splendid stallions and mares for sale. These stallions are all hard colors—bays, browns, dark chestnuts, and only a very few of the latter, the majority of those he has for sale being of the richest shades of bay and seal brown. He has imported horses and home bred horses of all ages, and in the case of the latter, of course, purchasers may see sire and dam, which is no unimportant point. Perfection, the Grand Challenge cup winner at the head of the stud, is a horse of extraordinary individual excellence, and his show yard record is not excelled. He breeds remarkably closely after himself and the demand for his sons and daughters has always been keen. Mr. Dunham has at this time some grand young stallions, fit for service, by the old horse, that will win their way wherever placed. They have such extraordinary quality, such beauty of outline and such fine action that they have no superiors as a family. These colts beget just the type of horse that is selling just now to the best advantage. The Oaklawn stud of Percherons is in every way equal to the stud of French Coachers. There are now nearly four hundred stallions and mares to select from at Oaklawn. Write for catalogue, stating which you are interested in.

Sulky Notes.

BOSWELL JR., 2:19, hes gone to Hawaii, his native land.

A TROTTING track for San Francisco is one of the prospects for 1898.

ED LAFFERTY will have a string of harness horses out next spring.

THE Louisville Driving Association will soon open a rich futurity stake.

THERE are over a hundred 2:20 horses owned and driven in San Francisco.

THE Splan-Newgass sale averaged $350 for five hundred head of harness horses.

SPLAN believes in clipping horses early in spring that are intended for track work.

JAMES SULLIVAN will probebly begin training his horses at Pleasanton next month.

MONROE SALISBURY has been spending the most of his time at Pleasanton recently.

NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS was offered for Little Thoroe, 2:09¼, last week and refused.

IF you are a fair director, what are you doing toward having a fair held in your district in 1899.

ROAD horses handled and for sale. Orders taken. Address D. R. Misner, 1309 Fulton street, city. *

THE Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association has selected October 3d to 14th as the date for its 1899 meeting.

SOME of those sleepy districts may find that it pays to be up and awake when the appropriations are being passed.

ELECTRITE, son of Electioneer, put five new ones in the list in 1898, giving him 33 standerd performers at ten years of age.

BEN CHABOYA has returned from New York and will soon be working a lot of youngsters on the Oakwood Park Stock Farm.

A RECENTLY compiled table shows that during the 1898 season nearly 750 entered the 2:20 list. Verily, 2:20 speed is getting common.

SEVERAL parties have been talking of leasing the Petaluma track as it is more than probable that a meeting will be held there next year.

THE McKinney three-year-old that Thos. Keating expects to take over the mountains next year, is out of Grace Kaiser, by Kaiser, the dam of McZeus, 2:13.

THE mare, Roblett, by Robin, dam Eveline, by Nutwood, is being worked at the Santa Rosa track and is said by the horsemen there to be a great prospect.

FOURTEEN colts and fillies by James Madison, Direct and Diablo, owned at the Merriwa Stock Farm, Pleasanton, are to be put in training soon after the New Year opens.

AN effort will be made next year at the Breeders' meeting, Readville, Mass, to have New England breeders make an exhibit, and an open air horse show is also talked of.

VET TRYON of Sacramento is training a three-year-old son of Diablo, 2:09¼. A few days ago this colt worked a full mile in 2:13½,and Vet thinks he will be as fast as Anaconda.

HARRY AGNEW shipped several weanlings and yearlings to Hawaii last week and the ship owners could hardly believe but they were all two-year-olds. They grow some here in California.

W. E. SPIER has purchased Lady Alcy 2:13½, by Alcyone, and will breed her to Directum. Directum will have great opportunities this year as Mr. Spier is purchasing a grand lot of mares to bred to him.

MAJOR RATHBONE has sold Nick Russell, the handsome trotter he purchased a few weeks ago. This is a very handsome and fast horse, but the Major thought him a little too heavy for fast driving over the hard roads.

A CAR loaded with ten tons of extra fine hay reached Pleasanton last week, consigned to James Thompson, trainer of Little Thorne, 2:09½, and others, so that driver is now expected to arrive in champion town any day.

MR. DEVEREAUX, the new owner of John A. McKerron 2:12½, was offered $4,000 for the son of Nutwood Wilkes recently by a gentleman in New York. The colt is absolutely sound, and is getting back into fine condition.

BEN KENNEY, who for the past two years has been driving for Marcus Daly, has been employed by Henry Schmulbach, of Wheeling, W. Va., for next season. Ben developed Nancy Hanks, and is one of the most successful trainers and drivers.

ANY person wanting a first-class carriage team, 16.2 hands high, mahogany bays, will weigh together 2550 pounds, high headed and as handsome a pair as can be found in the country, can hear more about them by applying at this office.

IT is said there will be seven entries for the Occident Stake for 1901 from Santa Rosa alone. The meeting given there this summer caused a revival in the horse breeding interests of the county that would not have been aroused in any other manner.

ANTONIO TERRY, the Cuban millionaire and husband of Sybil Sanderson, the California prima donna, died recently at Nice, France. Mr. Terry was a great admirer and patron of the American trotter and some years ago founded a large breeding stud in France.

NUTWOOD DRIVING PARK, Dubuque, I., claims August 22 to 28 for its dates next year. For the twenty-two races $65 000 in stakes and purses will be hung up. There will be five $5,000 purses—two free-for-alls, 2:24 trot, 2:15 pace and 2:07 pace. The other purses will range from $500 to $2,500.

THE annual meeting of the St. Louis Fair Grounds association resulted in the re-election of Robert Aull, president; Joseph A. Murphy, secretary, and William Mockler, treasurer. The retention of Mr. Aull as president insures one week or ten days' trotting next fall, regarding which there was a division among the shareholders.

JOHN JOHNSON, of Buffalo, was the purchaser of that good race horse, Hans McGregor. 2:11¼, at the recent New York sale. He also bought the mare Dotlet, sister to Alta R., by Patchen Wilkes. If not sold before spring, Hans McGregor will be campeigned down the grand circuit again. He will be a great horse in the 2:12 class, having shown a mile in about 2:07.

MANNERS sell for as much or more than any other quality. If any one doubts this, let him look around and discover the difference in values of high class horses warranted quiet in all harness and under saddle and, say, "suitable for an elderly gentleman to ride," and horses that may be warranted sound and all right. The extra measure of "manners" will make quite a difference in the price.

NELSON, 2:09, the fastest trotter ever bred in Maine, has also proved the most successful sire that ever stood in that hay and lumber producing State. He is now credited with 39 in the 2:30 list, 23 of which are trotters. Wilkes, a stable companion of Nelson, and sired by Alcyone, 2:27, has sired a greater number of 2:30 performers than any other stallion except Nelson, 2:09, that ever stood in Maine.

AT the Hedges, Ssaman & Co.'s sale in New York, December 14th, the stallion Arthur L., 2:15, six years old, by Direct, dam Nelly, by George M. Patchen, Jr., bred and owned by Louis Schefler of Oakland, was sold to M. Bauer of New York city for $775. Toots, by Monbars, 2:11¾, out of the dam of Arthur L., also bred and raised by Mr. Schaffer, was sold at the same time to Frank Adams of Fairmount, New York, for $375.

JAMES A. MURPHY, the former owner of Star Pointer, told his trainer, Dave McClary, that he would sell him the great horse for any sum he was willing to bid on him at the sale and would take his note for the money. McClary did not feel able to assume such a heavy responsibility as that, however, and declined the kind offer with tears in his eyes. When he arranged with Mr. White, the new owner, to stay with Pointer, he was happy again.

WHEN the winning percentages of race drivers was being discussed in Madison Square Garden, lately, Ben Walker remarked: "Well, I have had some on and off seasons, but the last one was on, I guess, for I made nineteen starts with Dan Q, B. B., Prince Alert and Percy, and got seventeen first moneys and two seconds I was also presented with a medal at Malone, N. Y., for having driven the fastest three heats over a half mile track, 2:10½, 2:08¾ and 2:08¼."

COL. JOHN E. THAYER, owner of Maplehurst Farm, Lancaster, Mass, has sold to a breeder in Kentucky the yearling colt Baron Rudolph, by Baron Wilkes, out of Capella, by Stemhoul, 2:07½, second dam Fannie Wise, by Nutwood, 2:18¾; third dam Colegrove Mare, by Speculation. The colt is engaged in the Kentucky Futurity of 1900, the New England Breeders' Matron Stake to be trotted in 1900, and the New England Breeders' Stallion Produce Stake, to be trotted in 1899.

CAPT. HACKETT, the bay Steinway gelding owned by Ed Armstrong has probably started in as many races as any horse without a record. Ed says he would "pace your eye out" in his work and then he would hold him out for a good thing later on, but when the race came off "the horse would not be right or they would pace in 2:10, and there you are." Andy McDowell always insisted that if Capt. Hackett were allowed to go at his original gait, the trot, he would be another Azote. There are few handsomer horses and few better on the road.

GUS L. MACEY, the well known trainer and driver, of Versailles, Ky., who forsook the trotters a few years ago and bought a stable of thoroughbred racers, will dispose of the latter and return to the trotting horse business the first of the year. Mr. Macey has bought from J. M. Johnson, the Lawrenceburg, Ky, banker, the five-year-old bay gelding Robert J. 2:16½, public trial 2:11¼, by Chichester, dam a Peavine mare, and has been promised some of the best horses in the country to campaign next season.

"WHAT gray horse is that James Chesley is driving?" said one road driver to another on the speed track in Golden Gate Park one day this week. "Don't you know that fellow? Well, just try to pass him and you'll find out a little something about his speed. That's Waldo J., 2:09, the gray ghost of Santa Paula. Mr. Chesley got him a few days ago and has an option on him, but I don't know the price. Say, when he strikes some of those fellows who are always talking about driving a quarter in 30 seconds, they'll think it's only a gray streak of dawn they're looking at."

GEORGE L. GOULDING, proprietor of the Denver, Col, horse market, says that the coming year will witness a great revival in the horse-raising industry in Colorado, as the demand for horses has not been so heavy in the past five years. Mr. Goulding further stated that he would advise horse breeders to raise heavy draft and business horses, ranging from 1 000 to 1,700 pounds. "If the breeder will give his attention to raising them properly," continued he, "instead of letting them grow up uncared for, he will find a good market in the next few years."

C. RODRIGUEZ has quite a string of trotters and pacers at the Salines track. This track is first-class for winter training, the soil being well adapted to track purposes, and permitting driving over soon after a shower. Mr. H. M. Rider's fast pacing stallion, Alta, by a son of Altamont, is in Mr. Rodriguez's string, also Valentine Boodle, a son of Boodle, 2:12½ and a mare by Carr's Mambrino. This colt trotted to a record of 2:30 in his two-year-old form. He is owned by Peter Jessen of Watsonville. Mr. Jessen also owns a gelding called Sleepy Charley that is a trotter of some merit. He is matched against a mare belonging to Driscoll brothers of Salinas for $150 a side, the race to come off at Salinas New Year's day.

FRANK WALKER, the noted starter of trotting races, says in regard to the two in three plan: I think it is the only solution to the question of the laying up of heats as well as to the best means to increase public patronage. The general adoption of the two in three heat races will not only prove of more interest to the public; but it is the best thing that could happen for the horses. It does not take a great while for a driver to find out a horse these days at the old three in five heat system. They are going too fast for that sort of thing nowadays, and a horse is used up in very short order. With the shorter races, the horses, while going fewer miles, can enter more races and not be half as heavily used. I would like to see every track in the country adopt the plan."

WHEN the nominations for the Kentucky Futurity closed last spring it was found that 702 mares had been named for the great event. The second payment fell due on December 1, and 602 colts, or 85 per cent. of the original nominations, were paid upon. This is the largest per cent. of second payments ever known in the Futurity, and is an indication of the general good feeling among horsemen and the appreciation in which this great stake is held by the breeders This is remarkable when the scarcity of foals is considered, and bespeaks great success for the next stake, which has been ordered increased to $20,000. The proposed increase of the value of the stake has no bearing, however, upon the large number of second payments, as the payments had been made before the increase was announced.

DR. LEEK, 2:11¼, by Sidney, is the subject of a front page picture in The Horseman of December 13th. He was one of Sidney's leading representatives on the turf the past season. He began the 1898 campaign with a record of 2:15½, which he took in 1897, at Woodland, California, September 4th. He trotted many meritorious races and after lowering his record to 2:11¼, stamped himself a sure candidate for 2:10 honors if he only keeps right. Sired by Sidney, 2:19¾, Dr. Leek is well bred on his dam's side. His dam is Miss Roy, dam of Sans Souci, 2:28¼, by Buccaneer, and his grandam, Ella Roy, produced Allan Roy, 2:17, and others in the speed lists. Dr. Leek is a strongly made chestnut gelding, and there is little question that if he has no bad luck he will next year increase his great sire's 2:10 list.

DAME FORTUNE is a fickle old girl and the following, taken from a Hartford, Conn., exchange, is a sample of her work: When the buyers for the Germen market were here during the summer they looked over Marston C., with a view to buying. Fred Hyde showed the horse on Vine street, taking one of the Germens in with him. Marston C. slipped along over the soft stretch of mud so fast that the visitor called a halt. The buyer and seller were a little apart on the price and the sale was not made. The horse was sold at the Fasig sale for $350 Friday Mr. Donahue received a letter from the foreigner intimating that he would meet him half way on the difference, which would have netted the owner nearly $1,000 more than he received at auction, and he generously handed the letter to the new owner." Marston C is a bay son of Piedmont and Maiden, 2:23, by Electioneer; grandam May Queen, by Norman, dam of May King, 2:20, and was foaled 1891. His record is 2:19¾.

As breeding progresses and horses continue to improve, the time must come when trotters will have as much speed for one mile at three years as they ever will; such is bound to be the natural course of events, says the Stock Farm. To one who is a believer in heredity and has studied the science of breeding, it must be apparent that in twenty-five years a comperison of the Stud Book or Register of then and now will show how crude has been the work of to-day, and how blindly breeders of this century have struggled. If the half-bred horses of to-day can accomplish that which has already been done, what can be expected from animals that for ten generations come from star performers, full of the most royal trotting blood and descended from generations of animals of rare individuality? The height of perfection is still a long way off, and it will take many years to reach even an occasional example of it. The ideal trotter is still unborn, but enough has been seen to prove what can be accomplished by judicious meting of the best with the best. The change in the standard will have much to do with the improvement of the breed of trotters, while the knowledge derived from the errors of the past, and the laws of heredity closely applied, will produce a type of horse far superior to the one now called the American trotter.

IT may be well to "kill the culls" as advised, but if this practice has been followed in years past, many a trotter that gained distinction as a performer would never have been heard from, says the "Horse Breeder." Flora Temple, when young, might have been knocked in the head. It is stated that she was sold for $13 before her speed was developed. Andrew Jackson, sire of the founder of the Clay family, looked like the meanest of culls when pulled from the clay pit into which he rolled when foaled. His owner offered to give any one of his boys $1 who would kill the colt, but their mother would not allow it. Vermont Black Hawk was such an insignificant little thing when dropped that Mr. Twombly asked the advice of a neighbor as to whether he had better kill the colt or not. Mr. T. said he was ashamed to have such a little runt follow his mare. The neighbor encouraged him to let the youngster live, and assured him that he might make a horse that would some day be worth $100. The colt was spared and founded the best family of roadsters yet produced. Santa Claus (2:17½) was so small and crooked when young that the owner of his sire, Strathmore, tried to persuade the owner of the colt to kill the foal as he considered him a disgrace to his sire. Senator A (2:10) was so small and unpromising as a sire that he was sold for $20. And so on ad finitum. Before the killing operations begins, will it not be best to learn which are really the

San Francisco, Saturday, December 24, 1898.

MANY CALIFORNIA HORSE OWNERS will never be satisfied until they possess the earth and the fullness thereof, and we believe there are a few who would even then think they were not getting their just deserts unless they held mortgages on the moon and a good part of the solar system. Three months ago these owners were nearly all of the opinion that harness horses would never be worth anything and bewailed the fact that there were so few buyers in the market. If asked to set a price on their animals they generally hesitated and finally named a figure which they could hardly expect to get, but which any man who really wanted to sell would be satisfied with. Last month the Fasig sale came off in New York and a few good ones from California brought pretty fair prices—all they were worth in fact. Immediately the price of every horse in California was about doubled. Horses that had been offered for $200 (which sum the owner would have been glad to receive) were held at $400. It seemed as if every horse owner had come to the conclusion that a boom was on and the supply was not equal to the demand. We have heard of a number of sales which would have been made had the prices not been doubled to the buyers. A gentleman who has paid thousands of dollars during the past ten years for horses to drive in the Park and on the roads said in this office the other day, "The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN and Sam Gamble, the latter by selling a few horses East at a fair price, and the former by publishing the fact, have caused the horse owners to think that a boom has struck their business and it is hard to get a horse now at any reasonable price. The result is that but few sales are being made." And this is about true. There is no doubt but harness horses are worth more to-day than they were six months ago, but owners should not delude themselves with the idea that a boom has again struck the business and that the wonderful prices of ten years ago will return. No reader of these lines will in all probability live to again see a trotting-bred horse sold for $125,000. It is the general opinion of practical horsemen in all parts of the country that the champion stallion Directum was well sold for $20,000. And this is not said in disparagement of the horse that is not only the greatest trotting stallion that ever lived, but is believed to possess those qualities which will make him the greatest sire in America in a few years. There is a greater demand for than supply of the large, handsome, fast, well mannered road and carriage horse, and for the top notchers big prices can be asked, but the average horse, while wanted at reasonable, cannot be disposed of at fancy figures. There is no one in California who has greater faith in the future of the harness horse breeding industry than this journal, and our advice to owners is to be careful and not frighten off those who are willing to pay fair prices for horses by asking more than they are really worth, or more than would have been considered a good price a few months ago. A few years since a number of capitalists in this State conceived the idea of purchasing a big strip of land on the water front of one of our bay towns and erecting thereon large warehouses. The owners of the property, thinking the capitalists must have the land, put an enormous price on it, with the result that the gentlemen interested in the scheme looked elsewhere and the warehouses were built on the opposite side of the bay. Horse owners and breeders should take a lesson from this incident. The horse market shows improvement, and there are a number of purchasers in the field, but they are not willing to pay more than fair values, and attempts to make them pay more may frighten them into investing in other localities.

MR. HENRY STULL, the famous painter of horse portraits, arrived in San Francisco last Friday from New York. He intends spending the winter out here by the sunset sea where he can bask in sunshine occasionally and run no risk of freezing to death, should he get a rod or so away from a hot stove. It is two years since Mr. Stull visited California. While having no words of praise for New York as a winter resort, he speaks in the very highest terms of racing there as it is now conducted during the summer. The entry of the Hon. W. C. Whitney into the ranks of the breeders and owners of racing stables, has been a great help to the sport, and the new racing law and the Jockey Club have lifted racing to the position of a leading and fashionable diversion that is enjoyed and patronized by the wealth, culture and refinement of Gotham. Mr. Stull will spend Christmas with a sister who resides in Los Angeles and then return to San Francisco for the winter months.

JOHN S. PHIPPIN, for many years developer and driver at Palo Alto Stock Farm, leaves California shortly to take charge of the youngsters by the great producer Electrite, at the Lomo Alto Stock Farm, Dallas, Texas. Mr. Phippin came to California in his infancy, and at an early age identified himself with the horse business. Commencing at the foot of the ladder, by perseverance and attention to business, he has become recognized as one of the great colt developers. His familiarity with the family of Sprite and the characteristics of the Electioneers, will aid him materially in making speed at Lomo Alto. A thorough gentleman, modest in demeanor, honest and capable, he has the best wishes of the horsemen of California for success in far away Texas.

ULTIMUS, b h, foaled 1876, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam Zada Warren, by Black Bashaw, Jr., died Dec. 14th, at the home of his owner, Robert West, Garrard County, Ky. He was bred by Mr. M. T. Warne, Easton, Pa., who always maintained that he was the last foal by the Hero of Chester. This distinction, however, is also claimed for Hambletonian's Last, who, singularly enough, is now owned quite near the place where Ultimus died. The latter was not much of a success, never taking a record, having but three in the list, all pacers, and was never even registered as standard. —Turf, Field and Farm.

Coney Island Jockey Club.

This is an important season of the year for owners and trainers, as the entries to the various events announced by the different racing associations will shortly close.

Of the associations in the country none offers a more valuable list of events than the Coney Island Jockey Club, one of the most prominent of the metropolitan jockey clubs. The events are framed with liberal conditions and the amount of money hung up is princely in its proportions. There are seventeen events, divided as follows: Eleven for the June meeting, 1899; five for the autumn meeting, 1899, and one for the autumn meeting, 1901.

The events are announced elsewhere in the issue of The Spirit, and are as follows: For the June meeting, 1899, for three years old and upward: The Suburban, $10,000, one mile and a quarter; the Advance, $2,100 added, one mile and a three-quarters; the June Handicaps, $5,000, namely: The Coney Island, $1,500, six furlongs; the Sheepshead Bay, $1,500, one mile, and the Long Island, $2,000, one mile and a furlong. For three years old: The Swift, $1,000 added, and the Spindrift, $1,000 added, one mile and a furlong. For two years old: The Great Trial, $20,000, Futurity Course; the Double Event, $10,000; first event, five and a half furlongs, and the second event, the Futurity course; the Zephyr, $1,000 added, Futurity course; the Vernal, $1,000 five furlongs.

For the autumn meeting, 1899: The Flight, $1,250 added, for two years old and upward, seven furlongs; the September, $1,250 added, for three years olds, one mile and three furlongs; the autumn, $3,000, for two years old, Futurity course; the Flatbush, $3,000, for two years olds, seven furlongs; the Great Eastern, $5,000, Futurity course. For the autumn meeting of 1901, the Futurity, $8,750 added, Futurity course is announced.

Entries to all the above-named events close Tuesday, January 3, and should be addressed to the Clerk of the Course, Coney Island Jockey Club, northeast corner Fifth avenue and Twenty-second street, New York City.

THE contract for the one mile trotting track which William H. Clark, of New York, has decided to construct was awarded, November 29th, to Pennell & O'Hern, of Yonkers. The specifications call for a track 100 feet wide, which will be, it is said, the widest trotting track in the country, and of oval shape. The work is to be completed by May 15, 1899, at which time a firm in New York will take the course in hand and apply the top dressing, which is to be twenty-two inches deep and of imported loam.

Horse Breeding in France.

In 1898 the French government donated upward of $300,000 in purses for trotting races, while its donation to help the improvement of the thoroughbred did not quite reach half that sum. The French people argue that a good roadster or trotting horse is much more useful to the State than one that can only gallop, hence the much greater measure of assistance to the trotter. The government maintains 2,800 stallions in the national stud for public service. The fees range from ten dollars (fifty francs) down. The legal service fee for a stallion is one hundred francs ($20). If an owner charges more than that he cannot get this horse licensed to stand for public service. If a horse is not licensed, the owner cannot collect the amount of the service fee by law. Last spring licenses were withheld from several hundred stallions because their owners would not stand them at the legal fee or less. There are twenty two central stallion depots belonging to the government. From these the 2,800 stallions the State owns are distributed out around the various breeding districts during the spring and early summer and concentrated again before the beginning of winter. Once the government buys a stallion, thoroughbred, trotter or Percheron, there is no such thing as getting him away from the public ownership until he is worn out, if he proves a good breeder; if he is not a good breeder, he is never disposed of for reproductive purposes.

Racing at Bloomfield.

There were races at Bloomfield, Sonoma county, on Saturday last, which attracted many horsemen and others interested to that town. The weather was good and the track was in first-class condition. The meet was under the auspices of the Bloomfield Driving Club.

In the first race, which was a three-quarter of mile dash, there were two starters, Dennis and Suffrage. The former won quite handily; time, 1:19¾. Suffrage was a little short in her training, having been galloped but a few days prior to her race.

The second race, a half-mile dash, which was for horses owned in Analy and Bodega townships, was an interesting event. The starters were Mollie Mack, Frank D. and Aurora. Mollie Mack won, with Frank D. second; time, 54 seconds.

The third event was a three-eighths mile dash for runners, and was won by Dewey, a son of Daly, of the Rosedale Stock Farm; time, 40 seconds.

The fourth race was a trotting event, mile and repeat, in which Black Hawk secured first place. Minnie and Wonder also entered.

Aurora won the three-eighths mile match race. Mollie Mack was the other entry.

Beo Scoville of Santa Rosa distinguished himself at the meeting, winning two first and one second in three events.

Several of the horses participating in the meet are entered in the races at Recreation grounds, Santa Rosa, on Christmas Day. A great deal of interest is being taken in this meet.

The races at Bloomfield were a great success, and the people of that district are pleased to note a revival of interest in turf matters.—Santa Rosa Press-Democrat.

The handsome track at Ingleside promises to be the scene of some really sensational racing on Christmas Day, a really grand card having been arranged by the management for that occasion. The event of the day will, of course, be the Christmas Handicap at two miles, the first long distance event of the year, in which such noted performers as Won't Dance, whose second in the Burns' Handicap last season will not be soon forgotten; Sardonic, the winner of the Latonia Oaks; Pat Dunne's good racers David Tenny and Forte, both winners over a distance of ground; Morellito, Mat Storn's great three-year-old; Prince Blazes, a demon in heavy going; Dore II, the winner of several good races this season; Lady Hurst, a recent winner at Ingleside; Lena, a good mare both in Montana and Chicago this summer; Buckwa, a dangerous horse in any company; Midian, Tom Ryan's good racehorse and others are likely to sport silk. In addition to this event there will be a hurdle handicap at a mile and a quarter over five hurdles, a race at one mile for gentlemen riders and three special events, the conditions of which have been so arranged as to bring together all of the best horses now in training on the Coast.

JAMES R. KEENE'S measure of success in his recent invasion of the English racing world was directly the reverse of that which attended his former venture, when, with Foxhall alone, he gathered in the grand Prix de Paris, Cesarewitch, Cambridgeshire and Ascot Gold Cup and various minor events with his other horses. The result is that St. Cloud, Voter, Cock Robin, Uriel, Easter Gift, Blackwood II. and his other horses are now reported to be on the ocean homeward bound. Along with Mr. Keene's two-year-olds they will be in Jimmy Rowe's charge next year and may do better than they do in England. They could not well do worse.

THE work of reclaying the Cleveland track is about completed. Nearly, if not quite, 2,000 loads of clay have been spread over the track.

Eel River Fishermens' Union.

The Eel River Fishermen's Union wes orgenized on Cannibel Island November 19th, at which time the following officers were elected: President, Paul Neville; Treesurer, G. Ferrari; Secretary, P. E. Ferrari. We are told, says the Enterprise, that every fisherman on the river below Dungan's Ferry has joined the Union which now has a membership of 110. The initiation fee was placed at 25 cents up to December 15th, after which time $2 50 will be charged Every Union host on the river will have a tag issued to them with the letters "E R. F U" and also a number from 1 up, for which they pay 50 cents for the benefit of the Association. The object of the Union is to obtain a fair and just price for fish; to induce the county Representatives and Supervisors to pass laws for the benefit of fishermen and the protection of fish, and secure an open mouth during February. The members of the union propose to fish in a lawful manner, and if it comes under the observance of the association that others are violating the law they will immediately notify the Deputy State Fish Commissioner.

The Fly-Casters.

The proposed consolidation of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club with the Olympic Gun Club has found great favor with the members of both organizations. Both clubs stand high in the ranks of sporting affairs and have an enviable reputation throughout the country. Should the negotiations now in progress be carried out successfully, the combination resulting will be a remarkably strong aggregation of sportsmen and one destined to occupy a high position in the annals of the gun and rod on the Pacific Coast. Harlow H. White is the presiding officer of the Gun Club and Walter D. Mansfield (who holds the championship casting record) is president of the angling club.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:

Alpine—Deer. Sept. 2 to Oct. 15.
Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15.
Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15.
Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Contra Costa—Deer, July 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited).
El Dorado—Doves, July 20 to Feb. 1.
Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game out of the county prohibited
Humboldt—Grouse and Wilson snipe, Sept. 1 to Feb. 15. Killing of waterfowl prohibited between one-half hour after sunset and one half hour before sunrise.
Kern—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Lake—Deer, Aug. 1 to Oct. 1.
Los Angeles—Shipping game to markets outside of the county prohibited.
Marin—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 15.
Madera—Market hunting prohibited.
Monterey—Deer, July 15th to Sept. 1st. (Use of dogs prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5.
Orange—Doves, Aug. 1 to Feb. 1. Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited). Quail, Oct. 1 to Oct. 5. Ducks, Nov. 1 to March 1. Ducks and quail, shipment from the county restricted as follows: No person shall ship ducks or quail out of the county in quantities to exceed two dozen birds a week.
Riverside—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
San Benito—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. (Market hunting prohibited).
Santa Barbara—Deer, Aug. 1 to Aug. 22. Use of hounds prohibited. Quail, one day, Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).
San Diego—Shipping game out of the county prohibited. Ordinance suspended.
San Luis Obispo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. Doves, July 15 to Dec. 1. (Use of hounds prohibited. Hunting for markets situated outside of the county prohibited).
San Mateo—Deer, July 15 to Aug. 26. (Use of dogs not prohibited. Market hunting prohibited). Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. (Shooting from boat at high tide prohibited).
Shasta—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1.
Sierra—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Sonoma—Deer, Oct. 1 to July 15. Quail, Feb. 1 to Nov. 1. Pheasants, close season till Jan. 1, 1894. Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Sutter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan 1.
Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the count prohibited.
Ventura—Quail, any variety, Oct. 1, to Nov. 1.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Antioch's pneumatic champion, "Windy Bill" was on a visit to this city during the week.

The San Rafael Gun Club is now comfortably located in good quarters on the Burdell marsh.

English snipe were numerous on Sherman Island Saturday and Sunday last. Frank Gardner bagged thirty-eight.

Ducks by the thousands were driven into Bolinas bay by the high winds last week. The hunters made large bags.

Ducks were numerous on the Point Reyes marsh on Saturday and Sunday last. Frank Vernon bagged twenty birds.

Clarence Nauman returned this week from a duck shooting trip in the vicinity of Rio Vista. He reports birds scarce in that region this season.

Wm. Remfree, of Antioch, John Lemmer and James Markland of this city will next season organize a gun club to be called "Der Schwartz-Haunes."

The Canvasback Gun Club had a duck shoot last Sunday on the club preserve near Teal station. Among those enjoying the sport were Clarence A. Haight, W. J. Hynes, J. Sweeney and others. Some good bags were made, principally teal.

In the vicinity of the Petaluma marshes last week the hunters had fair luck. On Sunday last W. E. Murdock's bag of ducks counted forty when he took the train for town. Price and Griffith tried Reclamation district. They bagged twenty teal and widgeon.

The Empire Gun Club members will have a New Year's house-warming at the club grounds on the Marin shore next Monday. A roast duck dinner and a good time is on the card for the day. Last Sunday a number of the members had good duck shooting over the ponds.

Duck shooting on the east bay shore Sunday last was favorable for some of the hunters. Pete McRae's Mount Eden bag was a good one; Le Gal, Ostrander and Swan shot fifty ducks at Alvarado, whilst "Shultze," Shaw and Klevesahl had just forty birds from the same locality.

The Black Jacks did not have their usual shoot at Antioch last Sunday, the ponds, and the trails to them, were frozen over—the ducks kept out in open water. The Black Jacks are "hot stuff" and usually carry external and internal packages of material that under ordinary circumstances would melt ice anywhere. It is strange they overlooked a brilliant opportunity.

Geo. W. Richards recently killed a large golden eagle near Bakersfield. This bird is now being mounted and will be placed among the collection of hunting and field trophies of the Verona Kennels. This bird had a spread of wings that measured seven feet from tip to tip, something unusual. Richards brought this eagle down with a 16 gauge L. C. Smith's gun.

Quail shooting occupied the sporting tendencies of some of the Tamalpais Gun Club members last Sunday, the first fair weather day for shooting for several weeks. Of those who collected feathered tribute from the Marin hills, we note W. C. Brown, who bagged nearly a dozen birds, Fred Drinkhouse, seven and John B. Nohman, a new member, whose maiden effort brought him four quail.

Santa Clara county last Monday discontinued the county Game Warden. For more than two years past the county has been paying a game warden a salary of $100 per month. The office has been the subject of much comment, and entered into the recent campaign. It is claimed that the money paid out was illegal, and that suit to recover it may be brought against the County Auditor and his bondsmen. The action of the county officials is to be regretted, the move is not a wise one and the economy aimed at is not apparent.

A beautiful specimen of an albino mallard duck was on view in the salisroom of Claborough, Golcher & Co. last week. This rara avis was almost white in color on the breast and underneath and a dark cream on the back, the white hars on the wings showed up but slightly in contrast with the other plumage, the blue markings in the wings were but slight. The bill and legs were normal in coloring, the nearest approach to the mallard color being seen in the feathers of the head. The bird will be mounted and on exhibition shortly.

James Maynerd, Jr., and Dr. E. N. Ayers were at Grizzley Island for four days this week. They arrived there last Saturday and made the acquaintance of C. J. Legros their headquarters. Early Sunday morning the hunters under Legros' guidance made a tour of inspection of the ponds and found the prospects for a good shoot were most favorable. One small pond (the same at which Maynard last year made some grand bags) they found literally covered with spritetail who, when they discovered the intruders, took but a short flight to nearby adjoining ponds. The birds were there in thousands and on Legros' advice they were not disturbed, the hunters intending to reserve the duck-mine for a clean-up on Tuesday and Wednesday. They had, instead, a fair day's sport at other points and bagged about seventy mallard, teal and sprig Early Monday morning the wind set in heavily from the southeast, the rain which followed closely, poured down steadily for two days and spoiled what promised to be a great duck shoot. The boys managed to go out and bag a few English snipe at odd intervals, but, as for the rest of the time, they had to console themselves chewing the cud of reflection with the aid of a generous stock of creature comforts taken up from the city.

The recent favorable duck shooting conditions on the Suisun marshes have been taken advantage of by a great many sportsmen. The Solano Republican mentions the following hunting notes:

J. A. Wilson and J W. Harper hunted on the marshes last Sunday and bagged sixty-five ducks.

El Whitby and a friend had a most successful hunt last Sunday, returning to town with seventy ducks.

S B. Priest of San Francisco was here the first of the week and spent most of the time in hunting on the marshes.

The cold northers that prevailed the latter part of last week drove ducks, in countless numbers, to take shelter in the tules, with the result that the finest kind of sport was afforded and good bags made.

Otto Fendner, the crack shot of the Olympic Club, enjoyed a day's hunting in the tules last Sunday, and returned in the evening with a string of ducks that bore evidence of his unerring aim and favorable condition for successful hunting.

H. P. Blackgrave, a tourist from Calcot Park, England, has been at the Arlington hotel for several days. He came here for a few days' hunting, having been here before seven years ago. Since his last visit to Suisun Mr Blackgrave has come into possession of a vest estate in England and is enjoying what wealth affords.

The Sling.

An article that was not so very long ago an important factor in the field outfit of the sportsman, is written about in an interesting vein by Canon Geuche in The Shooting Times as follows:

"When about to go out for a day's shooting in this country some years ago, I was handed a gun on which I vainly looked for the sling, which I had been accustomed to consider an indispensable appendage. In latter years, when invited at shooting parties, I have been subjected to a deal of good-humored chaff, because I never could make up my mind to discard that simple leather strap which, to my thinking, constitutes a most useful addition to a gun; it need not be in the way, and its weight is trifling; it does not disturb the balance of the weapon, as I have heard it asserted; in fine, and Continental sportsmen will defend it, envers et contre tons, for many cogent reasons. It is necessary to consider the question from two standpoints; to wit, comfort and safety.

One of the most fruitful sources of accident with guns is the inability of people to use both their hands to negotiate obstacles in their way. During my own limited experience, I have known scores of guns going off unawares when their owners were entangled in some barbed wires, or stumbling down slippery banks. When the gun is slung at your back, the use of your hands is no longer denied you, and whatever trammels or obstacles you may encounter in your progress, they are more easily overcome. Moreover, it must be owned that the carrying of the fowling-piece on the fore-arm, with the muzzle pointed downwards, is always fraught with danger, and although any sportsman instinctively causes his gun to describe a circle round a man's toes, many people have had their feet and legs badly shattered. The holding of the gun at the trail is not to be advocated, unless a man happens to be by himself; the safest mode of carrying it being at the slope, with the barrels resting on the shoulder, guard upwards. With the weapon strapped vertically against the shoulder-blade, muzzle upwards, chances of accidents are greatly minimised, and should it explode unexpectedly, it would do so harmlessly in the air. However, it must be borne in mind by the beginner that whatever mode of carrying the gun he may adopt, the latter must instantaneously fall to the ready when wanted.

To really appreciate the services rendered by the sling, it is necessary to go through a shooting expedition in the Alps, when both your hands are needed to keep your balance and wield the Alpine stock; but, of course, this is an exceptional case.

Continental guns are usually provided with two swivels, to permit of the sling being strongly attached to them; one is brazed on the rib above the fore end, the other is found screwed a few inches above the toe. This disposition is not to be commended, because, in rainy weather, it is necessary to sling the gun muzzles down. In my opinion it hangs too low, especially in the case of a short man; the barrel is apt to be bruised in coming into contact with some hard projecting object, whereby the best guns have been known to be utterly spoiled. It is much better to have a swivel inserted in the front part of the trigger guard, just like an old-fashioned musket; thus the barrel is held much higher above be ground when pointing to the ground, and the total length of the sling need not exceed twenty-four inches When not in use, it can be pulled perfectly tight, and lies flat against the fore end. Snap swivels, specially constructed, may be utilized to fasten the sling to the trigger guard, or to the stock at will; the system adapted to the United States Navy gun is indeed ingenious but as I have had no means of testing its merits, I must limit myself to my own experiments. This arrangement appears to me a decided improvement upon the old plan of having the loose strap constantly dangling and getting into your way.

Personally, I find the sling of great assistance in steadying my aim, when taking a pot shot, as I am wont to seize it with my left hand along with the fore-end. It sometimes occurs in faulty guns that this limb does not stand sufficiently off the barrels; this causes people to shoot below their mark; however, in grasping the sling firmly with the left hand, I fancy this defect is slightly corrected, anyhow it certainly allows of a firmer hold of the stock against the shoulder.

To all intents and purposes, the strap need not be broader than three-quarters of an inch, with the exception of the place where it rests on the shoulder; it can be increased there with advantage to one and a half inch. The swivels should allow of the strap passing freely through them, they should not be wider than one inch. I do not care for the American plan, of employing detachable swivels; they are liable to lose their tempering with constant wear and tear, and thus getting free from the gun, may cause an accident in letting the latter drop. There is no denying the fact that, as far as comfort and ease are concerned, the sling stands foremost as a useful adjunct in many circumstances. Whenever a long tramp home in a chilly winter's night stares the shooter in the face, the ability of suspending his fowling piece from his shoulder will be appreciated. Thus, with both hands in his ulster pockets and his calumet alight, he can well afford to laugh at those who derided him in the morning.

The most important benefit derived from the sling consists in relieving the forearm completely from the weight of the gun, whenever the latter is not actually in use. A great deal of indifferent marksmanship can be indistinctly traced to the fact that the muscles of the arm, by being subjected to the constant strain of carrying 6½ lbs. or 7 lbs. for hours, lose their elasticity, and do not obey the will at the psychological moment. It is the aptitude of taking in a situation in the twinkling of an eye which makes the good shot; namely, to accomplish in the fraction of a second a calculation, or better, a mental operation, the exact nature of which none can exactly determine. The brain, the eye and the will must act in guiding the hand, and enable it, by what is described as "muscular intuition," to raise and fire the gun at the proper moment. A stiffened and benumbed limb is a bad servant in such a case. In concluding this paper, I strongly advise some of my brother shooters, who tramp about in rough countries, to try such a dodge as I have briefly described. The other day, when out duck shooting on a private lake, which, through acre of neglect, had become an abominable swamp, I strayed from the causeway in the dark and fell in a miry hole, out of which I had much difficulty to extricate myself I clung for all I was worth to a willow tree, my gun being safely slung at my back all the time, otherwise I should have lost it. As it was, I only missed my cartridge belt, filled with cartridges, which was fished out the ensuing day; however, being water proof cases, they proved none the worse for their immersion, and killed a good many ducks and snipe afterwards.

Mooss Hunting No Play Spell.

The experiences of a hunter in the forests of Maine are given in a graphic manner by Mr. Dana J. Flanders General Passenger and Ticket Agent at Boston, Mass., of the Boston and Maine Railroad who recently returned from a moose-hunting trip in Maine, where by hard work and much exposure he secured a fine moose with excellent spread of horns. An interesting series of hunting incidents is related as follows in the American Field:

With a party of five or six hunters, including his brother he went to Ashland, Me., the furthest point on the Ashland Branch of the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad. From that point they went over twenty miles further into the unbroken forest, to Pratt Lake, at the headwaters of the Machias river and then four miles further to Moose Camps. Here most of the party quartered

The first night out Mr. Flanders learned from his guide, Arthur Winslow, of Mars Hill, that he had a gummers' camp some ten or twelve miles further into the woods in a good moose section. Mr. Flanders decided, with the consent of the party, to go to this camp with the guide. So the next morning early the guide packed a little flour, a piece of salt pork, half a dozen potatoes, some sugar, and some tea in a knapsack and they started. They traveled by compass, tramping over swamps and ridges, and there was no road.

At midday they rested for a few minutes. Mr. Flanders ate a cold biscuit he had put in his pocket and drank brook water. The guide remarked afterward that he should have made a fire and some hot tea had they not been pressed for time.

Mr. Flanders here asked the guide which was the greater distance, back to the camp, where his companions were, or forward to the gummers' camp. His feet were wet and he was nearly tired out, ready, in fact, to turn back if the guide thought best. Winslow calculated that they were nearly half way to their objective point and that the remaindar of the distance was a good deal up hill, but with less of swamp and tangle than the first part of their journey. They decided to push on. At five o'clock, when it was nearly pitch dark, the guide struck a trail which he knew and calculated that they were about two and a half miles from the gummers' camp. If Mr. Flanders desired, he said, he would build a fire, leave him there, push on to camp, get a blanket or two, and return, and they would camp that night in the woods. Mr. Flanders was nearly exhausted, but decided to push on with the guide. With birch torches to light their way along the trail they plodded on and soon after six o'clock—sooner than they had hoped—they were at the gummers' camp. It was a mere lean-to, with a hole for the smoke at the top.

The guide built a fire, boiled a potato, frizzled some pork, and baked a bit of bread before the coals. This took nearly an hour. Mr. Flanders meanwhile stretched his limbs toward the fire and they began to get dry and warm. Then, with a tin plate on his knee and a cup of hot, strong woodsman's tea beside him, he ate and drank.

Presently he looked up and said: "Arthur, I thank the Lord that I am here and safe; not in the woods to-night!"

The guide replied heartily: "Mr. Flanders, I am thankful, too, that you are here! I began to think that I had made a mistake in undertaking so much. But there is a big moose for us to-morrow!"

Rolled up in a blanket, on a bed about as hard as a floor, the railroad man and the guide that night slept the sleep of the just.

The next day they started after moose. Mr. Flanders calculated that they were at least forty miles from Ashland and nearly fifteen miles up a mountain, from their hunting companions. They were nearly 3 000 feet above sea level, and the atmosphere was wonderfully clear and invigorating, and the view superb.

That day they located a moose, and the next day they got a shot at him. The first shot took effect, but the moose apparently did not know from what direction the attack came. A second shot struck him and then he located his enemies. Almost staggering from the effects of the two bullets, he charged upon the hunters.

The guide shouted to Mr. Flanders to get behind a big tree, which he did in less time than it takes to tell it. Standing out in front, the guide pulled the trigger upon the oncoming moose, and at the same moment Mr. Flanders sent another shot at him from behind the tree.

With all these shots in his body, the forest giant wavered and fell when scarcely ten feet from the hunters. The big prize was theirs.

They remained at the gummers' camp three days, living on the little supply of provisions the guide had brought along, and then went down the mountain and joined the rest of the party. The found that the others had secured a moose or two, and all the deer the law allows—two apiece.

Moose signs were plenty and deer numerous, but to secure the moose, Mr. Flanders affirms, requires a great deal of hard hunting

The Gags Thrown Down to the East.

St. Bernard circles in the East are on the qui vive for the advent of a Pacific Coast dog, who was forwarded per Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express on Friday, December 16, 1898. The owner of the dog in question is Mr. Fred H. Bushnell, the well-known photographar and prominent fancier. La Prince Jr, a grand smooth coat St. Bernard is the Coast candidate for Eastern bench show honors. Le Prince, Jr., is by the late Champion Le Prince out of Judith's Rachel. He was bred by [illegible] 1895; orange and white in color, with dark [illegible] height is thirty-five inches and he weighs 200 pounds. He has a grand head, magnificent bone davelopmant and typical conformation of a high standard. His Coast bench record embraces winnings as follews: First in St. Bernard Club sweepstakes, San Francisco, 1896; first, novica class, San Jose, 1897; first, open class, San Jose, 1897; first, novica class, Stockton, 1897; first, open class, Stockton, 1897; first, open class, Oakland, 1897, and special in Oakland for best St. Bernard in show.

Mr. L. A. Klain of Jersay City, will take charge of Mr. Bushnell's St. Bernard; he will make his first appearance in competition with Eastern cracks at the Westminster Kennel Club's bench show in Madison-Square Garden, New York City, on February 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th, 1899. From there he will go to the coming dog shows scheduled for Pittsburg, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, St. Louie, Milwaukee, Grand Kapids and Louisville, on which circuit, it is claimed he will ha pitted against the best St. Bernards of tha United States and some recent and contemplated importations from England.

Mr. Bushnell has shown a spirit of enterprise and ambition in this venture that shows him to be endowed with the true spirit of the gentleman fancier and sportsman. He is deserving of every encomium at the command of his fellow fanciers of the Pacific Coast.

Barring accidents and adverse circumstances Le Prince Jr. should make a top notch showing.

Los Angeles Coursing.

The entries for the Christmas Day meeting at Los Angeles closed on Thursday. Yesterday quite a contingent of leashman left on the south-bound train; among them were John Grace, Sr., who will act as judge of the meeting; Jas. Grace, who is scheduled to officiate as slipper; James Dean, with several of his crack fliers; P J. Railly, accompanied by four or five good dogs; Billy McGibbon, who pins his faith on a string of three fine sprinters; Mr. Thompson, of Lowe and Thompson, who had two greyhound candidates for the stake money, and quite a number of other prominant coursing men.

The indications promise that the meeting will be the star event in the coursing history of the south up to date. The turnout of leashmen on this occasion will be a strong endorsement of the recognition Mr. Black is entitled to for his persistent and successful efforts in placing the sport of coursing before the public of Southern California in the position it now occupies.

Another One on His Travels.

The fact is gradually becoming recognized that the high standard of quality of some of our Coast dogs is attracting the attention of gentlemen fanciers who are lovers of the dog and care more for a good dog than they do for making a bluff at the game, indulging in petty bickerings or fomanting contemptible jealousies. We elsewhere note the sending of one of our dogs East and now we chronicle another departure of a first class dog. Mr. J. B. Martin, a veteran and prominent fancier of this city, has just sold and will send to the City of Mexico, the fox terrier dog Goldan West, by Champion Veracity out of Champion Golden Jewel. West is white, with black and tan head, he is a dog on the large side, having an excellent shaped head, good body, legs, feet and bone, good front; he is exceedingly well bred If there are any good bitches in Mexico he should be of great benefit to the breed as a sire.

Mr. C. D. Graham, a liveryman of Ottawa, says the St. Louis Globe—Democrat, has a peculiar freak of nature in the shape of a small fox terriar, which walks entirely on its two forelegs, without touching its hind feet to the ground. From the day of its birth the dog has never used its hind legs. The terriar is but two months old and was born in a litter with five more puppies, all of them in no way different from the ordinary fox terrier. This peculiar puppy has a hump in its back and can balance itself on its fore paws like a jugglar, and in this position can walk, run and hop about with its hind legs an inch or so from the ground.

A picture of this canine unfortunate will probably soon appear in the Coyote Chronicle (A Journal of Revilation.) It will be a valued addition to the collection of calico cats, ancient brittaniaware pawnshop relics, Swiss bell-ringers (in bloomers), astringent looking dogs and other rubbish in the museum of the above mentioned pictorial scrap-barral.

Champion Count Gladstone IV. is making his mark as a sire. Among the winning setters in the recent principal field trials held in the East, Count Gladstone's sons and daughters have made ten wins. The progeny of Antonio is credited with six; Marie's Sport and Tony's Gale, two each and Tony Boy, one.

A purchaser for an English bull dog, a fox terrier dog puppy, two greyhound bitches, a Borzois puppy and a Chesapeake Bay dog can be found by addressing with full particulars the Kennal Editor of the Breeder and Sportsman.

Eastern Field Trial Notes.

The concensus of opinion among sportsmen of the East in regard to the season's field trial meets is happily expressed by Forest and Stream in the following apt remarks:

The field trials of the Eastern and Continental Clubs this year were marked by a spirit of true sportsmanship throughout, which made the meetings the most satisfactory and thoroughly enjoyable of recent years. The commercialism which in former days was so largely a dominating force, giving rise to jealousies embittering the mats, has passed entirely away, there was this year not the remotest suggestion of it.

The trials were conducted by sportsmen for the sake of the sport; generous emulation and perfect harmony and good feeling prevailed from the casting off of the first brace to the final hand clasp at parting, when everyone declared that he had had a good time, and would come again. Such a restoration of field trials in America to a place of respect and dignity in the calendar of the year's events, is reason for genuine congratulation of all who are interested in the dog as a field companion. We shall be much in error if the immediate future shall not witness a growth of field trial interest, an such popularity for the annual events of the clubs as has never before been enjoyed.

The Blood Hound as a Man Hunter.

The following interesting summary pertaining to the results shown in the recent blood hound trials which were successfully brought off at Ravenscar in Yorkshire, England, on the 4th of October last is given by a writer in the Asian:

These trials recall the days when this dog was a valuable if barbarious auxiliary to the slave proprietor in Spanish North America and the West Indies. The rule that neglect to exercise or cultivate an instinct in time brings about its extinction is justified by numerous instances; but the instinct or tendency that disappears with great facility is generally one which has been forced in some given direction and not a natural direction by man. The bull dog suggests itself as an appropriate example; in the old days of bull and bear baiting for which we need go no further back than the first decades of the present century, the habit of fighting and eagerness to attack which generations of assiduous cultivation had bred into the bull dog, were its most marked characteristics. With the abolition of the sports in which our grandfathers delighted the occupation of the bull dog disappeared, its comhative qualities became a nuisance, and the quality was bred out of the animals as steadily as it had been implanted. So thoroughly has this been done that we think it will be generally conceded that there is to-day no dog more harmless and more foolish than the modern bulldog, which, in its carefully preserved ugliness is no more than a caricature of its progenitors.

It was natural that the frequent employment of the blood hound to track slaves and other persons "wanted" should have developed its naturally fine powers of scent, but it is now many canine generations since opportunity of man hunting was accorded the blood hound, though fanciers no doubt often give their favorites a run across the country on the trail of a willing groom or kennel man. On one or two occasions during the last twenty years the services of blood hounds have been requisitioned by the police to track down criminals. We recall one case in which the law obtained a clue to the "line" of a murderer through the assistance of a blood hound which scented out the ruffian's blood-stained clothing hidden in a chimney; and though blood hound owners have frequently offered the use of their dogs to the police when difficulties arose, or threatened to arise, in tracing a murderer, some obstacle has generally arisen to prevent acceptance to the offer. In some cases a repugnance to employ such means, mistaken as we venture to think, has stood in the way: and again more practical considerations, such as the flight of time and the character of the locality where the search would be made, has debarred the authorities from using the blood hound.

The recent Yorkshire trials sufficiently prove, if proof were needed, that an open and unsoiled ground and under fair weather conditions, the blood hound can run a fair trail with speed and certainty. As was advisable in trials, which must be regarded as experimental in the fullest sense of the word, the courses were short, the longest being only one thousand yards with no natural obstacles in the shape of streams or fresh plough; the "quarry" has so little lead that in the fastest trial the hound ran him down in ninety seconds; and the greatest care was taken to lay the trails in such wise that they should not cross a former one and so embarrass a competitor. For first experimental trials these conditions were well advised; but they can, of themselves, hardly be regarded other than as proving that the tracking instinct remains in the breed. Futher trials will no doubt be arranged to try the competitors more highly. One detail is noteworthy: it bad been regarded es a moot point by some authorities on kennel affairs whether the safety of the quarry would not be endangered. it was thought, and not without reason, that the old fierce instinct of capture might be revived by the trail hunt to the mutilation at least of the man who wae hunted. These fears proved absolutely unfounded; in no single instance did the hound on coming up with the quarry do more than snuff round him; so far as we can gather no blood hound made any attempt even to delay the man or binder his progress, much less endeavor to lay hold. This ie satisfactory from the trial point of view, and removes all fear of any objection being raised to the holding of future trials; but does the circumstance not indicate some change in the character of the animal from that of former days?

The proof furnished by the Ravenscar trials that the blood hound may be trusted to track down his man with no risk of personal injury to the latter will perhaps do something to encourage the more general use of "trail hounds" by the law. The sentimental delicacy of modern opinion would probably be revolted by the use of such auxiliaries in any cases save those which involves the capture of a barbarous murderer; and since the blood hound declines to seize it is evident that to be of any use he must be run in leash; though the spectacle of a man literally "dogged" by so striking a follower as a blood hound would, of course, attract sufficient attention to betray the pursued criminal to the police. We must, however, see more trials conducted under conditions calculated to try far more highly the scenting powers of the blood hound before his value as a tracker under ordinary circumstances can be held proven. It is one thing to pick up a hot trail on open moorland and run it on a breast scent to quarry; it is quite another to pick up a trail in, say, some densely populated slum after a sniff at a garment belonging to the suspect and carry it successfully through streets at once dirty and crowded. It would seem from the Yorkshire trials that when the blood hound was at fault he did not make a cast to recover the line as a foxhound would do, but was content to run the heel line until human assistance put him in the way he should go. This readiness to go back on the trail appears to us to indicate a somewhat lower intelligence than we have been previously disposed to accredit to the blood hound, and rather impairs the probable value of his services. If we put aside altogether the practical value of the blood hound as a tracker, and regard the trials as a successful endeavour to revive a form of sport "nose against nose," they must be regarded as eminently satisfactory; and all who take an interest in a fine breed of hounds will hope that their success presages wide popularity and more general appreciation of a dog which for many years past has been, to say the least, somewhat neglected.

Quickest Powder Made is
"GOLD DUST" Smokeless
So Don't Lead Your Birds Much.

It won the Two Days' Tournament at Altoona, Pa., breaking 152 out of 155 targets on Oct. 8, 1898. Also 42 Live Birds, "straight."

Scientific Tests prove that it gives greatest velocity with least breech pressure, and is no affected, in the least, by Heat or Cold.
"Gold Dust" gives more loads for less money than other Smokeless Powder.
Ask your dealer for "GOLD DUST" Cartridges. Use "GOLD DUST" Measure if you load your own shells.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. Men whose success in whatever they engage depends on perfect physical condition, will be interested in the claims made for The Niagara Vapor Bath Cabinet.

A hunter, John C. Bayler, of St. Paol, Minn., says: "I began to feel as though my happy hunting days were over. I thought I was getting old, my joints were getting stiff, and a day's outing after game always needed another day to rest up in. Since I am using The Niagara Vapor Bath, I feel like a new man. It keeps me limbered up and in good shape for work or sport."

The Niagara Vapor Bath, if used regularly, keeps a man in the most perfect physical condition, keeps his system aglow, his weight normal, his head free and clear, his muscles pliant and elastic, and not only prevents, but also cores, some of the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout and completely eradicates all the ailments arising from over-indulgence in liquor or food.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphor or Medicated baths at home, 3c. Purifies the system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. SELLING HORSES AT EASTERN AUCTIONS

Sam Gamble Has Some Advice and Suggestions to Offer Breeders and Owners.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 25, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—I noticed in your last issue an editorial upon the late Fasig sale of California horses in New York It states that several of these animals were sold at prices largely in excess of what they would have brought in this home market, and intimates that many breeders here will never be satisfied until they possess the earth. In most instances I agree with you. It stated again that a gentleman and lover of the great harness animal said in your office that your journal and myself had caused horse owners to think that a horse boom had struck the country and that it was hard to get a horse now at any reasonable price. If this be possible I am very sorry that I am one of those to cause any such commotion in their camp. Please allow me to say to these owners, Do not allow yourselves to be excited by this alarm. With all due respect to your judgment of the value you place upon your stock, do not overlook the fact that such animals as Silver Ring, 2:14¼, and Margaret Worth, 2:15¼, with all their all-round good qualities (which they showed they possessed) met many admirers and good buyers. Their kind are to-day a very rare article in this State or any other part of the globe. And I will say that outside of animals of their class, or good youngsters that show the ability to go out and trot and are prospective stake winners, horses will only sell for what they are worth, and the earning capacity they possess. Do not deceive yourself by thinking that the advance agent of prosperity has located here permanently, and all horses will bring large prices. It is all right to paint any successful transaction as bright a color as the sale of the above animals. Allow me to paint another picture so that no person will be misled. To get a fair idea as to the value of trotting bred stock you must figure the average. Now at the sale a consignment of 35 head, supposed to be of high class California bred stock, sold for $19,045, and ten head out of this lot brought $16,050, leaving as you see, a very small average for the remaining 25 head There was one animal in my consignment that only netted her owner about fifteen dollars. I thought the day before this handsome and much admired filly would bring about $1,000, and I was told by three different gentlemen, all liberal buyers, that they would give between $1,000 and $1,200 for her, Unfortunately for the owner she was the only one he had in the consignment. A few hours before the sale she was all right, but when led into the ring was so lame that not one of her admirers made a bid on her and she went to an outside party. The cause of her lameness will perhaps never be known to me, as it was impossible for the very best of the experts to locate it. Had her owner had eight or ten good ones in the consignment the very low price of this one would not have been noted, as the average on the others would have covered her loss. As a rule it is not proper to attribute a low price to ill luck, for in most cases it is due to bad management.

I think upon the whole it is better for a breeder to sell at auction than at private sale. With any kind of good management stock will bring a better average. To secure good money, however, the public must have the utmost confidence in the seller, and yet some bright prospects for their money. All stock offered must be as represented with the assurance that there is no by bidding on the part of the consignee and breeder, and provided such owner, or breeder or consignee is not of such a narrow mind as to strip off a cheap blanket or halter from the animal they have just sold, as I have seen, and it has cost them and will continue to cost them ten fold the price of the articles. The sooner such persons retire from the breeding ranks and sales ring the better it will be for them, as they are better adapted to other business.

Breeding the high class harness horse has the same general interest to-day that it did twenty years back, and where properly conducted and managed is a profitable and remunerative business. When one looks at the person who is successful in his dealings and the class of goods he has been handling, his success does not cause wonder. He has always kept his stock renewed and up to the times with the blood that has the earning capacity. The other fellow that is shouting "no money in the business—I am a loser," was in the second tier and about the fifth position from any of the blood that had the earning capacity.

I have seen the opportunity of making forty thousand dollars pass my grasp during the last year in the high-class harness horse business, and from not having the very small amount of capital necessary to invest. Yet I had the pleasure of making some part of that amount for my friends, and I content myself with six hundred dollars for my year's work. Had I been in one place and not had to pay so much over to railroads and hotels I would have earned a creditable salary. I have traveled about forty thousand miles, and the good hard cash to pay all the expenses came out of my horse dealings I consider my time has been well spent and the experience gained of mankind more than paid me.

I have received several letters of late asking me if I expected to take a consignment of stock over to any of the coming sales in February, March or May. My reply to one and all is that I will not make any more of those hard and responsible trips without charging the consignors for my time and services, as my part of the commissions which I have always received, are not sufficient to make it profitable. To my friends and patrons who wish me to take their stock and manage it at the next Fasig sale in February, I will say if we can make satisfactory arrangements I am at your services, and I return now my sincere thanks to them for their confidence in and kindness to me. But to those whose names I have cut deep in my stick and painted black, there is no money or power that could possibly induce me to have any business connections with them of any kind, and your readers cannot recall any one person that needs a chance to make an honest dollar more than your humble servant. For the kindness that I have received at the hands of my New York, Eastern and Southern friends, I cannot find words to express my gratitude. Yours respectfully,

SAMUEL GAMBLE.

SIX two-year-old stakes, ranging from $1,000 to $2,000 in value are to be run at the spring meeting of the California Jockey Club at Oakland, and entries for the same close next Monday, January 2d, with Secretary Milroy, These stakes are the Racing Stakes, $1,000, the Flying Stakes $1,000, for fillies, the Waterhouse Stakes $1,250, the General Arthur Stakes $1,250, the Candelaria Handicap $1,500 and the Gebhardt Stakes, $2,000.

STATE AGRICULTURAL PARK.

State Fair Directors Ready to Receive Bids for the Old Grounds.

The State Board of Agriculture is now ready to receive bids for the historical old grounds in Sacramento on which so many great races have been decided and where nearly all the best live stock ever in California has been exhibited. It is thought that some wealthy person or syndicate will take this opportunity for a good investment and purchase the track with the idea of cutting it up into building lots, for which it is particularly well suited. In Sacramento last Wednesday evening the Directors of the Board were the guests of the Chamber of Commerce of that city. It was an entirely informal affair, having been arranged merely for the purpose of consultation regarding the disposal of the land embraced in Agricultural Park and the establishment of new fair grounds in a locality where accommodations for live stock can be had on a larger scale.

It was the sentiment of most of the gentlemen present that the old park should be sold as a whole to some person, company or syndicate rather than for the Board of Agriculture to be delayed by selling in small tracts.

It was conceded that the present would be an excellent time for some one to invest money in the land, as real estate values have not recovered from the shock of hard times that set in a few years since, and that the outlook for better prices is very encouraging, if not an assured fact.

President A. B. Spreckels of the State Board intimated that he may look into the matter himself with a view of investing, but the Sacramentans were of the opinion that some of their own people should buy the land, divide it up and make the expectant profit out of it.

Secretary Smith states that the Board of Agriculture is now in a position to receive offers for the land, and that if it can be disposed of new grounds can be opened in time for the next State Fair.

"In fact," said Mr, Smith, "this could be done within three months, but a little more time would be better.

It is hoped that if the change is made this year it will be made in time for the new buildings to be erected in a substantial manner. Good judges of land values in Sacramento are of the opinion that sufficient money can be obtained for the old property to buy and equip a very handsome agricultural park, where all the buildings, stalls, etc., will be not only substantial but ornamental. The State Fair is an institution that has done much for the State, and many millions of taxable property has been added to the State's assessment role that would never have been there had it not been for the interest in stock breeding aroused by the annual exhibitions in Sacramento. With new and complete fair grounds a renewed interest will be taken and breeders will patronize the fair and make larger exhibits than ever.

THE Futurity Stake, to be run at the California State Fair of 1901 will be a rich event. Any person owning a thoroughbred mare that has been bred this year should make an entry in this Stake. Entries close January 2, 1898.

CHAS. F. PRICE and E. C. Hopper arrived from the East last week, the former to resume his old position with the Cal. Jockey Club, the latter to take the place of associate judge, made vacant by the death of Carter.

FAST CLASSES FOR 1899.

Horses With Records of 2:15 or Better That Will Probably Be Seen on the Track Again.

The list of 2:15 horses had in California is a long one. Some have passed over to the horse heaven years ago, many are on the retired list and in the breeding ranks, while others are owned in the Eastern states or in Europe, and were during the season of 1898 winning money and glory on the trotting tracks there. Among those still owned in California is Azote, 2:04½ the champion trotting gelding, but he is one of the "has beens" and though probably good enough to beat most horses on the road, will not be able to ever again trot among the free-for-all horses. In this State at the present time there is no dearth, however, of trotters that can trot and pacers that can pace in 2:15 or better and that have the record opposite their names to prove it. In the following list will be found only horses owned in California, with records of 2:15 or better, that started in races last year, or were in training for the races, but did not start for some reason or another. Some of these were only campaigned in the East, but the vast majority were seen on the California tracks. The 2.15 trotters are as follows:

Klamath, b g, by Moorokus	2:07½

The pacers are as usual faster than the trotters. While there are eight of the side wheelers with records below 2:09, and nearly all able to again equal their records, there is but one trotter whose mark is below 2:09 and he will probably never do it again. The leading pacers are a crowd of champions The list is as follows:

Their Produce Sold for Over a Million.

In the Horse Review Frank W. Covey, manager of Palo Alto Farm prints a table of the mares under their sires, whose produce in the aggregate have sold for over $1,000 direct from the farm. The aggregate shows a total of $1,236,868. Even in this list the great producers do not show the greatest advantage, for Beautiful Bells, whose produce sold for $95 000 from the farm, has a son Bell Boy, that, after leaving Palo Alto for $5,000, was subsequently sold for $50 000. In the table 352 mares are represented, making an average production of $3,513 82 per mare. The following is a list of the greatest sires:

General Benton, daughters produce sold for	$196,455

Preparing Horses for Show Purposes.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—

As the Los Angeles Horse Show draws near a few remarks about the way to present horses in the harness classes may prove of interest to some of your readers. It is well understood that in harness classes we do not include the trotter—the proper turning out of a road wagon or buggy is perfectly well understood here. With the carriage horses I regret to say that such is not the case, and the number of well turned out carriages one sees is woefully small. Yet it is nearly impossible in the short time allowed to the different classes in the ring to do justice to a horse with a bad harness or in a trap for which he is certainly unsuited. We all know what dress can do for a woman—the harness and trap are the horse's dress, and if the whole is harmonious, quiet and in good taste it cannot fail to take the eye of the judges and predispose them in the horse's favor.

A case in point came lately to my knowledge. A neighbor and friend who is meeting with deserved success in the breeding of carriage horses recently received a letter asking him if he had a pair of 16 2 horses, as they were wanted for a victoria. Now, 16 2 horses are altogether too big for a victoria; the effect would be somewhat like that of an elephant harnessed to a wheelbarrow, and the result, if the turnout was shown in the ring to exaggerate any fault the horses might have. If they were rather coarse and heavy they would look like cart horses put to a lady's phæton; on the other hand if they were rather weedy and perhaps too leggy the victoria would look as if it might be run under their legs. On the contrary were horses of that size, if of the heavy order shown to an omnibus and if rather light to a mail phæton, the carriage would be in keeping with the character of the horse and their deficiences partly covered.

Some people object to cutting their horses' tails; to them a long flowing tail is a thing of beauty. It is nevertheless nearly impossible to do justice to a horse's hock action when his tail touches the ground, and if the owners do not want to cut their horse's tail they ought to tie it up when they send him in the ring.

It must be remembered that no matter how large the entries may be in a class the judges have but a very limited time to give their verdict and they must therefore depend a great deal on their first impressions. It is from them that the first and great elimination takes place; horses are left in the middle of the ring and out of the competition. It is therefore most important to the exhibitor to make as good a showing as possible when he enters the ring.

A good horse may sometimes be passed over on account of the bad way he is shown, but I do not see any remedy for the present methods. We cannot hold shows without a public, and the public would not patronize shows where the judges spend hours making up their minds how to award the ribbons in one class. Most things have their proper places; because we hear that scroll check bits or buxton bits, as we call them, are proper on a landau, brougham or victoria, it does not mean that they are suitable for a surrey or run about with a man in mufti. We are given by our saddler some black cloth fronts and flow of ribbons when we ask for mourning paraphernalia, but they are unsuited for anything but formal and dress occasions and should certainly not be used without housings and men in livery. A perfectly plain black patent leather band and rosettes will answer all purposes.

To conclude no one in his senses would choose a tweed cap and knickerbockers to accompany his wife or sweetheart when she is out making calls in her best bib and tucker.

Exhibitors should try to have their turnouts as harmonious as possible and not show a pair of polo ponies to an omnibus, or a pair of 17 hand horses to a pony chaise, and above all, a ladies or gentlemen's carriage should avoid anything flashy in lamps, mouldings and general shape. The good brougham or victoria of some twenty years ago is far better to-day than the atrocities which have been perpetrated and sold to an unsuspecting public as the latest and best designs, and I am glad to add that they have been regularly turned down every year at the National Horse Show.

E. D. B.

DR. G. E. HUTTON, Holton, Kan., did a good thing for the equine race when he invented the Hutton checking device. This device effectively kills the idea that "bad actors" must be controlled with severe bits and head gearing, for nothing can be more comfortable to the horse wearing it, yet it effectively cures, and prevents pulling, lugging, head tossing, bit fighting, side pulling, tongue lolling and all kindred vices of road and race horses. It is simple, neat in appearance, and is genteel to use either on the road or on the track. This checking device is highly extolled by such trainers and road drivers as Ed Geers, W. O. Foote, Dr. Farrell, E. P. Whitcomb, Dr. Willett, George A. Fuller and scores of others. See ad. on a business page and order one. You will like it, and your horse will be delighted with it.

FROM every county come reports that more horses will be put in training in California in 1899 than for several years past. We shall aim to furnish our readers with a list of them as soon as the trainers get their strings made up. There will be some record-breaking pacers out this year if they come up to 50 per cent. of their touted speed.

Training Colts.

Many promising colts fail to meet the expectations of their breeders; fail to fulfill their early promises. The horse is too sensitive to be properly trained and controlled by brutal trainers. It is a truism that balky drivers make balky horses. Kindness is the best schoolmaster. Brutal force to domestic animals is nothing short of outlawed ignorance. It creates a vicious propensity in the brute to fight back in self-defense. The combat is unequal in physicial strength. In the triumph of mind over the animal passions, the advantage is all on the side of the master.

Many drivers spoil the young colt by ill-tempered punishment; cruel tortures to make him do what he has never learned to do by instinct or education. They resort to force before the colt has learned the nature of obedience. You might as well attempt to whip intelligence into a child as to whip it into the brute creation. The master of training must teach the colt obedience before he can expect to be obeyed. There are many professionals that are horse-killers. They break down the colt before they put him in condition to bear the hard service. Whole stables have been ruined by ignorant quacks and faithless grooms. How many promising colts have been trained off in mock trials of speed, bruised to pieces in ill-advised, fruitless attempts to perform great tasks, when the colt was not in the shadow of condition to perform the service required?

How much does it cost the unfortunate owner to train his colt down to be worth almost nothing? When the colt trains off, without any predispesing constitutional defect, we must attribute it to ignorance of the art of training. The object in training the colt is to produce dexterity in his movements. He is conditioned to perform more labor with less injury in the same time. Exercise and wholesome food are the agents to increase the natural powers of the horse. Artificial cultivation is the process by which speed, stoutness and endurance are conferred. The art of training produces a change in the physical organs of vital forces. It expands the air tubes, clears the wind, hardens the muscles, invigorates the body, increases the circulation of the blood—the vital fluid that contributes to the force of action.

To bring the horse to the highest condition to stand the utmost exertions constitutes the art of training. It requires patience and kindness to teach the colt to keep up the utmost exertions, or stay the distance If he should be abused or overtaxed he will become discouraged, quit, or bolt the track in self defense. Any bad habit once acquired would injure his prospects and diminish his future value. Young colts have speed, but are deficient in staying qualities. There is no objection to teaching them to show what they have got, provided the distance is limited down to their ability to perform without distress. He must be kept in spirit to do his work cheerfully when called upon. He may do it with all his might, but must have something left in him. It must not be all driven out of him. If you break his heart, there will be nothing left worth preserving.

The young colt must be encouraged to establish a good pace with perfectly true, undeviating action, to insure speed. When he shows a clean, open, perfect stride, let well enough alone. If the driver forces the colt over himself, he will naturally contract the habit of hitching and hobbling, and he will lose the advantage of a trotter. Skippers seldom stay well if they are not ruled out. When Flora Temple made her best time she never made a skip. Dutchman made the best three miles on record without leaving his feet.

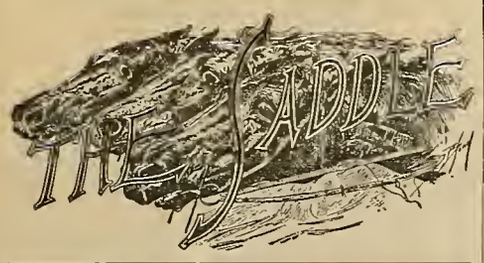
Square trotting is worth more than buck jumping, shuffling, or any other mixed gait known in the annals of the turf. It takes longer to break up a bad habit than it does to learn it. The value of the colt is determined by his superior speed, and beautiful action. The pace is established or greatly improved in the act of breaking in. It is important that the trainer should understand his art of taming the colt and fixing his pace, for upon this depends his future usefulness.

Bitting, to soften the mouth and supple the neck, is the first process to tame the colt. The head should not be strained up long at one time, without being let down to rest at the first onset. It makes a more sensitive and pliable mouth. If left strained up all day there is danger of making the subject hog-mouthed. After bitting the wild colt at successive intervals of thirty minutes for two or three days, his neck may be suppled by hard exercise till he yields implicit obedience to the bit, and will turn, go back or forward, at the slightest indication of the hand. The trainer is then master of the situation. He can then drive him in harness without a load till he becomes as docile as a lamb. To save time, he can hitch him up with a well broken horse, who will help break him, and will teach him by example to draw at a load. If the youngster is not overworked or disheartened by repeated provocations from ill-tempered drivers, he will be true as steel.

Colts are not naturally vicious. Their first impulse is to obey the commands of their superiors. It is only after desperate efforts to break away from the wanton infliction of brutal drivers, and avoid the abuse of good will by untutored ignorance, that the horse shuts up in self defense and refuses to work.

D. W. THOMAS.

THE members of the Central New York circuit that held meetings last season are determined to make the circuit much stronger for 1899. The weak places will be strengthened and new cities added to the chain. A meeting of the associations will be held in Syracuse early in January when dates, classes, purses, etc., will be decided on. There is a well defined sentiment that the circuit should not consist of too many meetings or be spread over too many months.



The Finish.

Conan Doyle's new volume of poems, "Songs of Action" contains a vigorous description of a great running race on the English turf, of which the London Times' critic says: "It makes one forget for a monent all the evil sides of horse racing when we see a finish described in such moving verse as this:"

"Spider is winning!" "Joe Chauncey is winning!"
It swells like the roar of the sea;
But Joe hears the drumming of somebody coming,
And sees a lean head by a knee.
"Nuneaton! Nuneaton! The Spider is beaten!"
It is but a spurt at the most;
For lose it or win it, they have but a minute
Before they are up with the post.

Nuneaton is straining, Nuneaton is gaining,
Neither will falter nor flinch;
Whips they are flying and jackets are flying,
They're fairly abreast to an inch,
"Crack 'em up! Let 'em go! Well ridden! Bravo!"
Gamer ones never were bred:
"Joe Chauncy has done it! He's spurted! He's won it!"
The favorite's beat by a head!

Jockey Everett's Rebuff.

The following is a press dispatch sent from New Orleans:

"Jesse Everett, who came here a few days ago expecting to ride out the winter meeting, has about decided to go to 'Frisco, and contemplates leaving for the coast in a few days. The clever light-weight jockey came to the Crescent City under engagement to Colonel Applegate to ride Hardy Pardee in the Preliminary Derby and his other stake engagements, as well as the other candidates for local stakes belonging to the Louisville turf magnate, but the officials of the Crescent City Jockey Club will not allow him to ride here. More than that they have refused to grant him a badge of admittance to the track and he has been obliged to put up at the gate each day since his arrival. Everett was unfortunate enough to get into trouble here season before last. Assistant Judge McDowell acting in place of Chairman Rankin of the Board of Stewards, who happened to be absent from his post of duty at the time on account of sickness, suspended him for what he considered a dishonest ride on Anger, an odds-on favorite.

"In the race in question Everett went to the extreme outside with his horse coming into the stretch and he was beaten out in a close finish. It did not develop at the time in whose interest Everett put up the alleged criminal ride, and he alone was punished. The judges made the suspension apply to this work alone, with the understanding that he would not again ask to ride here, and when he applied for a badge the other day he was reminded of that agreement. In view of the fact that Everett rode last summer under Colonel Clark and Captain Rees, men who are certainly as vigilant and as exacting as the New Orleans officials, without any trouble, and the further fact that he is under contract to ride for a strong stable next season, and could not, for that reason, afford to take a chance on getting into trouble."

Louisville Jockey Club Stake.

Secretary Price has announced the list of stakes to close January 15th for the Louisville spring meeting of 1899. There are for two-year olds, three for three-year-olds and two for three-year-olds and upward. The list is as follows:

For two-year-olds:
The Debutante Stakes, fillies, $1,300 guaranteed. One-half mile.
The Wenona Stakes, colts, $1,300 guaranteed. Four and a half furlongs
The Juvenile Stakes, $1,300 guaranteed. Five-eighths mile.
For three-year-olds:
The Blue Grass Stakes, $1,500 guaranteed. Six and a half furlongs.
The Mademoiselle Stakes, fillies, $1,300 guaranteed. One mile.
The Premier Stakes, $1,300 guaranteed. One mile.
For three-year-olds and upward:
The Louisville Handicap, $1,500 guaranteed. One and one-sixteenths miles.
The Frank Fehr Stakes, $1,300 guaranteed. One mile.

Turf Congress Committees.

MEMPHIS Tenn., Dec. 22.—The committees of the American Turf Congress have at last been officially announced by President Montgomery as follows:

License Committee—James H. Rees, E. C. Hopper, Joseph A. Murphy.
Committee on Appeals—E. F. Clay, George G. Perkins, W. H. Jackson.

Lexington and Inbreeding.

[By W. A. Rowe.]

It is quite possible, forming the positive conclusion which one certainly can from a chronicle of events, that our American breeders of thoroughbreds have allowed themselves to become too much impressed with the idea of outcrossing, the natural tendency of which has been an unmistakable tendency against inbreeding. I do not mean that there is no inbreeding to speak of in our American pedigrees, for we do find the employment of this practice appearing here and there. But the student finds no such uniformly arrayed and evidently calculated systematic practice of inbreeding among our American pedigrees as is characteristic of the English thoroughbred.

And yet, comparatively few though these cases are, the end may be honestly declared to have justified the means in a more than fair average of the results. I have often written that "the student of the Stud Book is constantly receiving startling convictions upon the subject of inbreeding," and I am sure I shall have to write it many more times if I attempt to do justice to any fair percentage of the cases which are constantly cropping up in Stud Book research.

It is often declared that inbreeding is prejudicial to stamina. But that depends upon what lines or individuals are inbred. Surely few will claim that Lexington lacked stamina. And yet his pedigree shows a persistent return of imp. Diomed, which was as beneficial in this connection as it would have been prejudicial if employed to intensify some unsuitable line or individual.

Although it is an old, old story, I beg the indulgence of being allowed to again emphasize at least one strong point of the close affinity which Lexington's parents had for each other. As concerning Boston, I am not now purposing to develop the manner in which his dam's duplicate intensifications of imp. Fearnaught were hit into by the dam of Boston's sire, Timoleon. But I am concerned just now with the matter of imp. Diomed.

Lexington's sire, Boston, was by Timoleon, he by Sir Archy, son of imp. Diomed, from which we see that Boston's sire came directly from Diomed through the latter's own son. But Boston's dam had a similar characteristic, for she, the Sister to Tuckahoe, was by Ball's Florizel, another son of imp. Diomed.

And what of Lexington's dam? Why, she was out of a daughter of Sumpter, he by Sir Archy, this Sir Archy being the identical horse which sired Timoleon, the sire of Boston, Lexington's own sire. Here we see plainly that three of Lexington's grandparents came directly in the male line from old Diomed, to whose son, Sir Archy, Lexington was inbred in three free generations.

There have been numerous illustrations of the successful adoption of these tactics in earlier days. Indeed, one is at a loss where to begin quoting and where to stop, for if in the pure and simple production of race horses we should combine both speed and stamina the close alliances of Diomed were very potent. Some of my friends, who haven't studied the figure system sufficiently to apprehend its teachings in this direction will here find the keynote to the earlier successes of some of our distinctively American female lines, as well as also the keynote to the foundation of these and other lines which are living and potent today. But a truce to contentions over the figures, which are amply able to take care of themselves and work out their own salvation when a student will approach them con faithful research and sans preconceived national prejudices.

For the production of a race horse who combined speed and stamina by the methods to which I have above alluded, let us take the case of Falsetto, who was produced by the alliance of Enquirer with Farfaletta. Enquirer was himself quite a jewel, and no mistake. His dam, Lida, was by Lexington, with his three close lines of Diomed. And Enquirer's grandam, Lize, was by American Eclipse (son of Duroc, he by Diomed), which gives a fourth close strain in Lida. But, more than this, Lize was herself out of a daughter of Sir Archy, to whom we recollect that Lexington was himself inbred in three free generations.

Bearing in mind the five close lines of Diomed in Enquirer's dam, Lida, we now turn to Falsetto's dam, Farfaletta, to find that she was herself out of a Lexington mare whose third dam, Mary Morris, was by Medoc, he by American Eclipse, whose sire was Duroc, by Diomed. And Mary Morris' dam, Miss Obstinate, was by Sumpter, son of Sir Archy, and sire of Lexington's grandam, Rowena. Without attempting to go into the matter of other intensifications at the root of Enquirer's pedigree, I am sure that the alliance of Farfaletta with him is very eloquent as to the operation of a systematic and almost desperate use of the blood of Diomed, of whom it should be borne in mind that he was the winner of the first English Derby, a representation of classic form, whose blood our ancestors were plainly determined to intensify as well a preserve.

Hanovers' pedigree shows this idea, although not quite so desperately. His third dam, Falcon, was by Woodpecker, he by Bertrand, son of Sir Archy, and Falcon's grandam was by Sir Archy (son of Diomed, he it borne in mind), out of Lady Chesterfield, a daughter of Diomed. But Hanover's sire, Hindoo, was out of a Lexington mare. Add to all this the here fact that Hindoo was by a son of Vandal, while Hanover's dam was also by Vandal, and we at once see how inbred was Hanover's pedigree, not stopping to sufficiently emphasize that Hindoo's sire, Virgil, had for his grandam a daughter of Cripple, he by Medoc, whose sire was Duroc, by Diomed.

Let me now temporarily turn to the case of the brothers Spendthrift, Fellowcraft, etc., and note that their dam was by Lexington, and that their third dam was by our friend Medoc. Reverting again to Hanover, we find that his crack son Hamburg was out of a Fellowcraft mare. But now we are only just beginning this tale of inbreeding or intensification, for Hamburg's dam, Lady Reel, was out of Mannie Grey, by Enquirer, whose pedigree we analyzed above, noting its Diomed lines. And then, too, Mannie Grey's dam was by War Dance, son of Lexington, and this War Dance mare was out of a daughter of Lecompte, he by Boston, Lexington's sire! Certainly the tremendous weight of the persistent returns to Diomed blood must be realized by the reader.

And so, without attempting to just now harness with this Diomed matter the intensifications of Glencoe, which characterize Hamburg's pedigree, I am sure the reader agrees with me that we do not have to go back to olden times to find illustrations of the successful interbreeding of the Diomed lines. Hamburg's pedigree is too fascinating a subject with which to deal save in a special article, which I promise to soon place before this journal's readers. But I feel that he very nicely bears out our above introductory studies on the Diomed matter, always emphasizing the consideration that this inbreeding and intensification must be planned to go hand in hand with the association of carefully chosen lines and individuals. And all this in Hamburg's case proved to have been most beautifully planned and consummated.

In dealing with Hamburg, so fascinating was the subject that I find we are quite far away from our original basis, Lexington. Of Lexington's tail male line one has at this day only to write that it has shown comparatively little tendency to go on. His sons have sired many a nice winner, and, indeed, some high-class ones. But its achievements as a sire line are not calculated to inspire great enthusiasm. But this has been ably counterbalanced by its tremendous success as a broodmare strain. We see this characteristic in English research, most prominently, perhaps, in the matter of King Tom, to quote an Eclipse line, while the same is true of about all the English lines, which come from Herod, to whom Lexington also traces.

"Let us look for a while, however, at some of the sons of Lexington, who may be said to have performed in the stud the best feats which stand to the credit of their line. Mr. J. O. Donner and the late Mr. Ricker, in their "Modern Pedigrees," give, as these comparatively successful sons of Lexington, the following: Colton, Gilroy, Norfolk, Tom Ochiltree, Preakness, Uncas, War Dance, Kingfisher, Pat Malloy, Duke of Magenta, Brown Prince and Fiddlestics. We will now make a necessarily brief resume of the dams of these horses.

Norfolk's dam, Novice, was out of Chloe Anderson, she by Rodolph, out of Belle Anderson. Of Novice's parents it is interesting to note that Rodolph was by Sir Archy Montorio son of our old friend Sir Archy, while Belle Anderson was by Sir William of Transport, another son of Sir Archy. And Belle Anderson's dam was by another familiar friend, Sumpter, he by Sir Archy.

Tom Ochiltree's dam Katona, was by Voucher, out of Countess. Voucher's sire, Wagner, was by Sir Charles (son of Sir Archy), out of Maria West, she by Marion, another son of Sir Archy. And Countess' dam had three very close lines of old Diomed. Her sire, American Eclipse, was by Duroc, son of Diomed, while her dam was by Rattler (son of Sir Archy), out of a daughter of Thornton's Diomed, he by Ball's Florizel, son of imported Diomed and sire of the mare who produced Boston, the sire of Lexington.

The brothers, Pat Malloy and Jack Malone were out of Glorians; she by American Eclipse (as above), out of Trifle, she by Sir Charles, son of Sir Archy. And Trifle's dam was also by a son of Sir Archy! Thus we find that no less than six of the eight great grandparents in the pedigree of Pat Malloy and Jack Malone were directly descended in the male line from imported Diomed, one of the six being by Diomed himself, three by sons of Diomed (Sir Archy siring two), and the remaining two being by sons of Sir Archy! (Small wonder that mares by such desperately Diomed-inbred horses should be prolific brood mares.

Thus far, in our treatment of the dams of the above-mentioned list of 12 Lexingtons, we have followed the traditional idea of inbreeding, or rather as to what constituted inbreeding. But now we come to the light which the Figure System—or, better, the Figure Guide—is throwing upon the matter, exposing, as it does, the very important consideration of inbreeding in the tail female line through the dams. It is not so long since a very prominent breeder said to me: "This Bruce Lowe system makes us out to be more inbreeders than we thought we were, for, while we used to consider Lexington and Vandal as from two different families, Bruce Lowe says that they are one and the same." Precisely so, for Lexington's third dam, Lady Grey, was the fourth dam of Vandal, and thus we find that our Lexington-Vandal so-called "nick" is in reality a case of inbreeding to Lady Grey.

And, to go just a step further, the knowledge that the great broodmare Levity was herself out of Vandal's dam, shows very clearly how the blood of Lady Grey's lines is inbred and intensified when the Lexington-Vandal-Levity combination is brought into a pedigree in a close double or triple alliance. Now carrying this idea of the same family to consideration of other ancestresses more or less remote, and bearing in mind certain great lines which are intensified in Lexington through his Diomed intensifications which I have above noticed, we will find the pedigrees of the dams of a majority of the rest of the "Modern Pedigrees" list of Lexington's sons to bristle with interest and suggestions.—Hoosier Fancier.

Turf Congress Decisions.

The Committee of Appeals of the American Turf Congress has rendered two decisions on cases that came up during the racing season at Chicago. The facts and the decisions follow:

July 2d, during the Washington Park meeting, Hugh Penny, belonging to E. W. Doss and "Kid" Weller, defeated in a mile and a sixteenth race, Bellicoso, belonging to S. C. Hildreth and J. Naglee Burk, and Nathanson, belonging to W. H. Snarley and A. B. Cushing. After the race Hildreth protested the payment of first money to Doss, on the ground that all the owners of Penny had not been registered with the secretary at the time of the first entry, as prescribed by the racing rules. Doss at once filed a similar counter claim against Hildreth. Then Snarley came along and asked that first money be given to Nathanson, claiming that both Doss and Hildreth had neglected to comply with the rules. Investigation by the judges revealed that both Doss and Hildreth, at the time of their first entry of Penny and Bellicoso, respectively, with the Washing on Park secretary, had neglected to give their partner's names. The judges, however, decided that Doss and Hildreth did not attempt any fraud—the former claiming ignorance of the rules and the latter leasing Bellicoso from Burk and believing himself full owner for the time being—and fined each owner $100. Snarley's claim for first money was also rejected. Snarley appealed the case, and the Committee on Appeals upheld the judgment of the Washington Park judges.

The other case is stated thus by Secretary Hopper in a communication to Sheridan Clark, secretary of the Crescent City Jockey Club, New Orleans:

"At the fall meeting of the Chicago Racing Association, said association refused to let L. W. Benson start Nannie L.'s Sister on the ground that she was not named. In other words, Nannie L.'s Sister is not a name, as contemplated by the racing rules. Benson appealed the case to the Committee on Appeals. I send you below a copy of the opinion of the committee:

"'As to the complaint of L. W. Benson against the Chicago Racing Association in regard to the name of Nannie L.'s Sister, we are of the opinion that it is not a proper name in the meaning of the rule, and that Benson be notified to select a proper name. This ruling shall not affect in any way races she has heretofore run nor bar her from future racing.'"

Prospective Clashing.

From the present outlook there will be several clashes in dates in the West during the coming racing season, which is to be regretted, for clashes should be avoided whenever it is possible, as the success of a meeting depends largely upon the undivided support of the racegoers in any community, and conflicting stake fixtures work an injury and frequently a financial loss to owners and trainers. Both Louisville and Latonia will conflict with meetings elsewhere. The Louisville meeting will open May 4th, and will last fifteen days, which will cause a conflict with Nashville and Lexington, as there are only three open days between Memphis and Louisville.

There is no desire on the part of the Louisville Club to crowd out either of the above clubs, but in justice to itself and to Latonia the club has been forced to assume the dates named. They are taken in order to let Latonia open, which in turn wishes to avoid getting in the way of the Washington Park meeting at Chicago. Even as it is, Latonia will conflict with Chicago for a few days.—Spirit of the Times.

VETERINARY DEPATRMENT.

CONDUCTED BY
WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C.V.C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

Subscriber—I have a colt that has thrown out a splint, and he is very lame when I drive him. Please advise me through your valuable paper how to treat it.

Answer—Apply the following blister:

Beniodide of mercury, half an ounce.
Lard, two ounces.

Mix and rub well into the part, for about ten minutes, having first clipped the hair off over the splint. Tie the colt so that he cannot get his teeth near the blistered part, for four or five days. Then turn him out, or give him only walking exercise for about a month.

C. B.—I have an old mare that has been a good one. For the last few weeks she has eaten almost nothing, she slobbers at the mouth, and when eating chews a little and drops the food out of her mouth. What do you think is the matter, and what can I do to help her?

Answer—Those symptoms shows that it hurts her to eat. Examine her mouth and find out the cause. Either she has decayed teeth, which hurt her when she attempts to chew with them, or there is a sore, probably caused by food working under the tongue, or into the flesh at any part of the mouth. A wash of alum and borax syringed into the mouth daily will assist in reducing the inflammation, but the teeth should be attended to by a veterinary surgeon or a veterinary dentist.

Money Winning Sires.

"By their fruit shall they be known" is as true of horses and men as of the vine and fig tree. Sires of harness speed used to be estimated by the somewhat questionable virtue of their number of standard performers, but this proof of greatness satisfies no one at the present day. Nowadays trotters and pacers are raced only too universally for the "cold dollars" which they can win, and this fact makes the acknowledged test of a sire the number of dollars to his credit through the performances of his get on the turf. This is not an infallible test though it is a fair one for temporary comparison. The get of one sire may be fortunate one season and unfortunate the next. Any sire whose get wins $5,000 in one year on the trotting turf is entitled to be classed as a great money winning sire. No less than twenty-four sires come up to this measurement for the year 1898. Prodigal, the son of Pancoast and Beatrice, by Cuyler, leads in this list, with Direct in second place. This complete list is as follows, and it is quite remarkable that at opposite ends are the own brothers Prodigal and Patron:

Prodigal, 2:16, by Pancoast	$28,850
Direct, 2:05½ by Director	18,075
Chimes, 2:30¾, by Electioneer	14 145
Baron Wilkes, 2:18, by George Wilkes	13,765
Mambrino King, by Mambrino Patchen	12,250
Dark Night, by Alcyone	12,155
Onward, 2:25¼, by George Wilkes	10,375
Pilot Medium, by Happy Medium	10,310
Alfred G., 2:19¾, by Anteeo	10,025
Bourbon Wilkes, by George Wilkes	9,400
Knight, 2:22½, by Woodford Wilkes	8,950
Vilander, by Black's Hambletonian	8,750
Eagle Bird, 2:21, by Jay Bird	7,200
Simmons, 2:28, by George Wilkes	6,500
Ben Johnson, 2:27½, by Strawn	6,250
Steinway, 2:25¾, by Strathmore	6,150
Liberty Bell, 2:24, by Bell Boy	6,075
Princeton, 2:19¼, by Pancoast	6,025
Allerton, 2:09¼, by Jay Bird	5,775
May King, 2:21, by Electioneer	5,550
Sidney, 2:19¾, by Santa Claus	5,500
King of Belair, by King Ben	5,450
Stamboul, 2:07½, by Sultan	5,145
Patron, 2:14¼, by Pancoast	5,050

—Western Horsemen.

The turn has come at last and some sort of salvation is in sight for the man who has held on to his mares and his acres and his stallion. Buyers are willing to pay fair prices for trotters of good individuality and pedigree, and if the breeders will only go easy and produce only the best from their highest class mares, there is faint but cheering hope that there may be big money in the fascinating business again.

Horse Owners Should Use

Saddle Notes.

CARRIE C., the dam of Jean Beraud, is unfortunetely not in foal this year, much to Mr. John Daly's regret.

NEARLY 3,500 foals have been registered this year with the Jockey Club. It is astonishing the small percentage of good horses that mature from such a number.

WHAT ER LOU ran a great race the first time out. He was humped at the start, but when he was straightened away made his field look very cheap, winning pulled up in 1:40¼.

IT can be stated on good authority that the Saratoga Racing Association will have strong backing in an effort to get more consideration in the matter of racing dates in 1899.

MANY of the papers make the mistake of designeting Sidney Paget as ex-Secretary Whitney's son in-law. It was Sidney Peget's brother that merried Mr. Whitney's daughter.

THE total amount of money won by horses in England up to December 15, according to Rufl's Guide, is £508,020, about $2 540,100, the largest amount ever won in one season in England.

THE brood mers Simoon, foaled 1894, by St. Simon, dam Shotover, by Hermit, was purchased by M. E Blanc at the Newmarket Decembar sales for $15,000. She was covered by Best Man.

W. C. DALY now hes the following horses et New Orleans: Sensational, Bonades, Tinkler, General Maceo, Her Own, Bitlali, Bastion and a bay colt by Falconer—Tincture, full brother to Tinge.

SLOAN, it appears, owns a half interest in Sly Fox, and hes done so ever since he has been running in C. F. Dwyer's colors, and it is perhaps also news that this jockey was the owner of Michael III.

RILEY GRANNAN has been reinstated. The Stewards of the Jockey Club, having won every point in the Courte, can afford to he magnanimous and allow the plunger to come on their tracks hereafter so long as he obeys the rules.

COLONEL M. LEWIS CLARK wes interviewed at Memphis recently and among other things said that an effort will he made to have the forthcoming Legislature of Illinois pass a racing bill eimilar to thet now in force in New York.

THE colt High Priest, which was purchased by the Messrs. Hitchcock, to he schooled for jumping races, died recently, He was first owned by Anguet Belmont, and more recently by M. Hayman, who sold him to the Messrs. Hitchcock.

THE Grafter, winner of this year's Melbourne Cup, bas heen sold to go to England, where there seems to he a decided penchant for Australian horses. Last year The Grafter ran second to his full brother Geulns for the Melhourne Cup

MR. FERGUSON again forgot that he had a recall flag in his hand in the first race Thusday. The start made the race a gift to Stromo, the Burns & Waterhouse entry. Mr. Caldwell at his worst, can do as well as this, and he has no recall flag either.

HENRY SHIELDS must have had Mr. Skinner's finish on Collins in his mind when riding Olinthus. By employing practically the same tactics he landed his mount winner, but it is safe tu predict that Olinthus will not soon forget the Oakland Prize Stakes.

THE new addition of the Rules of Racing of the Americen Turf Congress will he ready for distribution early in January. Secretary Hopper and Judge Tarlton have the matter in hand. The hook will contain all the emendments passed during the past year.

J. E. MADDEN has purchased of A. H. & D. H. Moris, the chestnut colt imp. Mirthful, 3, hy Hogioscope, dam imp. Sister Cheerful, hy Petrarch, out of The Nun, by Becchus. and he will he placed in the stud. Mirthful was a good colt last spring, and with the chances Mr. Madden will give him, should he a successful sire.

J. R KEENE's English stable of race horses arrived in New York on Sunday, Dec. 18, on the steamer Mesaha. The animals included St. Cloud II., Voter, Easter Gift, Black Cock, Cock Robin, Maid of Erin, Nautch Girl and Gloaming filly. The horses will be added to Mr. Keene's American stable, and will he trained by James Rowe.

MR. S. E. LARABIE says Ben Holladay is now at Lonisville and will he put in condition for next year's racing by Peter Wimmer. American rece-goers will be glad to learn that there is a chance of seeing this geme rece horse sport silk again. His performances last season won for him the admiration of the entire recing public.

AT Calcutta, India, on Christmes Day, in the race for the Viceroy's cup Vanitas won, Keenan second and Leonidas third. Eleven horses started. The American-hred horse Keenan, hy Lishon, out of Patrimony, was formerly the property of August Belmont, and in May of last year won the second welter hendicap at the Newmarket meeting. England. Keenan was then purchased hy Lord William Beresford, who in turn sold the animal to the Maharejah Aga Khan, who took him to Bombay.

"VICKSBURG" Woods, for some yeers a sort of hetting commissionar for Burns & Waterhouse, wes arrested Thursday and is now in the custody of the Emeryville authorities. Woods, it is represented, het a number of "markers" in various books, alleging them to he for President Williems. The hets were all meds without Mr. William's knowledge.

FOR the first time in the history of the Newport race track there is not a stable wintering on that course. In fact, there are no horses quartered at Newport except those used to pull the harrow about the track. In former years from ten to fifteen stables and many of the winners on the local tracks and on those down the lins were conditioned for their early spring races at Newport, which is now practically deserted.

SECRETARY GRAIZ HANLEY, of the Queen City Jockey Club, announces that racing will begin at the Newport track in April. No definite arrangements have yet heen mede for the meeting, but it is almost certain that the Newport meeting will be the first of the local tracks to open next spring. Secretary Hanley stated that the meeting would probahly last twenty-one days, the same as it did last spring, hut it may he either shortened or lengthened, according to circumstances that prevail when the racing season is on for the spring of 1899.

AT the recent sales of thoroughbreds at Newmarket, England, several from the stable of Lord William Beresford and P. Lorillard were put up at auction, including half a dozen yearlings bred in this country. Diakks, who, among other successes, won the Eshner Stakes at Sandown this season, with 128 pounds on his back, however, failed to reach the reserve, and at $7,250 was led out, and returns to America. Elfie, at $6 150, followed suit, and no one would offer more than $1,100 for Meta II., who as a two-year-old heat Jedah At this same sale Knight of the Thistle, property of H. McCalmont, was purchased for $3,000 by a Mr. Cuthbert, and Sporting Life says that he is to he shipped to the United States.

OF the hookmaking at New Orleans a dispatch says: "The volume of speculation is at least six times larger than it was last year, and it is an off day indeed when any one of the seventeen hooks does not handle $5 000. Some of the small fry who annually counted upon piking $100 a day have been forced ont of the husiness. Ed Austin, who won $40,000 here last year, returned this year with a greatly reduced bank roll, and he has not dooe himself any good so far in the season. Sam May, another regular winner in New Orleens, has has been fairly carried off his feet. He has had hut one winning day since the meeting opened. It is possible for a bookmaker to double or lose a bank roll of $5,000 in a single day. Those who have been successful are those who have had the means to take a chance. Many of the little fellows have been forced out of the business.

THE "Recing Calendar" of the issue of December 221 contains a list of spayed fillies of 1896 and 1897, which should prove invaluable for reference. No one can claim that he purchased an unsexed filly without knowing it, if he will only cerefully note the contents of the list. It was a wise provision on the part of The Jockey Club to have a report made of the spayed fillies. Another item of importance is that Mr. Andrew Miller gives notice that at the next meeting of The Jockey Club, to he held on January 12th, he will move to amend Role 147 of the Rules of Racing, by adding as the second paragraph: "A jockey under snspicion shall not he permitted to ride in races for anyone during the period of his suspensioo." If this rule is adopted it will have a most salutary effect on recalcitrant and impertinent jockeys, for such a suspension would he punishment indeed.

THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Washington Park Club at Chicago was held last week, and Directors for the ensuing year were elected. The new hoard will consist of Nathaniel K. Fairbank, Samuel W. Allerton, D. Mark Cummings, John R. Walsh, Albert S Gage, Henry J. McFarland, Arthur O. Slaughter, and John Dupee. Michael Cudahy was chosen to replace James W. Ellsworth, who resigned, because he is going to New York to live. Mr. Howard will continue to act as secretary. The first meetiog of the hoard of directors, with the newly elected officers, will he held Saturday, Jan. 14, and at that time, according to Secretary Howard, racing will probahly he discussed and some decision reached. The race meeting held last summer was satisfactory, financially, Mr. Howard said, and showed that the people were in favor of first-class sport of that character.

THERE are too many horses here at present, with more dropping in from day to day; extra stables are being built outside the grounds to accommodate the overflow, says the New Orleans correspondent of the St. Louis Republic. A meeting will he given at Tampa, Fla., to commence on December 14. It is a half-mile track, hut the promoters say they have the sanction of the Turf Congress and all other official bodies to accept entries from horsemen racing on Congress trecks, and who have to continue doing so, without jeopardizing their chances of losing their ceste and becoming outlaws. The horsemen who intend taking in this meeting, and there are a great many here, are a hit wary and say unless they see a written official sanction from the Turf Congress they will not leave here for Tampa. The weather at Tampa is very mild and coudncive to heelth in horses—like Spa, at Saratoga.

IN France the government makes the race track speculation do some good. A tax of two per cent. is taken from the entire emount het in the pari-mutuels and given to the various hospitals. Then a tax of one per ceot. is lovied to aid in the endowment of purses for races and therefore for the improvement of the netional breeds of horses. Part of this sum is devoted to increasing prizes at horse shows, hut all of it goes back directly to the breeders of horses. This year the hetting was heevy on the whole and the two per cent. tax for the benefit of the hospitals and kindred institutions netted the enormous sum of 4,276 750 francs or almost $1 000 000 The one per cent. levied for the improvement of breeding amounted, of course, to just one-half that sum, or approximately half a million dollars. This indicates that in round numbers 214 000,000 francs were het in the pari-mutuels in France in 1898—substentially $43,000,000.—Rider & Driver.

ALBERT COOPER, colored, 53 years old, who was at one time one of the best known trainers on the American turf, died at St. Catharine's Hospital, Brooklyn, December 20th, of Bright's disease. In 1884 Cooper was employed by "Lucky" Baldwin, and trained Volante and Los Angeles for him. He also at one time trained for J. R. Keene. For the last two years he has not been seen much about the tracks. He leaves a wife.

THE following weights have been announced for the Baldwin Hotel Handicap at one end a quarter miles: Briar Sweet, 126; Geyser, 124; Beodoran, 119; La Goleta, 117; Buckwa. 116; Satsuma. 115; Ostler Joe, 112; Cromwell, 112; Paul Griggs, 112; Napamax, 112; Morellito. 110; Rey del Tierra, 108; San Venado, 108; The Roman, 108; Fleur-de-Lis, 108; Rosinante, 107; Morinel, 107; Colonel Wheeler, 104; Storm King, 102; Hohenzollern, 100; Recreation, 100; Odds On, 100; Marplot, 100; Bernardillo, 100; Rosormoode, 100; Olinthus, 95; First Tenor, 93; Sam McKeever, 93; Grevhurst, 92; Olive, 92; Humidity, 90; Arhaces, 90; Saintly, 90; La Maroma. 90; General Arthur, 90; Rainier, 85; Gauntlet, 85; Malay, 85; Rey del Rio, 85; Jennie Reid, 80; Hannah Reid, 80; Reina de Cuba, 80; Denro, 80

EUGENE LEIGH will start out next spring with probahly the largest string handled by one man in America. He has fifty horses wintering at Churchill Downs, Louisville, the majority of which are two-year-olds. May Hempstead, which raced in Cherlie Patterson's colors with such success last spring, when she defeated everything that was pitted against her at New Orleans, is now in Mr. Leigh's stable. According to her owner she is wintering nicely and will likely be a factor in the early spring stakes next year. Associated with Mr. Leigh in handling this large string is Frank Kelly, a clever and conscientious trainer, who added considerable to his reputation last year by the success of the horses under his charge. Nash Turner will he the stable's regular jockey. Mr. Leigh will weed out the lot and ship the pick of them to Morris Park, New York, early in April. Leigh is a hustler and deserves success. He has a host of friends throughout the country and it would he a pleasure to them to see him develop a couple of Kentucky Colonels, Black Venuses and King Barleycorns from his present bunch.—N. O. Picayune.

THE Chicago Inter-Ocean is not particularly pleased with President Montgomery's appointments on the Committees of the Turf Congress, and relieves its mind as follows: "Mr. Montgomery changed his mind about leaving the rnt his predecessors established, and followed the time-honored custom of the former presidents of the Western turf-governing body by eppointing only Southern men. Regardless of the importance of Chicago in Western racing, not one of the many available and capable officials here were asked to serve. It would have been better if he had stuck to his intention of putting George Henry Wheeler of the Washington Park club on the appeals committee. Racing men throughout the country realize that the turf congress is not accomplishing what it should toward the betterment of Western racing, and as the same men have directed the policies of the organization and executed them for years with hut little success, it would seem that a little new blood in the committee could not he harmful, providing, of course, the object of the congress is to improve racing."

AMONG the stakes of the New Memphis Jockey Club that close January 2d, none is more deserving of consideration and patronage than the Luehrmann Hotel Stakes for three-year-olds It is $1,500 guaranteed, of which the winner takes $1,140, and the conditions are so adriotly drawn that the winner does not incur a penalty for the Kentucky Derby, for which it is really an excellent tryout, it being decided in the last week of the Memphis meeting. Typhoon II. won the Luehrmann and then captured the Kentucky Derby carrying but 117 pounds, having saved the allowance of five pounds to three-year-olds that had not won a stake of the value of $1,500. Another point is that the three year-olds in the Luehrmann that have already been beaten in their three-year-old form get an allowance regardless of what they may have won in their two-year-old form. The stake was instituted to give horses beaten in the Tennessee Derby and Oaks, as also three-year-olds that had not been entered in those stakes, a chance at a generous consolation prize. This is a stake that should have as large an entry list as the Tennessee Derby, and if the owners of three-year-olds look into the matter carefully it can hardly fail to do so when the entries close a week from next Monday.

COUNTRY LIFE (Eng.) says: "It is extraordinary how prejudiced most people are against anything new, and especially against such things as they will not take the trouble to understand. Not one racing man in a thousand, and not many breeders even, understand the true meaning of Bruce Lowe's Figure System, and yet they all with one accord laugh at it. Personally, I do not think it is ever worth one's while to form an opinion, one way or the other, about anything except by its results. Let us look at this year's classic winners. Before the season which was brought to a conclusion last week had begun to run its course, I stated in these notes that the three-year-olds most likely to do well, as judged by their respective figures, were Nun Nicer, Disraeli, Wildflower and Jeddah, whilst in this respect Ninus, Ozil end Dieudonne were not entitled to so much respect. The last three have been more or less failures, end have certainly failed to run up to the expectations of their friends. Of the first-named lot Nun Nicer has won the One Thousend Gnineas and proved herself a sterling good mare, whilst Disraeli took the Two Thousand, Jeddah the Derby and Prioce of Wales' Stakes at Ascot, and Wildflower the St. Leger. Could an unprejudiced person ask for a better proof that the figures are really of value in estimating the probable form of young rece horses, and as a useful collateral guide to breeders?"

Attention Horsemen!

Having fitted up the Occidental Horse Exchange, the best located and the finest establishment west of Chicago, devoted exclusively to the holding of auction sales of Horses, Vehicles and Harness, I beg to inform you that I shall have auction sales every Saturday, commencing next Saturday, January 7th, for which I have received consignments of double teams, roaters, saddle horses, draft horses and Shetland ponies, and a number of buggies, wagons, etc., which will be sold without reserve to the highest bidder. Special attention will be paid to the selling of fine trotting stock. Catalogues carefully compiled. Terms of sale reasonable.

Local Mother Goose.

Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been?
I've been out to Ingleside to get the long green.
Pussy cat, pussy cat how do you fare?
I was left at the post every race, I declare.

—o—

Sing a song of sixpence, that's what we'll sing;
One and twenty hookies, booking in the ring.
When you bet a lobster they'll quickly take your money
But the odds against the live ones are very, very funny.
The King was in the Field Book adding up his sheet,
The Englishman was off the block to go and warm his feet.
A young handicapper was counting up his tin
Along came a rail bird and snipped off his chin.

—o—

There was a little starter and he had a little flag.
And the color of the hunting was red, red, red.
When he went to the post, the jockeys he'd roast,
But he'd always leave the horse that was dead, dead, dead.

Racing in Argentine.

F. G. Carpenter, one of the best newspaper correspondents, writes from the Argentine Republic about the racing at Buenos Ayres, as follows:

The races are one of the social institutions of the Argentine capital. The President and his Cabinet, the officers of the army and navy, and everyone who pretends to be anybody attends them, and this notwithstanding that they are always held upon Sundays. The chief race track is owned by the Jockey Club. This club is the most celebrated in South America. Its initiation fee is three times that of any club in New York, and its annual dues equal more than many an Argentine young man earns in a year. Its clubhouse will compare favorably in its furniture and finishing with almost any palace of Europe. The races are all under this club and all the money won and lost passes through its hands. It takes a certain percentage of all the bets made, and when I tell you that last year more than $13,000,000 passed through the hands of its pool-sellers you can see that a small percentage will give the club a very big income.

"There are many fine horses in the Argentine, and the races are well contested. The day I attended them eighty-seven horses were entered and the grand stand contained more than 10,000 people. A building covering more than half an acre was devoted to pool selling, and there was a stream of men going to and from the windows of this building to make their bets or to receive their winnings. Everyone was betting. Men, women and children put their money on every race, and as the horses neared the winning post the crowd in the grand stand went wild. Ten thousand people stood up, some climbing on the benches, and now and then a yell went up from many thousand throats. It was a well dressed crowd, and there seemed to be almost as many ladies as men in it. There were the poor as well as the rich, although the former were shut off in a cheaper section of the stand by themselves.

"The Sunday afternoons of the Argentine people are spent up to 3 or 4 o'clock at the races. The races begin at 12 and are supposed to stop at 3."

Jacob Pincus, the veteran trainer, is coming back to America after a period of five or six years spent in England. Pincus trained for Mr. Pierre Lorillard when the master of Rancocas first invaded the English turf, some twenty odd years ago, winning the Derby and St. Leger with Iroquois. When troublous times came upon racing here, about five years ago, and the big American owners began to plan an English campaign, Pincus was sent over to look after the preliminary details. Later he was installed as trainer of Mr Keene's English racing stable. Most of the horses were off the past season from one cause and another, and Mr. Keene has decided to bring them back home. Pincus is one of the oldest trainers connected with American racing, and in his day he was one of the best, too.—Morning Telegraph.

Getting Ready for the Horse Show.

Mr. Thos. Bonner, who is to act as Superintendent of the Los Angeles Horse Show, has been busy in San Francisco this week securing entries for the event. Among others he has secured about thirty entries from W. S. Hobart, and several from John Parrott, Henry Crocker and others. Word comes from Los Angeles that entries are coming in fast and by January 3rd, the date on which entries close, there will undoubtedly be a very large list. Among those already entered from Southern California are the famous Silkwood and four of his get; Neernut and four of his colts; the trotting horse, Native State, 2:16½, owned by Mr. C. E. Mayne of Los Angeles; Mr. Sproul's great imported thoroughbred stallion, Conveth; the great trotter, Toggles, 2:09½, owned by Mr. Graham E. Babcock of Coronado; the imported pony, Baltam, owned by Mr. Stanley of Santa Ana, which has taken many ribbons in previous exhibitions; Dr. Lyman's prize-winning saddle horse, Rex McDonald; Mr. Buddinger's Gray Jim, as well as a team entered by the Panorama stables.

Mrs. Taylor's beautiful team of Shetland ponies; three or four polo and racing ponies of Mr. Bakewell Phillips of Pasadena; Mr. Norman S. Sterry's high school saddle horse, King Hopeful; and a host of others too numerous to mention.

There are also a great number of horses whose names cannot be given here, entered by Mr. Walter S. Newhall, Mrs. M. S. Severance, Dr. Wills, Mrs. O. P. Posey, Dr. Hitchcock, Mr. Erkenbrecher, Mr. Donegan, Mr. R. Barrett Fixthian of Santa Barbara; Mr. F. E. Browne, Mr. G. L. Waring of Riverside, Major Off and many others.

Inclusive of the large number of horses to be taken from San Francisco, the managers of the horse show have received fully 200 animals booked for exhibition, so that there will be no lack of entries, and the managers of the horse show feel confident that the public will be satisfied with the equine exhibition.

Types of Marketable Horses.

The market for the light horses recognizes three leading types, the carriage horse or coach horse, the trotter or roadster, and the saddle horse.

The distinguished features of the coach horse are its symmetry and action. The height should be about 16 hands to make a good appearance. In contrast with the roadster, the carriage horse is very smooth and symmetrical. The smoothness should be due to plumpness of the muscles over all parts. In the carriage type, the head should be comparatively small and lean; the ear neat, the neck long and carried gracefully; the body round and plump, and the limbs clean-cut, with well-formed and durable feet. Graceful carriage and stylish action are leading qualifications. Style, when in any posture, is a very desirable attribute in the carriage horse. A critical examination of this type would indicate how far the position of the style depends on the adjustment of the parts of the frame work. When a carriage or coach horse possesses characteristic style there seems to be an appropriate blending of all proportions of form. In analyzing this it will be found that most of the lines have a similar direction in addition to the fullness of outlines already discussed. The line running from the poll to the nose seems to be parallel to that of the shoulder. Then the line running through the center of the pastern also has a similar direction, while the line of the thigh in the hind quarter corresponds with the slope of the hind pastern. Considering the lines that run different from these, it will be noticed that the one made by the arm from the point of the shoulder to the elbow is very similar in direction to that made by the ischium of the pelvis, and this again is similar to that of the lower thigh. Each part seems to bear a fixed relation to every other part, both in size, length and slope, giving the horse that symmetry which contributes so much to his style and beauty while standing or in action.

The chief characteristics of the roadster are speed and stamina. The ability to trot fast is a leading characteristic of the roadster, and the ability to maintain a rapid gait is clearly essential in a horse of this kind, in addition to being able to stand steady road work. Such a horse should sell well on the market, and must be well mannered, so as to be safe and pleasurable to drive.

The typical roadster may be said to be about 15½ hands high and about 1000 pounds in weight; the formation is narrow in front, deep chested, wide at the loin, and very muscular in the quarters. Every feature about the horse appears clear-cut, giving a hard finish which indicates durability. The lineaments of the face and the outlines of the neck, and especially the distinctness with which the tendons stand away from the leg, are very characteristic features.

The type lacks the fullness and symmetry that are characteristic in the carriage or coach horse. To do effective and satisfactory road work is the sphere of the roadster, and a type that has been evolved is an illustration of the evolution of a form for a specific purpose. The type of the best campaigners that have marks of 2:10 or better will show a similarity that indicates the type towards which the trotter is tending, though it should be noted here that the roadster in show form will display quite different outlines after being subjected to the hard training the campaigner receives.

The type of the saddle horse that is desirable on the market is somewhere similar to that of the light carriage horse, but the typical saddle horse will show more quality and better manners than any other class of light horses. Aside from these features, the chief qualifications of the saddle horse is the ability to show the following gaits in a satisfactory manner: Walk, trot, rack, canter and running-walk.—Prof. John A. Craig.

Making a High Stepper.

On this subject a book might be written and the whole yet not be told concerning the many practices that have been employed to make action where it does not naturally exist, says the Horseman. However, we will give as brief a resume as possible of the methods most frequently employed by the most successful trainers in this line. First, may be mentioned the use of weights, not in the shoe or on the hoof, but in the shape of ordinary birdshot, says No. 6's, 8's or 10's, confined in a rubber tube, the ends of which terminate in a strap or buckle, and the whole being covered with buck or sheepskin, so as not to chafe, is snapped around the leg just above the ankle joint.

A deep bed of straw or other resilient material may be spread on the ground and the mare exercised over it. The yielding of the straw at every step will make the mare bend her knees and hocks and lift her feet up high to clear the over-present obstacle. A ditch, say three or four feet wide, may be dug and filled with straw, tramped with a draft horse, and filled and filled again, until the straw path is level with the top of the ditch. The mare may then be led in that straw going until the necessary amount of practice has been given, the yielding footing as before necessitating the high lift and ample bend of the knee and hock; or railway ties may be selected of the proper size, laid on the ground at regular intervals, according to the stride of the mare, and she will be forced to pick up her feet high to get them over the obstructions. These are the methods most generally used to improve action. There are more complicated ones, but these will suffice. In all cases where high action is desired, the pupil must never be exercised to a point where he or she gets tired. High action and leg weariness are not compatible.

Summit Ridge Stock Farm.

J. M. Stanley, proprietor Summit Ridge Stock Farm at Chase, Ind., writes as follows: "I have been using Quinn's Ointment for several years and would not be without it. It does everything you recommend. I have never found anything like it for curbs, splints or windpuffs." This is the general verdict of the leading horsemen all over the United States. For curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all enlargements use Quinn's Ointment—the kind that cures. Sent by mail or express prepaid upon receipt of $1 50 per bottle; smaller size, 50 cents. Address W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y., unless you can obtain from your druggist.

Rheumatism and Horses.

Cornhill, Tex., March 24, 1896.

Please send me six bottles Gombault's Caustic Balsam by express. Your Balsam is the best liniment I have ever used, both for horses and myself. I have used it on myself for rheumatism with good success. I doctored four months and spent $120 for doctor and medicine with no results, but since using your Balsam I can work around on the farm. Sulky Notes.

HAPPY NEW YEAR to all.

MAY it be a prosperous one in harness horse affairs.

THE Santa Rosa people are anxious to have a district fair held there this year.

M. E McHENRY says that he will not leave California until about the first of March.

BOOKMAKING on harness racing has not been conducive to good sport here in California.

IT looks as if the two in three system would be the rule on the majority of the tracks next season.

ROAD horses handled and for sale. Orders taken. Address D. R. Misner, 1309 Fulton street, city. *

STALLION cards, accurate and up to date, printed at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

DAVID McCLARY has engaged to train for W. J. White for three years at a salary of $4,000 a year.

THE Turf, Field and Farm aptly states that in the high acting classes at the horse shows "nothing succeeds like excess."

EVERY district fair should make the effort of its life this year to give a good fair. It will add to the wealth of the district.

HEAT betting is one of the greatest causes of heat pulling. Do away with the heat hat and the drivers will let up on the heat pull.

NEXT year Marvin will train Electric Bell for a mark. If he succeeds in getting him in the list, Beautiful Bells will have ten 2:30 performers.

ROAD driving is getting more popular than ever in San Francisco. The good roads in the park and the speed track there are accountable for it.

SECOND payments on 602 foals have been made in the Kentucky Futurity for foals of 1898. The number of mares originally nominated was 702.

THE Australian two-year-old trotting record has been lowered to 2:59, with standing start, by a colt sired by Osterley out of a native bred dam.

IT is rumored that Gov. Budd will appoint Col. J. C. Kirkpatrick one of the Commissioners of Golden Gate Park. A better selection could not be made.

SAMUEL GAMBLE will take a consignment of harness horses to the Fasig sale in February if he can make satisfactory arrangements with consignors.

THE third payment of the Futurity Stakes offered by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association is due January 2d. Don't let the date skip your memory.

AS a brood mare sire Nutwood heads the list. There are several Nutwood mares left in California, and the opportunity should not be missed of mating them with good stallions this year.

MR. J. A. BUCKLAND is not prepared to go to America, but he is willing to back Fritz against any trotter from that country, the match to take place in New South Wales.—Sidney Referee.

HARRY STINSON, who is training his horses at the Cleveland track, has a colt called Dr. John, by Oro Wilkes, that he thinks is a faster trotter than Mary Celeste, 2:17½, his last season's sensational two-year-old.

TALISMAN, the brother of Star Pointer, 1:59¼, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the stable of Alex. Carson, at Lima, O., on the night of the 13th instant. He was owned by L. E. Brown, the Delavin, Ill., breeder.

SECOND payments have been made on 80 per cent. of the original subscriptions to the Kentucky Stock Farm Futurity. The manner in which the futurities of the year are filling indicates a prosperous trotting season in 1899.

A MUCH traveled trotter is one that some years ago was taken from Kentucky to Australia and from there was shipped to India last October. The Australian papers in noting the shipment fail to give the name of the horse.

NUTWOOD sired the dams of twenty-three in the 2:15 list, with four in the 2:10 list; George Wilkes 22, with seven in the 2:10 list; Blue Bull 18, with five in the 2:10 list and Mambrino Patchen 17, with four in the 2:10 list.

A SPLENDIDLY bred colt, foaled in March, 1897, by Dictatus, 2:19¼, out of a mare by Nutwood, second dam by Vick's Ethan Allen, third dam by Messenger Duroc, can be purchased at a very low figure. Apply at this office.

CASCO, 2:24½, is another to the credit of McKinney, 2:11¼, that was first reported in the new 2:30 list. He is owned in the East and made his record there during the past year. It is said he has shown miles below 2:20 in his work.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association is preparing to give several matinees next year on a grander scale than ever before. If the association owned a track in or near this city matinee racing would soon be in great vogue here.

THE Eastern horse papers all contain accounts of the meetings of association directors and the preparation of trotting and pacing programs for 1899. The California associations haven't got a move on yet, but they will before long.

IN 1897 Dec Sperry, 2:09, was campaigned out of his class as Robert Boy. During the past season Secretary Gocher discovered that the man who campaigned him as Robert Boy was V. F. Roberts, Worcester, Mass., and the latter has been expelled.

THE two and three year-olds in California in 1899 will not be very numerous, but they will be about the best bred lot of youngsters the State has produced. The cheap mares have not been used for breeding purposes to any extent since the boom bursted.

A DISPATCH from Lexington, Ky., says the American Stock Farm has purchased the Breeder and Horseman of Nashville, and that the two papers will be consolidated at Lexington. A thoroughbred department will be added to the new journal.

ALL sorts of bills relative to racing will be introduced in the Legislature which convenes in Sacramento next week. Some of them will be of the "cinch" variety, prepared especially for the purpose of getting money out of those most affected by them.

BINGEN, 2:06¾, and Nico, 2:08¼, are running out in a paddock at the Forbes farm every pleasant day with their shoes off. Nico will be taken up about the middle of February and jogged. Bingen will make a short season in the stud before going to the training stable.

THE Gentlemen's Driving Club of Columbus, O., has a membership of about 50 It was organized early last year, and during the season eleven matinee meetings were held. Since the organization of the club many first-class horses have been purchased by fanciers in that city.

AVERAGE prices for drivers at the New York sale and commission stables last week were from $175 to $250. Anything at all extra made up to $325 without trouble and at Snows' a pair was auctioned off at $775. "Average prices," of course, are not paid for anything at all "fancy" or "chancy."

THE Occident trotting stake for foals of 1898, closes January 2d. The value of the stake this year was over twenty-five hundred dollars. It is growing every year. It should be worth a good round sum in 1901, when this year's foals trot for it. Every breeder should take advantage of the opportunity and make as many entries as possible.

W. FORD THOMAS, of this city, so long connected with the U. S. Customs service, and of late years in the employ of the firm of Spreckels Bros., has fully recovered from a critical surgical operation he underwent a few weeks since, and is again able to attend to business. Mr. Thomas has long been identified with the horse interests of the Coast, having bred several standard animals.

W. H. FREER, of Wilkeswood Stock Farm, Kingston, N Y., sailed for England, Wednesday of last week with sixteen horses, including the guideless wonder Margaret Louise, with which Mr. Freer intends introducing to the Britishers the "guideless" form of entertainment. Mr. Freer has made many successful trips to England with American horses, and we wish him luck again.

THE Columbus, Ohio, driving association company has claimed the first week in next August for its coming Grand Circuit meeting. Forty thousand dollars will be hung up in purses, and for the 2:20 trotters and 2:16 pacers, the purses will most likely be $5 000 each. These classes are not yet absolutely fixed and the big money may be offered for others. The association also claims the two weeks commencing October 16th next for its autumn meeting.

THE living sons of Rysdyk's Hambletonian are eleven in number, namely; Alladin, 24 years old; Alert, 24; Chester Chief, 27; Dean Sage, 25; Hambletonian's Last, 22; Kensett, 24; Leland, 22; Marlborough, 23; Polonius, 26; Richwood, 26, and Sir Walkill, 23. Alladin is in Kansas, Alert in Ohio, Chester Chief and Kensett in Illinois, Dean Sage is in Minnesota, Hambletonian's Last in Kentucky, Leland and Polonius in New York, Richwood in Missouri, and Sir Walkill in Iowa.

THE pioneer road driver of Buffalo, the most prominent horseman in the world, and a truly remarkable man—the venerable Cicero J. Hamlin, who is fast approaching the four score mile-stone in life has led the way down Richmond speedway many times the past week behind the trotter Sixty-Six, 2:15½. The "grand old man" of the horse kingdom enjoys the Winter carnival on the snow, and is always in the thickest of the fight for first honors.—Buffalo Courier, December 18th.

JOHN SPLAN indulges in the reminiscence that when Flora Temple made 2:20 in '50 she pulled a sulky weighing 84 pounds, and her driver, McMann, was warned that he was in danger of his life by getting up in such a light vehicle. When Maud S. and Jay-Eye-See made their marks they hauled a sulky weighing 38 pounds, and when Alix made her record at Galesburg, Ill., she was hitched to a 23-pound bike, 61 pounds lighter than the two-wheel affair that Flora Temple drew.

BLUE BULL is many times quoted as a wonderful sire of trotters, but there is absolutely no reason why the adherents of the undeveloped theory should pin their faith to him. Blue Bull was admitted by eminent authorities to be one of the fastest horses at the pacing gait that lived in his day, in fact phenomenally fast. He is the sire of 56 trotters and four pacers, and his case is one of the strongest in the whole history of breeding. The fact of a pacing horse, with no positive trotting blood in his composition, siring only four pacers out of a total of sixty 2:30 trotters and pacers, is most remarkable. Fully one-third of the trotters he sired were from mares of unknown breeding and nearly all of them possessed very short pedigrees. However, this did not deter this great horse from siring trotters with singular regularity.

GEORGE STARR expresses the opinion that Star Pointer's successor will be either Klatawah, Searchlight or Anaconda. Star Pointer, he says, is in a class by himself at present, because he can carry his speed for a longer distance than any other light harness horse in the world. John R. Gentry and Joe Patchen are both endowed with as much speed as Star Pointer, and can hold it for seven furlongs; the last furlong settles their goose, and Star Pointer has them tiptoed in the last hundred yards.

"IT will require some time," remarks The Horse Breeder, "to establish a family even from the best of the Morgans now in existence that will breed so uniformly good roadsters as did the old-time Morgans; but, as 'time, patience and perseverence accomplish all things,' the time may come when a Morgan of larger type than the original will be produced that will possess all the most valuable qualities for which the sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of the original Justin Morgan were distinguished."

THE breeding of fine horses has been neglected for some years past, but farmers in many sections are beginning to take an active interest in the subject and they are in numerous instances preparing to co-operate in obtaining good stallions. They recognize the fact that prices are advancing, that the demand everywhere is for the best horses of all classes, and that the future is full of promise for those who have choice drivers or draft horses to sell. The day for scrubs is past, and only prime sires should be used.

H. S. HOGABOOM returned from Humboldt county this week and has gone to Sacramento, where he will get together a string of Waldstein colts and fillies for the circuit of 1899. Waldstein will make the season up in Humboldt next year, and a number of mares have already been booked to him. "Huck" thinks "a whole lot" of this horse, and says he is the greatest bred trotting stallion in America, being the only one by Director out of an Electioneer mare. And he not only says it, but proves it by facts and figures if given the opportunity.

A BUNCH of half-bred American trotters were recently sold in Liverpool, England, shipped from the Argentina country. The lot was composed of geldings and mares in about equal numbers, and from four to five years old. The British dealer took hold well and the entire lot averaged something over forty pounds or $200. The consignor expressed himself as highly pleased with the results of his venture. The stallion that got the horses is a grandson of Iron Duke, exported from the United States in 1889, and mated with mares got by a thoroughbred from the native ponies.

THE American Sportsman, of Cleveland, Ohio says: While John A. McKerron was being talked of a few nights ago, a horseman said: "I remember his sire very well; I offered $20,000 for him when he was a colt." "On what?" was asked. "Oh, he was recommended to me by Sam Gamble as the best young thing to be had; he was speedy, good looking and by Guy Wilkes, and out of a great mare, Lida W. 2:18¼, by Nutwood; the Guy Wilkeses were just beginning to come good just then, and he looked to be the horse of the day It would have been a good buy at that, considering I wanted a great sire, for he is proving as much. He has John A. McKerron (3) 2:12½, Who Is It (3) 2:12, Clandins (4) 2:13½ and Irvington Belle, 2:18½.

IT is but natural that in Cleveland the most critical road drivers are to be found. After four seasons of matinee racing, such as no organization in the world furnished in point of speed and contests, the members of the Gentlemen's Driving Club have become thoroughly understand the requirements of a wagon horse, that one might bring to Cleveland a positive world's champion, an absolutely sure cup winner; yet that horse would hardly find a buyer unless it came up to the full requirements of these critical amateurs. In addition to speed and good looks a Cleveland matinee horse must be so thoroughly broken as to always behave well in public, to be perfect on the road so as to be of use to the member's family in the parks, and to make a good appearance either in single or double harness.—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

RUBBISH of this sort still finds its way into print: "The idea that a horse's digestion and general condition are improved by clipping his coat is an absurdity. A horse cannot digest his food if he is constantly shivering, and blankets cannot take the place of his hair for warmth. The greatest exponents of clipping are grooms who are too lazy thoroughly to groom a horse which has a long coat of hair. It is utterly useless to try to improve on nature in that respect, and clipping should be discontinued as a barbarous practice." Popular Science is guilty of perpetrating the above. How would the man who wrote it like to stand all night with soaking wet flannels next his skin or run as hard as he could all afternoon with a fur overcoat on? No one with sense advises the clipping of horses that have nothing to do but stand around. And as to improving on nature how about the beef bearing qualities or milk-giving capabilities of modern cattle? And how about the shoe and the foot? Or the everyday, ordinary stable blanket? Nature doesn't know it all any more than anyone else, though she has more sense than some.—Horseman.

ON December 7, members of the Great Western Circuit met at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, for the purpose of arranging dates, purses and admitting such members as were desirous of joining the circuit. The circuit last year comprised the towns of Joliet, Ill., Dubuque, Ia., Independence, Ia., Hedrick, Ia., Hamline, Minn., and Wilwaukee, Wis. It is more than probable that the circuit will consist of nine members next season, Terre Haute becoming a member at this meeting, while it is expected that Peoria, Ill., and Springfield, Ill., will join the circuit at the meeting to be held in Buffalo in January. The meeting was merely a preliminary one and nothing definite as to details and purses was decided upon, this work being left for the January meeting, but it is safe to say that the circuit will be one of the strongest ever organized in the west. C. T. Hancock, of Dubuque, was elected president of the circuit; W. P. Ijams, of Terre Haute, vice-president, and R. L. Allen, of Joliet, secretary. No definite date was settled upon for the [illegible] of the secretaries in January, to be held in Chicago, will probably be about the middle of the month.

THE NEW YEAR will have dawned before the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN reaches its readers again. The outlook for a prosperous year is good—rain is all that is needed to insure it—and that is almost certain to come in sufficient quantity to make the grain fields, pasture and orchards take on their wonted green and bloom before many weeks of the new year are gone. With good crops in all parts of the State, and district fairs in all the districts prosperity like that of "the good old days" will be with us. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN wishes each and every one of its patrons and readers a happy and prosperous new year, and has faith that good times will dawn with it.

RACING closed at Ingleside last Monday with the largest crowd seen on either of the local tracks this winter. There were two features to the racing—one the Christmas Handicap at two miles which was won by David Tenoy, son of Tenny and Mamie B, by imported St. Blaise. Lady Hurst ran out in the lead nearly the entire distance, the race being run in rather slow time. David Tenny made his run the last part of the stretch and won in a drive, a length in front of Lady Hurst. The other feature was the defeat of Mr. Walter Hobart in the gentlemen's race by Mr. Skinner. Had Mr. Hobart won, the handsome cup would have been his, as he has won it twice before, and now Mr. Skinner has two wins to his credit. From the way Mr. Hobart is increasing in avoirdupois, and the seemingly absolute refusal on Mr. Skinner's part to take on any flesh whatever, it looks as though the latter will be the winter favorite for the cup next year. On Tuesday the Oakland track opened and the Oakland Prize Stake with a valuation of $1,250 was the race of the day that the people went to see. Olinthus, the good colt by Red Iron out of Lilly Wright, was the winner at 30 to 1. Had this family of colts, Diggs, Sutton, Olinthus and Arbaces not been drilled and drilled in their two-year-old form they would have been higher class horses than they are. They are big growthy colts usually and would do better if not started till late in the season when two-year-olds. The attendance at both tracks has been fair during the past two weeks, but the weather has been too chilly for comfort most of the time.

THE CONEY ISLAND JOCKEY CLUB has some of the greatest racing held in America each year, and there the best horses in the country meet, and the races are witnessed by immense crowds of people. This is due to the fact that the stakes are so valuable as to call forth a large and representative list of entries. Elsewhere in this issue is a list of the stakes for the June meeting 1899, the Autumn meeting 1899, and the full conditions of the Futurity, with $8,750 added, for the Autumn meeting 1901. Entries to all of these events close Tuesday, Jan. 3, and should be addressed to the Clerk of the Course, Coney Island Jockey Club, northeast corner Fifth avenue and Twenty-second street, New York City. Blanks can be had at this office.

HAMBLETONIAN WILKES, the only son of the great George Wilkes in California, is for sale. He is a sire of race horses, having sired that good race mare Phoebe Wilkes, 2:08¼, and sixteen others with records below 2:30. Five of his sons are producing sires, and five of his daughters are the dams of trotters and pacers with records from 2:09¼ to 2:30. The dam of Hambletonian Wilkes was by American Star, and his grandam by Hambletonian 10. No better bred horse ever came to the State and there are a number of his colts now here that show race winning speed. Hambletonian Wilkes will make the season of 1899 at the Green Meadow Farm, Santa Clara, at $50 the season, and if sold his book will go with him. As Mr. R. I. Moorhead, his owner will retire from the breeding business, all the stock on the farm is offered for sale. Among them is the great broodmare Anna Belle, 2:27½, as a three-year-old and the dam of La Belle, 2:16, as a two-year-old. Anna Belle has three colts by Hambletonian Wilkes, one, two and three years old. One of them has shown 2:14 speed. There are on the farm several young horses by Hambletonian Wilkes that will do to train for the races and will be sold cheap. One can find on the Green Meadow Farm some great bargains, and this is just the time to invest as values of such stock as this are sure to increase within a year. Any communications addressed to R. I. Moorhead, Box 326, Santa Clara, Cal., will be promptly answered or parties will be shown over the farm at any time.

WITH the Westchester Racing Association and Morris Park is associated all that is desirable in the line of thoroughbred sport. The policy of the management has ever been a generous one and they have always shown a willingness to let owners and trainers share in the profits. This has been done by increasing the amount of money hung up, and by giving extra days' racing when there was any justifiable demand for such an action. No more attractive program, either as regards fixtures or purses, is offered by any racing association in the country.

Elsewhere in this number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN the Westchester Racing Association announces the second closing of the Nursery Handicap, $2,500 added, for two-year-olds, foals of 1897, the Eclipse course, to be run at the autumn meeting, 1899. Entries to be made January 5, 1899, at a subscription of $15 each. Nominations are also invited to the National Stallion Race of $20,000, to be run at the spring meeting, 1900, last five furlongs of the Eclipse course. Foals the progeny of stallions duly nominated to be entered by to-day, December 31, 1898. To-day entries also close to the Matron of $20,000, for the produce of mares covered in 1898, Eclipse course, to be run at the autumn meeting, 1901. The last two events commend themselves particularly to breeders as a share of the rich purse will be distributed among them. These events should receive a generous support from owners, trainers and breeders. All entries should be addressed to H. G. Crickmore, clerk of the course, 173 Fifth avenue, New York City.

ONE OF THE BEST holiday numbers that has come to our desk is the Christmas Horse Review. Its tabulations are complete and excellent as usual, while its special articles are of a very high order. Among those of extra merit is one by Mr. F. W. Covey on the "Revenue Producing Mares of Palo Alto," a paper entitled "The Imperial Horse Pasture of Japan" by Dr. H. Latham, of Oakland, Cal., and the "Inbreeding of the 2:08 List" by "Grattan." John Trotwood Moore, who is known and loved for his writings by every reader of harness horse literature, and who has probably done more than any other turf writer to elevate the tone of turf papers, has a most charming and amusing story of life among the colored folks of Tennessee entitled "Sis' Caline's Noticement," while his poem, "The Race of the Oregon," has the fire and sweep of true genius. There are many articles of a statistical nature in the issue that are invaluable to the breeder and student of breeding.

THE OCCIDENT TROTTING STAKE for foals of 1898, will close with Secretary Smith of the State Agricultural Society on Monday next, January 2, 1899. Be sure to get your entry mailed in time. It was a rich stake this year and easily won.

JOHN NOLAN, Lady of the Manor, Directum Kelly, Searchlight, Split Silk, Mattie Patterson, Anaconda, The Abbot, Peter the Great, Eagle Flannigan, Belle J., Miss Logan, Tommy Britton, Charley Herr, Klatawah and Indiana all won over $5,000 during the past season.

Russian River Bar.

The North Pacific Coast Railway Company ever alive to the interests of its patrons and sportsmen in particular, last week put a large force of men at work in an attempt to open the bar at the mouth of the Russian river. A channel 1,000 feet long, twelve feet wide and twelve feet deep was dug for the purpose of opening up the river for the run of fish to their spawning grounds on the upper waters of the river and its tributaries. The trench was in operation but a short time when old ocean closed it up again tight as ever. Another attempt will be made during the coming week to open the bar again, it is to be hoped this will be a successful undertaking

At present the river is rather low and there is no water over the bar, making it impossible for the steelheads to go up the river to spawn. Should the next attempt at opening the bar be accomplished the fishing next year on this famous water will be most excellent.

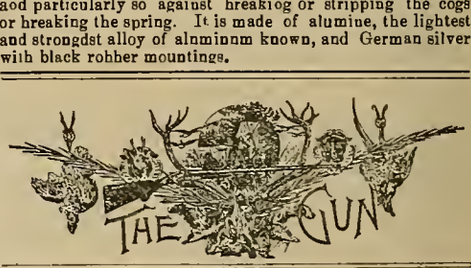
[As we go to press we are informed that the bar opened wide and deep yesterday morning.—ED.]

A New Automatic Reel.

An automatic reel which claims many features of superiority and excellence has been examined by a number of prominent anglers who called in at Clabrough, Golcher & Co.'s during the week. It is claimed that this particular reel is no longer an experiment but a thing now of clearly demonstrated practicability, having been thoroughly tested by many experts in different parts of the country before being placed on the market. The following claims are made for this particular reel—an accurate and perfectly easy cast can be made with it, and it will wind automatically as rapidly or as slowly as desired. The crank attachment can be used independently of the automatic, and vice versa, or both together.

It can be so set that without the intervention of the angler it will (using the lightest line) play a large fish and tire him out by giving a sufficiently stout drag and taking up all slack line, as no fish can swim faster than this reel winds slack line. It is fastened to the rod reel-seat in the ordinary way, and will fit all reel-seats without altering the handle It will wind the line evenly on the spool, without guiding the same with one hand, thereby enabling the angler to operate the reel (in landing a fish) with one hand. It is small and compact in size, elegant in appearance, substantially constructed, dust-proof, and also as nearly water-proof as a reel can be made.

Great advantages are claimed in operating this real, both in bait and fly-casting. It is fully guaranteed by the makers and particularly so against breaking or stripping the cogs or breaking the spring. It is made of alumine, the lightest and strongest alloy of aluminum known, and German silver with black rubber mountings.



The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:

Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the count prohibited.
Ventura—Quail, any variety, Oct. 1, to Nov. 1.

The County Game Warden.

We note with pleasure the proposition now being advocated for the appointment of Mr. Thomas J. Watson to the office of game warden of this county. Mr. Watson is a well-known and genial sportsmen and has a strong support among the rank and file of local sportsmen. His affiliations with the business community have been such as to create a confidence and respect that is a strong criterion for probity and business abilities, which is now bearing fruit in the hearty support accorded by a number of downtown mercantile houses. Should the gentleman named be selected for this important position, it is a foregone conclusion that the duties of his office will be fulfilled in a manner that will be thoroughly satisfactory to all concerned and a credit to the incumbent. Incidentally we are impelled to mention that Mr. Watson has bred a few setters in the past that have materially added to the fame of our hunting dogs.

The Big Tournament at the Indianapolis Traps.

Harvey McMorchy, of Syracuse, N. Y., well known to the sportsmen of the Pacific Coast, on Friday, December 23, 1898, won the Grand Central Handicap at the Limited Gun Club's tournament held at Indianapolis.

The shoot was one of the best of the five days' events and all of the cracks were entered. There were twenty-five shooters in the race and they were kept busy from 9:30 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the event was finished. McMurchy, the winner, who used his favorite L. C. Smith gun all through the tournament, killed twenty-five straight, and, in fact, shot in brilliant form all day. He missed but one bird during the entire day and this was a sparrow. In addition to taking first money he was presented with a handsome rosette of the club colors—old gold and black—and on the rear of a solid silver pin the size of the rosette, was inscribed, "Colors, Limited Gun Club, Indianapolis, Ind. Second Grand Central Handicap, 1898." He took first money all alone, the purse of $600 netting him $112.50.

The match was at twenty-five pigeons and the entrance was in all $30. The men shooting a score of twenty-two failed to get their money back by $2.95. The first man McMurchy, received $112,50; Heikes, the second man, got $97 75; the men scoring twenty-three received $56.25 each, and the men scoring twenty-two received $27 05 each.

The scores showing the birds actually killed is here given, but this score does not show where the men dropped out under the rules:

Grand Central Handicap, twenty-five pigeons, entrance $25 three miss and out, money divided between ten high guns—McMurchy, 31 yards, 25; Heikes, 31 yards, 24; Irwin, 28 yards, 23; Elliott, 31 yards, 23; Budd, 31 yards. 23; Neal, 28 yards, 23; Hollowell 29, yards, 23; Donley, 26 yards, 23; Tripp, 29 yards. 22; Young, 30 yards, 22; Gilbert, 31 yards, 22; Erh, 29 yards, 21; Fanning, 31 yards, 21; Winslow, 30 yards, 21; Beck, 29 yards, 21; Lilly, 28 yards, 13; Voris, 28 yards, 17; Rike, 28 yards, 13; Grohe 28 yards, 11; Werk, 27 yards, 11; Lindsley 28 yards 11; Parker, 31 yards, 9, Willey, 26 yards, 8; Marott, 27 yards, 7; Clark, 28 yards, 1.

The Late Edward K. Blades.

While engaged in his favorite pastime of duck shooting, Edward K. Blades, a well-known and popular attorney of Los Angeles, was the unfortunate victim of a hunting casualty last Monday afternoon; the accidental discharge of his gun causing his death some hours later from the effects of the injury received. Mr. Blades was alone at the time of the accident, and strange as it may seem, the cause of the mishap was a hunting dog that was in the boat with its master.

The deceased was one of the most enthusiastic sportsmen in Southern California and was a splendid shot, having won the individual championship at the recent semi-annual tournament given by the Los Angeles Gun Club. He leaves a widow and two children, both boys, aged 4 and 6 years respectively. Mr. Blades was a son of Judge Franklin Blades, of Pomona, and a brother of Paol Bladee, the editor and vice-president of the Evening Record. He was 35 years of age. The deceased stood well in his profession, and had served as a deputy district attorney during the administration of H. C. Dillon. He was a native of Watseka, Ill., and had resided in Los Angeles since 1887.

Fox Hunting in Connecticut.

For the first time in over twenty years Connecticut sportsmen are now enjoying the rare diversion of fox hunting. Up to a year or two ago it was generally believed that foxes were practically extinct in that state, but about that time farmers began to notice suspicious trails, and the frequent depredations upon their poultry yards led them to believe that their ancient enemy had returned. Subsequently their suspicions were confirmed by the appearance of the wily pests upon the public highways and in the fields, and during the last fall they have become unusually numerous and bold, especially in New Haven county. Recently a well-known New Haven sportsman returned from a hunt with the announcement that he had seen six foxes during the morning, and his experience appears to be a common one.

The foxes thus far seen are of two kinds—the ordinary red fox and the gray or wolf fox. The sudden appearance of the latter species is puzzling veteran Connecticut sportsmen. None of them ever remember the wolf fox, even in the palmiest days of Connecticut fox hunting, and no one seems able to account for their appearance at this late day.

For the Protection of Game.

The attention of local sportsmen has of late been directed to the question of game protection and this matter has now reached a stage of discussion and consideration that is ripe for immediate action. The Empire Gun Club have made the initial move, the following circular having been forwarded this week to secretaries of the various gun clubs in the vicinity of San Francisco as well as to many individual sportsmen.

DEAR SIR:—The rapid decrease in this State of game of all kinds has caused the Empire Gun Club to appoint the undersigned committee to investigate the matter with a view of devising some method for the protection and preservation of the same.

A few years ago game abounded in large numbers in close proximity to San Francisco, but owing to unnecessary slaughter and heedless and useless destruction, it has almost disappeared in its old haunts and it can be but a short time at the present rate of destruction, before it will be impossible to see game birds of any kind in this State.

Other and older states are alive to the situation and have passed laws prohibiting the killing of certain game, for a number of years, limiting the amount that each gun can kill during a day, and regulating the size of fire-arms used in killing the game, all of which we deem absolutely necessary if the fowl of the air and the beast of the forest is to be expected to afford recreation for the true sportsman.

Immediate, united and concerted action on the part of all persons interested in these objects is necessary to successfully accomplish something, and with that in view you are respectfully requested to appoint three delegates to meet with the delegates from all the gun clubs and sporting organizations in this State, at the rooms of the Olympic Gun Club, No. 23 Kearny street, at 8 P. M. on Monday evening, January 9, 1899. All persons in sympathy with this movement are invited to be present.

If any relief is to be obtained it must be sought through the next legislature which meets the first Monday of January, 1899.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Hunkers are numerous in the vicinity of Dotton's Landing.

W. Price bagged one dozen teal near Reclamation last Sunday.

The Belmont marshes have given a number of sportsmen chances for fine bags of canvasback and teal.

Duck shooting around the bay shores has been of a vastly improved order since the recent rain and storms.

The members of the Suisun Gun Club have had A No. 1 canvasback shooting on their preserve recently.

The southern and southeastern bay shores have been selected by the ducks as a place for feed and refuge this week.

A fine mounted specimen of the Mongolian pheasant is on exhibition in the window of Elsbrough, Golcher & Co.

English snipe can be found in great numbers at Goodyear's. Some nice bags have been made there in the past week.

Genial Jack Fanning, of Gold Dust fame, was a prominent figure in the gathering of shotgun experts at the recent Indianapolis tournament.

The Suisun marshes have been prolific of good duck shooting recently. The Pringle ponds have afforded great sport in canvasback shooting. The birds are plentiful at that spot.

On Monday the Empires will have a rousing house warming at their new structure on the Club grounds near Black Point. Some very nice bags of ducks were gathered at that point by the members last Sunday.

The shooting at Point Reyes last Saturday and Sunday was of an enticing nature to the sportsmen who were in that locality. Frank Vernon and a friend made a comfortable bag numbering seventy-eight teal and widgeon.

One of the interesting facts in the big lion hunt at De Beque, Col., is the fact that nearly all the hunters were armed with the small bore nitro rifles. The black powder rifle is pronounced to be very infrequent among the couple of hundred men who have been scouring the mountains in that part of Colorado.

Duck shooting on the east bay shore during Christmastide was first class at nearly all the favorite points frequented by sportsmen who favor those localities for their hunting trips. The indications for hunting are good for to-day and to-morrow at the same district. On Monday though, the bags made were not so good, the birds being shy by reason of the drubbing they received for two days previously.

But a small opportunity has been offered this season for Los Angeles sportsmen to test the qualities of their hunting dogs. Birds are scarce, and but little attempt is being made to hunt them. Even the market hunter is not finding the season nearly so profitable as in former years, when there was competition in the person of sportsmen who hunted for love of the sport and not for profit. The birds are scarce, and it is very hard to find them.

George Oblyer of Yuba City, one day last week started out with his shotgun and before the day was over had bagged 300 ducks. The birds laid close and would not take to flight during the storm and wind which prevailed at the time. His bristlets is a mighty hunter indeed.

Among the local sportsmen who hunted on the other side of the bay during the Christmas holidays we note results made as follows: At Alvarado, Sharp and Franzen, seventy-five sprig, teal and spooneys; Swan fifteen ditto, Shaw thirty-two and Klevesahl twenty of the same varieties. At Newark Schrock bagged twenty-seven ducks. The Bridges gave McLain brothers a bag counting fifty ducks.

A break in the levee on the Sargent track located near Lodi on White slough, and the consequent flooding of a portion of tule covered district, has developed a fine duck and snipe shooting ground. Jas. Maynard and Dr. E. N. Ayers will be the guest of Mr. Sargent, Jr. to-morrow. These sportsmen will take advantage of this opportunity and extend shot-gun compliments to the feathered invaders of the flooded district.

Saturday afternoon last, two Petalnma sportsmen, Will Stewart and John Hickey made a haol in wild geese at Reclamation. They bagged four large fat birds. The goose some time ago wounded by Stewart and kept as a decoy lured the birds to the hunters. One of these birds was only slightly wounded in the wings and will be kept alive and used as another decoy. The decoys even lure birds passing on the wing overhead of Stewart's backyard on Sixth street.

Our sportsmen can take warning from the words of ex-Warden McGuire of Oregon, who in his late report, mentions with regret the diminution in numbers of the Mongolian pheasant. The history of this bird in Oregon is well known. Protected, it increased with wonderful rapidity, and gave abundance for all. Pursued in and out of season by market shooters and insatiate sportsmen, it has begun to share the fate common to all overhunted game birds and the supply is rapidly being cut down. Mr. McGuire recommends a daily limit of twelve to twenty birds per gun. This is enough and it is more than probable action to this effect will be taken at the proper time.

Special representatives from the Northwestern game and fish states were present December 12th at the meeting of the Northwestern Game Warden's Association, which was held in the Great Northern Hotel, Chicago. Delegates were present from Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Indiana, Ohio, North and South Dakota for the purpose of ratifying the uniform game law resolutions which were presented at the meeting held last February, and which it is hoped will more effectually protect the fish and game in the states adjacent to the great lakes. With some revision the resolutions were adopted as originally drawn up and formulated into a bill which is to be presented to the next sessions of the Legislatures in the various states.

The bill provides for a closer union among the states in the interstate shipment of game and a uniform law for the simultaneous opening of the game season. Another principal feature is the prohibiting of cold-storage, which is said to be depleting the game supply more than any other cause.

Interest in trap-shooting is nuflagging among sportsmen in the shooting circles of the East. Concerning the disposition and status of the trophies held by the top notchers in shotgun ranks and the competitors for them a well-known sporting authority writing for the Commercial Advertiser has the following to say.

E. D. Fulford has challenged Rolla O. Heikes for the E. C. Cup and the world's championship at inanimate targets. There is no question as to whether Heikes will accept the challenge, for he is bound to do so or forfeit his claim to the title of champion which now belongs to him as holder of the above trophy. Unlike the live-bird section of trap-shooting, the inanimate target-shooters have but one championship trophy, viz., a silver cup donated by the American E. C. & Schultze Powder Company in the year 1896. It was competed for at Gutenberg, N. J., in one of the largest open competitions ever held in this country, and was finally won by Fred Gilbert of Spirit Lake, Ia. Since that time it has alternated between Heike's home at Dayton, O., and Gilbert's residence in Spirit Lake. It finally came to Dayton and was won by Heikee in an open competition held there last October. Strangely enough, Fulford was second for the cup and title of champion at the Gutenberg shoot in 1896 and again at Dayton last October he was second, tied with McMurchy. It will thus be seen that Fulford has some claims as a champion and should give Heikes a close race for the cup. It is expected that the match will be shot somewhere in the neighborhood of New York or Philadelphia, as Heikes has expressed his intention of coming East soon after the new year.

Talking about champions and championships, few shooters are, perhaps, aware that there are just now three separate Richmonds in the field, so far as live-bird shooting is concerned. In the first place, Heikes holds the cast iron medal, a trophy that Grimm, Budd, Gilbert and Elliston have tried to wrest from him during the last twelve months. Next there is Fred Gilbert, with the Du Pont trophy, and last of all comes J. A. R. Elliott of Kansas City, Mo., who won the Sportsmen's Review trophy from Gilbert recently in Chicago. The cast iron medal was born as a championship emblem in the fall of 1894, being shot for by Brewer, Carver, Elliott, Budd, Grimm, George Kleinman and others, the whole field comprising every prominent live-bird shot in the country at that time, with the possible exception of Fulford. Kleinman won the badge in a 100-bird race, with the score of 91, Brewer being second, with 89. The Du Pont trophy came to light at Baltimore, Md., in an open handicap shoot in the fall of 1895, and was won by Gilbert, who made his real debut at the traps on this occasion. It was contested for again in open competition at Chicago in the following summer, the winner being Bert Claridge of Baltimore. Since its first appearance the trophy has also been the subject of several individual competitions, Gilbert very generally being the successful contestant. The latest comer to the live-bird championship circles is a cup recently presented by a sporting publication in Cincinnati. Thus there are supposed to be three championship emblems afloat in the live-bird waters. Which is the true championship emblem is the question, the balance of opinion seeming to be in favor of the cast iron medal.

AMERICAN KENNEL CLUB MEETING.

Pacific Coast Interests.

The regular quarterly meeting of the American Kennel Club was held at its offices, 55 Liberty Street, New York, Thursday, December 8th, Vice-President Edward Brooks presiding. Those present were: Associate members, A. Clinton Wilmerding, H. K. Bloodgood, G. W. H. Ritchie, American Dachshund Club, Dr. S. C. Motschenbacher; American Pet Dog Club, S. C. Hodge; American Scottish Terrier Club, James L. Little; American Spaniel Club, M. A. Viti; Brunswick Fur Club, J. H. Van Dorn; Collie Club of America, James Watson; Gordon Setter Club of America, James B Blossom; Irish Terrier Club of America, S. Van Schaick; Mascoutah Kennel Club, C. F. R Drake; Metropolitan Kennel Club, Dr. H. T. Foote; Milwaukee Kennel and Pet Stock Association, James Mortimer; National Beagle Club, H. F. Schellhass; New England Kennel Club, Edward Brooks; Pointer Club of America, George Jarvis; San Francisco Kennel Club, C. B. Knocker.

That portion of Secretary Vredenburgh's submitted report which is of particular interest in regard to Coast kennel affairs and refers to the special committee, etc., is as follows:

"The minutes of the organization meeting of this committee will be presented to you at this meeting The California State Poultry and Kennel Club, the Santa Clara Valley Poultry and Kennel Club and the Californian Collie Club, having become members of an organization called the Pacific Kennel League, and having adopted rules for the holding of dog shows on the Pacific Coast district from those of the American Kennel Club, I, by direction of Vice-President Brooks, called upon said clubs, they being members in good standing of this club, to show cause why Section 1, Article IX. of our constitution should not be enforced I beg to submit replies from all of the clubs referred to, and such action as may be deemed expedient by the delegates is recommended at this meeting. Pending your action I have refrained from sending the clubs the usual bills for dues for the year 1899, which, under ordinary circumstances, are due and payable prior to January 1, 1899 In connection with the above matter I felt it my duty to advise you that letters have been received from prominent breeders and show officials on the coast recommending that no action be taken by the American Kennel Club against these clubs It is, however, a question of good taste and propriety on the part of these clubs to affiliate with an organization known to oppose the authority of this club while enjoying the benefits and privileges accorded its members. Possibly it might be advisable to refer the whole matter to our Pacific Coast committee."

After discussion on motion of Capt Knocker the matter of calling upon the clubs mentioned to show cause why they should not be dropped from A. K. C. membership was referred to the Pacific Coast special committee.

The report of the special committee of the meeting held in San Francisco, Thursday, November 10, 1898 and which was submitted and read by Secretary Vredenburg is as follows:

There were present: John E. De Ruyter, chairman; W. R. Cluness Jr., M. C. Allen, H. H. Carlton and J. P. Norman. Mr De Ruyter called the meeting to order and appointed Mr. Norman as secretary pro tem. The Chair then read the following letter:

Office of American Kennel Club, New York.

Mr John E. De Ruyter, San Francisco.

Dear Sir:—I have the honor to advise you that by power given Mr. Edward Brooks, as vice-president of the American Kennel Club, he has appointed a committee as chairman in connection with Messrs. H. H Carlton W R Cluness Jr., J. P Norman, G M Brevy, J W. Keen and M C. Allen, to constitute a special committee to care for the interests of said American Kennel Club in all matters concerning it on your Pacific Coast. Your committee should be called together and arrange for the holding of such sessions as may in its wisdom be deemed desirable. Will you kindly notify each member upon the authority given you by this letter, which will be your credentials.

A. P VREDENBURGH, Secy.

The above letter constituting the credentials of the individual members of the committee, as well as of the president, further credentials were waived.

Moved and seconded that the temporary officers be made permanent Adopted

Moved and seconded that the chairman be authorized to ascertain if Mr. Clarence Haight be willing to serve on committee in place of Mr J. W Keen, absent from California, and if so, to submit his name for approval to American Kennel Club. Carried.

Moved and seconded that:

Whereas This committee has been appointed to represent the interests of the American Kennel Club on this coast, and

Whereas, It appears that much dissatisfaction has existed on this coast, due to delays in correspondence with the American Kennel Club on account of geographical considerations, and to diversity of interests between the East and the far West, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee to act in order to be in a position to effectively perform the duties for which it had been elected, it is necessary that it be endowed with authority:

First To grant dates for holding shows, and to receive and hold temporarily (subject to the order of the American Kennel Club), all funds that may come into the possession of said committee in the discharge of its official functions.

Second. To decide protests from rulings of bench show committees or such other matters as may arise in connection with dogs, dog shows or field trials.

Third. To initiate proceedings or to entertain complaints against any person or club in the matter of frauds or other miscondoct perpetrated in connection with dogs, dog shows or field trials, and to inflict on such person or club, if found guilty, such penalty as would be within the province or power of the American Kennel Club.

Fourth. To adopt general measures not in conflict with the constitution and by-laws of the American Kennel Club, to protect the interests of said club and its Pacific Coast members, and to act as intermediary between the former and the latter.

Fifth All acts and decisions of this committee shall become effective, subject to appeal to the American Kennel Club, to be under the rules and regulations of that club, provided that, where such an appeal is not taken, the acts and decisions of this committee shall be final.

Sixth. Vacancies on this committee shall be filled by appointment of the American Kennel Club, the committe by majority vote to select candidate and submit his name for appointment to the American Kennel Club Such selection shall, however, not be binding on the American Kennel Club, and the latter shall at all times have the power to fill the vacancy, regardless of the selection of the majority of the committee.

Seventh. The expenses of this committee shall be borne by the American Kennel Club, and the secretary-treasurer of this committee shall render semi-annual statements of his receipts and disbursements to the American Kennel Club. Carried.

And be it further

Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that Article VIII. Section 4 of the constitution of the American Kennel Club be repealed at the next annual meeting of the club, and that a new section be substituted therefor in accordance with the recommendations contained in the foregoing resolution Carried.

And be it further

Resolved, That this committee be authorized by the American Kennel Club to adopt a constitution and by-laws, which, upon approval by said clubs shall become the governing law of this committee. Carried.

Attest: J. P. NORMAN, Secy.

This report has been referred to the Executive Board.

Sacramento Show.

On Wednesday next, January 4th, the annual exhibition of the California State Poultry and Kennel Club will open at Armory Hall in Sacramento and continue during the week. Secretary Matt Coffey has been indefatigable in his efforts to make the show successful. The list of entries is a flattering one and the management feels confident that the exhibition will be one of unusual merit.

In addition to the dogs and poultry there will be exhibited some Mongolian pheasants by Dr. W. Wood, of Sacramento, and guinea pigs and Belgian hares by J. Spencer and L. D. Romer, also of Sacramento county.

Armory Hall is believed to be a much better place for the show than the Exposition Building, as it is smaller, and visitors will not suffer from the cold, as they did in the Pavilion last year. The benching of the dogs will be better than heretofore, and many of the exhibitors will have their stalls handsomely decorated.

C. D. Nairn, of Oregon, will judge the dogs in the non-sporting classes, and J. W. Burrell will judge the setters, pointers, spaniels, etc. Charles Blom, of Sacramento, will pass on the merits of the poultry.

The entries closed on Friday, December 23d, but it is expected that some sent by mail on that day are yet to be received. Following is a classification of those already in the Secretary's hands.

Mastiffs	1	Cocker Spaniels	15
Great Danes	5	Irish Water Spaniels	1
St. Bernards	7	Collies	26
Pointers	4	Bull Terriers	2
English Setters	10	Fox Terriers	6
Irish setters	5	Dachshunds	1
Gordon setters	1	Italian Greyhounds	1
		Total	85

Three bitches with litters, numbering eighteen puppies, are in the above list.

Coursing at Los Angeles.

The Christmas coursing meet at Agricultural Park, Los Angeles, was evidently a successful event, the following graphic description of the sport is given by the Los Angeles Herald:

They came, they ran their dogs and they were conquered. That is the sad story of the San Francisco coursing men who brought down fifteen of the fleetest hounds from the northern country to take back the lion's share of the $600 offered in purses for the sixty-four dog stake run at Agricultural Park Sunday and Monday last. They will go back with a far better opinion of the dogs bred in the southland than they held before, and they will also return lighter in pocket, for they had the courage of their convictions and backed their animals with their cash. But it must be said that they are game losers and not a kick was heard against the judge's decisions. On Sunday the northerners had it all their way, apparently, defeating some of the pick of this section, among them the well-known Orpheum Lass, who was run down twice. But a different story was told Monday when they met dogs in condition.

The day last Monday was perfect, the hares speedy, the crowd the largest for weeks, about 2 500 in number, the hand in good fettle and all passed off in the best possible shape. Although the final course was not run until the falling shadows ensured the view of those in the stand, the crowd staid until the last to witness the victory of Kitty Scott, the local crack-a-jack, who carried off first money over all the San Francisco dogs Another local honor, who distinguished himself was Doncaster, from whom little had been expected. The meet was most successful from all points of view and gives promise of better things for lovers of sport in the near future.

Following is the score for the first round on Sunday:

Hattie beat Lady in Black, 16-0; Lassie Hayes beat Snug, 12-2; A B C beat His Freedom, 10-5; Fleetwings beat Rex, 13-5; Daisy Hamburg beat Midnight, 12-3; Kitty Scott beat Lady Agnes, 12-2; Occidental beat Little Cripple, 10-0; Hadiwist best Pip Steadman, 34-4; Mac's Melody beat Orpheum Lass, 5-2; Reliance beat Van Brulle, 7-2; Queen Kelp beat B B and B, 7-5; Nashville beat Dominie, 12-8; Lillie beat Lady Washington, 7-3; Glen Rosa beat Hard Shell, 12 2; Lady Hershel beat Winged Foot, 14-3; Premier best Happy Maid, 6-5; Gladiator beat Torpedo, 16-9; Reliance beat Los Funes, 12-1; Get There beat Revenge (after a tie) 7 2; The Ghost beat Clover Leaf, 11-3; Lady Wallace beat Emerald, 28-2; Doncaster beat Duty, 6-0; Mountain Belle beat Ormonde, 10-9; Enterprise beat Master Jack, 6-4; Lightfoot beat Orpheum Lass (above), 6-0; Rosewood beat Alice, 7-6; Rest Assured beat Fleetwood, 8-2; Fair Rosalind beat Mollie Bawn, 26-5; Uncle Sam beat Lady Napoleon, 22-1; Bo-Peep best Jean Valjean, 34-1; White Diamond beat Van Tralle, 8-2; Innocent Daisy beat Sprig o' the Hill, 7-4.

The second round was started early on Monday morning, resulting in the first ties being reached by 2:30 in the afternoon. By that time the crowd was all there and the sport was uninterrupted until nightfall,

The second round resulted: Lassie Hayes beat Hattie, A B C beat Fleet Wings, Kitty Scott best Daisy Hamburg, Hadiwist beat Occidental, Mac's Melody beat Reliable, Nashville beat Queen Kelp, Glen Rosa beat Lillie, Lady Hershel beat Premier, Gladiator beat Reliance, Get There beat The Ghost, Doncaster beat Lady Wallace, Mountain Belle beat Enterprise, Lightfoot beat Rosewood, Rest Assured beat Fair Rosaline, Uncle Sam beat Bo Peep, White Diamond beat Innocent Daisy.

When it got down to the third round the quality of the dogs became evident. The first pair to meet were A B C and Lassie Hayes, the latter winning by a score of 7 to 5. A B C led to the hare but missed picking it up and loafed the rest of the course. Kitty Scott went against Hadiwist and defeated him handily by 6 to 8. The betting was about even. It was a long race with a fast hare. Hadiwist's owner laid defeat to the fact that he had lost three toenails and one of the pads off his front feet in Sunday's coursing, thus disabling him for his his usual fast work.

Mac's Melody and Nashville, two white dog's blotched with black and brown, made the longest and perhaps the most interesting course of the day. The hare evidently knew his business and was long and fast. Mac's Melody was so far superior to his antagonist that there was only one dog in it all the way, but the hare was a regular Nancy Hanks and kept just a nose in advance. Up the field and down again they ran, then half way back, the kill being made in front of the clubhouse. The score tells the tale—52 to 4. The long run also tells the tale why Mac's Melody did not do better in the finals, he being worn out.

The rest of the runs were comparatively uneventful. Gladiator beat Glen Rosa, 7 to 1, Lady Herschel ran away from Get There by 12 to 2, Doncaster beat Mountain Belle with ease, 16 to 0, surprising the talent, who had Doncaster down for a "dub." Rest Assured and Lightfoot ran a close race, the former winning by 5½ to 3. White Diamond, a clear white dog from the north, walked away from Uncle Sam, a heavy local animal, who in making the kill on a wrench from the leading animal turned a complete somersault with the rabbit in his mouth. The score was given as 6 to 3.

Now the thing began to look interesting. There remained in it eight dogs, five of the northern crocks and three local representatives. But the local dogs had the wind and the legs. Kitty Scott simply walked away from Lassie Hayes by 5 to 9, picking up the hare after a short run. Betting was 3 to 1 on Kitty Scott. Mac's Melody met his Waterloo in Lady Herschel, being defeated, 5 to 3, in a short but fast chase. Betting started at Mac's Melody, 3½ to 2, but as the dogs went to the slip was 2 to 1 in favor of melody. The knowing ones were on the right side, however.

Gladiator was defeated by Doncaster, the local dog, surprising even his most sanguine admirers and beating the "black devil from the north" by 5 to 4, a close and hard race. It was only after a long, hard run that Rest Assured beat White Diamond by making the kill away up at the farther end of the field. This closed the second ties and left only four dogs in the running for first money.

Again did little Kitty Scott demonstrate her prowess, besting the crack-a-jack, Lady Herschel, by the score of 6 to 5. The score is close, but hardly tells the tale, as Kitty led to the hare and did some really fine work—which she had to do to win. Doncaster came to grief when he ran against Rest Assured. They had a long, hard course after a hare who was in a hurry to get somewhere. Rest Assured was the favorite in the betting at 3½ to 1.

This left Kitty Scott and Rest Assured to fight for first money. The dogs were given as long a rest as possible and twilight was falling when they went to the slips. Two hares were released before the dogs were sighted and slipped. In the gathering dusk it was impossible from the stand to see more than that Kitty was doing all the work. The hare was a speedy one and led the dogs a good chase all in the lower end of the field. Kitty was right after him, however, and made the kill in a grand stand finish with Rest Assured trailing some yards away. The grand stand nearly went wild when the game little animal was led from the field, and that the victory was a popular one was plainly to be seen. Betting started at 2½ to 1, went to 3½ to 2 and closed at 2 to 1, all in favor of Kitty Scott, who was strongly backed at the odds. This gave first and third money to local dogs, Rest Assured taking the second prize.

The prizes and winner were as follows: First, Kitty Scott, $110; second, Rest Assured, $65; third, Doncaster, $40; fourth Lady Herschel, $40; fifth to eighth inclusive, White Diamond Gladiator, Mac's Melody and Lassie Hayes, $25 each; the next eight received $12 50 each, and the next sixteen, $7 50 apiece. Besides this, special prizes of $7.50 were given to dogs beaten in the first course by the winner and by the runner-up; $5 for the same in second place.

Eastern Field Trial Performers.

That field trials are steadily growing in favor among sportsmen of the true stripe is shown by the increased interest this year in the Eastern trials. A larger attendance of spectators and an increased number of entries by the owners of one or two dogs is a strong testimonial to this. On this subject we quote The American Field, which says: Some time ago a writer tried to make out that the big kennels were forcing the smaller ones out of business, but a resume of this year's trials shows that not only is this not the fact, but that the little fellows have won the honors at nearly all the trials held this year. Only in four instances have the large kennels won first place, viz, Eldred Keonels with Tony's Gale, Champion Stakes, New Albany, Miss.; in January; Chimo Kennels with Octolan, All-Age Stake, Manitoba field trials, Morris, Kansas, in September; Charlottesville Field Trials Kennels with Pin Money, Subscription Stake Eastern field trials, November, and same kennels, same dog, Sweepstakes, Continental trials this month. Of the setter sires in this year's trials, Count Gladstone IV heads the list, with seven winners to his credit, Pin Money his best, she having won first in Subscription Stake, first in Sweepstake, two seconds in All-Age Stakes and a divided third in an All-

Age. Count Danstone is his next best performer, yet the latter's dam, Dan's Lady, should receive as much credit, if not more, of giving to this young dog his high qualities. Two of his other high class performers, Dave Earl and Albert Lang, are also out of Dan's Lady. Halberd, Lady Floss and Nancy Gladstone make up the seven. Mr. Madison's Rodfield is a close second to Count Gladstone as a sire of winners, he having sired the same number of performers, but we scarcely think anyone will deny us the right to say they have not shown as high-class work, although we feel free to say Rodfield's record stamps him as a sire of great individuality, inasmuch that out of his seven performers six of them were out of different dams. Antonio, now dead, comes third, with five winners to his credit, Joe Cummings by far the best of the five, if not the best dog of the season. Of the pointer sires Jingo leads with four, Young Jingo, the flower of the lot, and the best pointer dog run this year, whose running was really brilliant, and no one can point to him and say he wears a crown belonging to another. Lad of Jingo and Dot's Jingo, both out of Dot's Pearl, whose dam was the dam of Young Jingo, and Jingo Johnny, all good ones, make the four credited. Rip Rap, now dead, also sired four. Young Rip Rap, the best, who ran in hot one trial with (the unlucky number) thirteen starters, Ripsey, Ranee and Warlock, all good ones, making up the quartet. Several winners in the trials this year are also sires or dams of winners. Von Gull sired Chisholm and Alabama Girl; Harwick sired Uncle B and Colonel R; Dave Earl sired Ruth T E ol; Hal Pointer sired Doctor Tassia and Plain Sam, tha latter the sire of Sam's Lad, first in tha Ohio Derby; Tony's Gale sired Tony Roger's Gale and Lucy Rogers Queen Vic threw Ruth T Etol. The latter has the distinction of not only winning herself, but she is the daughter of a sire and dam both placed in trials this year. Dan's Lady leads as the dam of winners by a big percentage, she being the dam of Albert Lang, Dave Earl, Count Danstone and Uncle B.

The Bloodhound's Scenting Abilities.

Sir Charles Legards' report, in the November number of the English Kennel Gazette, of the recent bloodhound trials in England, is interesting to the extent that the point made as to the superiority of the bloodbound over the tarrier in distinguishing scents is shown in tha following lines:

The course which was selected for tha trials was a shorter one than some people would have desired, but the time was limited. If courses of several miles had been arranged, the runners must have started long before the judge and spectators arrived on the scene, consequently neither the judge nor the spectators could have told whether the hounds ran the scent accurately and strictly in the trial. As it was, however, when the man (a perfect stranger to each hound) ran from a point unknown to the hound, and every spectator could follow nearly every step tha hunted man took, every one could see the line of the hound or hounds, and observe the absolute accuracy which was followed and that was in my opinion the great success of tha trials. When the hound or hounds were cast for the scent, and the scent was hit off, the hound or hounds in nearly every case hunted their quarry splendidly. The ground was dry as a bone, the sun was hot, there was no wind to help tha hounds and yet they followed the trail splendidly. I had several land marks to guide my eye (with the aid of powerful field glasses) in the shape of stacks of peat and large grey moor stones and bits of green bracken, and tha way most of tha hounds passed each of these landmarks, exactly in the footsteps of the man they were hunting, proved to me their value in hunting a man. If a hound got off the scent, it cast itself as beautifully as any other hound could do, and better than most, first one way and then another, until it hit off tha trail again.

In one instance a runners' straw hat was blown off, and he had to run after it. When the hound came to that spot, it checked, and ran the ring tha runner had run after his hat. In two or three instances when hounds, after nearly hunting up to their man, turned, and ran heel, I feel convinced that it was because they saw their quarry and know they had accomplished their task, and wished then to return to their owners.

I should like to have seen a fresh man cross tha line of the run man in these trials; for having seen that done, and the hounds simply check where the fresh scent came in, and then run it for a hundred yards or so, and, finding it was not that of tha man they were on, cast themselves, and get on to the real scent, would have proved a distinct object lesson, that bloodhounds can and do distinguish between the original scent and a fresh scent, which no other hound can do.

And that is the whole point. I heard a man behind me say, 'Why, my terrier would follow me like that.' I have no doubt it would, but if he asked his terrier to follow a strange man, the terrier would not do so, but immediately try and find a rabbit or a rat.

In deciding, in my humble judgment, which hound hunted the best, I did not decide by the time any hound took, but I decided in favor of the hounds which hunted the whole trail best without checking, and those which, if they checked, recovered the scent tha best.

It is stated that bloodhounds can be of no use in towns, because so many people would cross the scent, but it must be remembered that a murder is generally committed in the dead of night, and if tha policeman who first discovers it could bring a bloodhound to the spot, tha hound might easily take up the scent and carry it far enough to be of great assistance in tracking the criminal, and in tha country I firmly believe the trade of robbers and poachers would nearly cease to exist if a couple of bloodhounds were known to be near at hand.

Standards.

IRISH WATER SPANIEL (adopted by the American Spaniel Club). The head is by no means long, with very little brow, but moderately wide. It is covered with curls, rather long and more open than those of the body, nearly to the eyes, but not so as to be wigged like tha poodle. The face and eyes are very peculiar. Face very long and quite bare of curl; the hair being short and smooth though not glossy; nose broad, and nostrils well developed; teeth strong and level; eyes small and set, almost flush, without eyebrows. The topknot is a characteristic of the true breed, and is estimated accordingly. It should fall between and over the eyes in a peaked form. The ears are long, the leather extending, when drawn forward, a little beyond the nose, and the curls with which they are clothed two or three inches beyond The whole of the ears are thickly covered with curls, which gradually lengthen toward the tips.

Chest and shoulders—There is nothing remarkable about these points, which must, nevertheless, be of sufficient dimensions and muscularity. The chest is small compared with most breeds of similar substance.

The back and quarters also have no peculiarity, but the stifles are almost always straight, giving an appearance of legginess.

Legs and Feet—The legs should be straight, and the feet large but strong, the toes are somewhat open, and covered with short crisp curls. In all dogs of this breed the legs are thickly covered with short curls, slightly pendant behind and at the sides, and some have them all round, hanging in ringlets for some time before the annual shedding. No feather like that of a setter should be shown. The front of the hindlegs below the hocks is always bare. The tail is very thick at the root, where it is clothed with very short hair, beyond the root, however, the hair is perfectly short, so as to look as if the tail had been clipped (which it sometimes fraudulently is at shows), but the natural bareness of the tail is a true characteristic of the breed.

The coat is composed of short curls of hair, not woolly, which betrays the poodle cross. A soft, flossy coat is objected to as indicative of an admixture with some of the land spaniels.

The color must be pure liver without white; but, as in other breeds, a white toe will occasionally appear with the best bred litter. The symmetry of this dog is not great.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The recent bench shows at Joliet, Ill., and Cleveland, O., were very successful shows.

The prospects for a bench show, under A. K. C. rules, to be held in Tacoma, are more than assured.

The New Orleans Fox Terrier Club and the Joliet Kennel Club are now members of the American Kennel Club.

A meeting of the A. K. C. special committee for the Pacific Coast will be held on Thursday evening, January 5th, 1899.

J. M. Coleman, of Petaluma, has just lost, by death, a fine bulldog bitch who was in whelp to his bench show winner Shaun C.

Mr. A. P. Bagley is the A. K. C. representative of the St. Bernard Club of California. E. M. Oldham represents the St. Bernard Club of America.

Mr. R. de B. Lopez reports that four puppies, two dogs and two bitches, by Warren Sage out of Creole, are as promising a quartette of fox terriers as have been seen at the Merriwa Kennels for some time past.

We note, with a regret that will find response among Coast fanciers, that Mr. E. M. O'dham has been seriously ill and confined to hospital treatment recently. At last advices we hear that he is on the road to recovery again.

Ed Attridge, who has been so successful with Yorkshire terriers, finds time to look after bull terriers. His Teddy, by Woodcote, Venom out of Rene, is a beautiful specimen of the breed. This dog is a full brother to Rastus. Teddy will be a strong card in the bench competition.

There was some talk of holding a bench show in Los Angeles during the early spring, but nothing definite has been done in the matter. C. A. Summer said last week that he had not given up hopes of the show, but tha interest at present is not so enthusiastic as could be wished.

At the Cleveland show, entries from some of the best kennels in the country were seen on the bench. Frank J. Gould's kennel of St. Bernards were shown in fine condition. Marvelcroft, Mr. Gould's latest importation, is said to be one of the finest bitches ever shown. She easily won first and special for best St Bernard in the show. Cleveland ranks high as a St. Bernard show city.

The Congregational church of Lodi looks with scowling eye, and well they may, on people who attend the Sunday coursing matches there. The church recently passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, It is the duty of every citizen to guard his town from everything which would make it an unfit place in which to rear his family; be it therefore

"Resolved, That we residents of Lodi, protest against the so-called sport of coursing which has recently come among us. We regard it as dangerous to our town, fostering gambling, drinking and kindred evils, setting before our young people an example which can only result in their moral deterioration, reflecting upon the good name of our town and hindering its development.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be printed in our local and Stockton papers."

The official list of judges and the breeds they will adjudicate at the coming bench show of the Westminster Kennel Club are as follows: Miss A. M. Whitney, for St Bernards and Newfoundlands; John Davidson, for Bloodhounds, Deerhounds, Greyhounds, Foxhounds, Chesapeake Bay Dogs, Pointers and Setters; R. F. Mayhew, for Mastiffs, Collies, Old English Sheep Dogs, Bull Terriers, Fox Terriers and Airedale Terriers; J. Blackburn Miller, for Great Danes; E. L. Krans, for Russian Wolf Hounds (Borzois); H. K. Bloodgood, for Sporting Spaniels; John H. Matthews, for Bull Dogs; John R. Buchan, for French Bull Dogs; F. G. Davis, for Boston Terriers; Geo B Post, Jr., for Beagles; G. Muss Arnoldt, for Dachshunds and Basset Hounds; O W. Donner, for Irish Terriers; Dr M. H Cryer, for Dalmatians, Poodles, all Terriers (except Bull, Airedale, Fox and Irish), Pugs, Schipperkes, Pommaranians, Italian Greyhounds, Whippets and Miscellaneous.

Prof. Musk Sack of the Coyote Chronicle (A Journal of Revilation) is ailing again. Squatt's Blatant Dog Blemishes, concerning the virtues of which he prates so much about, should afford him temporary relief. The vermifoga dope is the stuff, me boy.

As a watch dog the mastiff ranks high. In attacking intruders and evil-doers they are not ferocious. They have a trick of knocking them down and holding their advantage by significant growls until called off. They will seldom bite, even under severe provocation. As a guard for those living in isolated localities and for the protection of women and children this breed is without a peer; they are surely the sturdy and faithful watchman of the home.
